THANKSGIVING DECORATIONS.

Table Pieces.

Usually the most profitable and practical part of Thanksgiving decorative work is that of the table pieces. Some demands may be made for fruit decorations exclusively, and it is well to have a few plans in mind for these, and also to suggest the use of green and flowers or blooming plants with fruit.

Dinner table decorations, of course, will be the most called for. Mums are naturally the Thanksgiving flower, and it is often no easy proposition to use a good quality of mums conveniently and gracefully on a dinner table. The principal difficulty is the leng tem. One is often tempted to rule t ong, large mums out of medium and small sized decorations on this count. If they are used high above the eye line, they must be carefully selected as to gracefulness of stem and sparsely placed in slender vases. When so used, the diners are sure to lose some of the beauty of the flowers after being seated, much as they may enjoy the view upon entering the dining room.

A Low Decoration in Mums.

So, while the beauty of stem and foliage may be preserved in tall vases, we must make opportunities for showing the faces of the magnificent flowers. There are several ways of accomplishing this. Only a few kinds of mums lie gracefully upon a flat surface. There are a few of the incurved ones, whose stems happen to be more or less bent off a straight line, which will fall into easy curves if a little pad of green be placed under the stem near the head, to raise it slightly from the unyielding surface of the table. Let several lines of these mums start from the center and take their direction toward the end of the table. Let the lines be connected in theory, but really broken here and there. Starting from the vase as a center, trail a sash of wide satin ribbon of green, to correspond with the foliage, or some color which blends with the color of the mums used. Let the ribbon wave easily under the loose mums and end near the extremities of the table. Finish by gathering the ends of the sash into a pucker, and draw a mum flower into the puff. Scatter a few fern fronds connectedly with the main lines of the decorations and about the base of the vase.

Fruit and Flowers Together.

The Thanksgiving season affords a good excuse for using fruit and flowers together. For a high piece, fill a large punch bowl with medium length mums and ferns. The easiest way to hold them in place is to fill with sphagnum, after lining the bowl with green if it be of glass, and stemming as for basket work. Hang clusters of grapes around the edge and trail with some loose mums and ferns down to and around the base of the bowl. For a long table have a series of bowls at intervals, with connection of fruit and flowers. Heliotrope or yellow mums, with Farleyense ferns and grapes, make charming combinations. For a daintier table use a lower bowl or basket, filled with violets, as a center. On the table tie clusters of violet cord, attached to tiny bunches of violets and clusters of grapes, with some light green foliage to develop the color. Violets and grapes can also be relieved by the use of a delicate, warm pink, like Carnot roses, Golden Gate or Uncle John.

If you want to use apples, select a twig or bark basket of low plaque style and high handle. Put the fruit in loosely with fern leaves and cosmos or medium sized mums. Other fruits in yellow will combine with Bonnaffon or Golden Wedding mums. For a long table use an oblong birch box and fill with adiantums and brilliantly colored fruit. A plant is worth dozens of cut leaves.

For window decorations use some of the foregoing on an enlarged scale.

Church Decorations.

From the time decorations were known for this occasion, church rostrums have been loaded with pumpkins, sheaves of wheat, corn and fruits, the more kinds the merrier. Any of these are good, if used with some discrimination. One kind, with flowers, is sufficient for a single occasion. Use more flowers and foliage than fruit or vegetables. For instance, use wheat with pink mums, and abundance of green. Have the sheaves full and loose and the mums bound in with the wheat. With grapes use festoons of green, with a fancy basket of grapes suspended from each and a strikingly tall vase or basket of yellow mums flanking each end of the platform. If a lower front decoration is desired, outline the platform with Boston ferns, with mums interspersed.

A Thanksgiving Gift—Fruits and Flowers—Arranged by Charles Henry Fox.

Corn stalks stacked up in the style of a wigwam, with dark red and old gold mums emerging from the top, will display historical interest and novelty of arrangement. Gertrude Blair.

RAPID DELIVERY.

The accompanying illustration shows the special delivery operated by R. A. Latham, Minneapolis, who finds the motorcycle the most convenient and economical form of quick delivery he ever has tried. The carrier is large enough so that a number of boxes can be carried for ordinary delivery purposes, or so that a large design can be carried if desired.

Every retailer finds himself frequently confronted with the necessity for making deliveries on short notice, and with a machine of this kind he can gain time in the store for making up work, or can make deliveries on shortest notice.

SPRAY OF ROSES.

The spray, the favorite form of funeral design with Charles Henry Fox, the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, is happily illustrated by a bunch of white roses tied with a loose bow of broad white satin ribbon. Cibotium Schiedei may be used effectively as a background for this spray. Another method of carrying out the same idea would be to use selected blooms of Killarney roses, chosen from the paler shade, and tied with a large bow of soft pink ribbon. Phil.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

A GREAT SUCCESS.

The national flower show was favored with splendid weather for all its nine days and the attendance was good throughout. The gate receipts were greater than for any previous flower show ever held in America. The expenses were heavy, especially as it was the initial undertaking of the S. A. F. along this line, and about an even break is expected. The guarantors are sure to get their money back and there may be a small dividend.

The management was successful in keeping up interest toward the close of the show, by new features added each day.

Carnations.

Running the show for nine days made it necessary to replace most of the stock and there was a second showing of carnations staged November 12, which eclipsed the grand display staged November 9. Never in the history of flower shows in this country have so liberal premiums been awarded as for the carnations staged at this time. There was, for instance, a premium of $100 for the best 100 carnations, and $25 for the best 100 blooms staged by a grower operating not over 25,000 feet of glass. These premiums naturally brought out the best stock that could be produced, and better quality never was shown at this date. There were eight entries for the $100 prize. Premiums of $50, $40 and $30 were offered for the best display of carnations, but this brought out only two entries. There were ten entries for the best fifty blooms of White Enchantress and nine of Victory.

The showing of novelties, while it did not include so many varieties as on the first day the carnations were staged, brought out some good vases. The O. P. Bassett stood up well and the Mrs. J. C. Vaughan made a favorable impression. President Taft was in good shape and attracts by its form as well as its color. F. Dorner & Sons showed a fine vase of Delight, their new light pink. It is not a large flower, but of bright color, and a good many growers think its commercial possibilities are great. W. A. Harkett, Dubuque, Ia., showed a good vase of a pink sport of Rose-pink Enchantress.

The awards were as follows:

Display of carnations, quality, variety and quantity to be considered, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first with fourteen vases, about fifty flowers of each variety; Chicago Carnation Co. second with sixteen varieties; two entries.

Vase assorted carnations, Chicago Carnation Co. first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second; five entries.

Not less than twenty-five blooms, any variety in commerce, grown in houses warmed by hot water, Nick Zweifel first with Enchantress; nine entries.

Fifty Sarah Hill, C. C. Pollworth Co. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second; four entries.

Fifty Lawson-Enchantress, Chicago Carnation Co. first, C. C. Pollworth Co. second; three entries.

Fifty Victory, C. C. Pollworth Co. first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second, E. G. Hill Co. third; nine entries.

Fifty White Enchantress, Chicago Carnation Co. first, E. G. Hill Co. second, Poehlmann Bros. Co. third; ten entries.

Fifty Winsor, Bassett & Washburn first, Nick Zweifel second, C. C. Pollworth Co. third; seven entries.

Fifty Defiance, Chicago Carnation Co. first; one entry.

Fifty Afterglow, E. G. Hill Co. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second, F. R. Pierson Co. third; four entries.

Fifty Winona, E. G. Hill Co. first, F. R. Pierson Co. second; two entries.

Best vase of 100 blooms, variety either not yet in commerce or not introduced to commerce prior to 1906, Chicago Carnation Co. first on White Perfection, Bassett & Washburn second on O. P. Bassett; eight entries.

One hundred blooms any variety in commerce, competition limited to those operating not over 25,000 square feet of glass, Mueller & Schroeder Co., Milwaukee, first on Enchantress.

Motorcycle Delivery of R. A. Latham, Minneapolis.

The Retailers' Display.

The retail section was one of the best in the history of recent shows. The booths were lacking, but in the competitive classes the retailers entered more freely than in recent years. The awards on table decorations for the first three days of the competition were stated in last week's issue. November 12 the awards went to the Butler Floral Co., the E. Wienhoeber Co., and W. J. Smyth. For each of four days premiums of $50, $40 and $30 were offered for these tables and there were six competitors each day.

The made-up work was staged November 12 and 13. This always is one of the most attractive features of the show and this year the work was of specially high character because liberal premiums were offered. For instance, $40 for a bride's bouquet, $50 for the best vase of chrysanthemums arranged for effect, and others in proportion. There was good competition, making a larger display than usual, and all the work was good. The awards were as follows:

Vase of not less than 200 roses, American Beauty excluded, not less than five varieties, arranged for effect, W. J. Smyth first, A. Lange second, Schiller estate third; three entries.

One bride's and two bridesmaid's bouquets, John Mangel first, Ida Meyer second, Butler Floral Co. third; four entries.

Bride's bouquet of valley or valley and white orchids, A. Lange first, W. J. Smyth second, Butler Floral Co. third; four entries.

Basket of chrysanthemums, pompon or single varieties, Schiller estate first, W. J. Smyth second, Butler Floral Co. third; three entries.

Vase of chrysanthemums arranged for effect, A. Lange first, W. J. Smyth second, Schiller estate third; four entries.

Floral arrangement, the main feature being roses, A. Lange first.

Basket or hamper, the main feature being roses, the premium divided between D. A. Robertson and A. Lange.

Basket of carnations, Butler Floral Co. first.

Basket of mixed flowers, R. Jahn first.

Foliage and Decorative Plants.

Best plant not yet an article of commerce, W. A. Manda first, gold medal for Polypodium Mandaianum.

Foliage plant never before exhibited previous to this show, W. A. Manda first on Kentia Mandaiana.

Best foliage plant not yet in commerce, W. A. Manda first on Dracæna Black Beauty Improved.

Nepenthes, W. A. Manda first.

Five fancy caladiums, W. A. Manda first, E. G. Uihlein second.

Miscellaneous Awards.

Display of lily of the valley, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, H. N. Bruns second, Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, special mention.

Display of not less than 600 violets, F. R. Gillman, Rhinebeck, N. Y., first, staged by W. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Steven Burns, Rhinebeck, N. Y., staged by Vaughan & Sperry, Chicago; Butler Floral Co. special mention.

Display of cut lilies, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first; Erie Floral Co., Erie, Pa., second.

Collection of pansy flowers, G. Swenson, Elmhurst, Ill., first.

Twelve stalks longiflorum lilies, Bassett & Washburn first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.

Display of vegetables, E. M. Barton first.

W. A. Manda won his own premium offered for the exhibitor taking the most prizes for pot plants.

Special premium to the grower winning the greatest number of prizes, competition limited to those using hot water, to W. A. Manda.

Guarantors' Sweepstakes to exhibitor taking the largest number of prizes of all classes, to W. A. Manda.

Funeral Spray of Roses.

Special Awards.

The special awards were as follows:

M. Calvat, Grenoble, France, silver medal for seedling mums.

Howard Gould, Port Washington, N. Y., silver medal for Celosia Pride of Castle Gould.

A. Lange, Chicago, $25 for display of cut flower work made in the style of twenty-five years ago.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., $25 for Cyanophyllum magnificum.

Minor Mention.

A nine days' show is pretty long.

A. J. Strohlein, of H. A. Dreer's Riverton establishment, who is a frequent visitor to European exhibitions, spent a couple of days at the national show, and said it marked a decided advance in American exhibitions.

November 12, 215 visiting florists took the 9:30 a. m. train for Morton Grove, and made a thorough inspection of the plant of Poehlmann Bros. Co. Luncheon was served in the big packing room and the employees were on hand, as well as all the members of the firm and their wives, to extend the hospitalities to the visitors. The guides explained in detail the many special features of the establishment, which was in the finest of order throughout. The stock never looked better. Mayor Breitmeyer, of Detroit, and John N. May, of Summit, N. J., each spoke in appreciation of the company's hospitality and of the modern and progressive character of the establishment.

R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., has attended two great exhibitions this year—the centenary exhibition at Ghent, Belgium, and the national show at Chicago.

During the last two days of the show Bassett & Washburn maintained a table of their O. P. Bassett near the main entrance. The showing of flowers made on the exhibition table sent most of the growers to Hinsdale, to see it in the greenhouses.

William Toole, of Baraboo, Wis., made an entry for pansies, which he staged in shallow pans covered by wire netting, the stems of the pansies going through into the water in the pans.

George Field, of Washington, showed Cattleya gigas, which were remarkable for so late in the season. His cut blooms of orchids were all from stock grown for commercial purposes.

There was a good delegation at Joliet November 11 as the guests of the Chicago Carnation Co.

Wallace R. Pierson, of the A. N. Pierson Co., Cromwell, Conn., was one of the best satisfied men at the show. He said they have 5,000 plants of My Maryland rose and that they expect to sell close to 200,000 plants next spring. The way orders are coming in accounts for his cheerful expression.

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., was called home November 12 by a telegram announcing the death of his mother, who was an octogenarian and had been in feeble health for some time. She leaves three daughters, as well as three sons, all the latter in the trade: Frank R. Pierson, Paul M. Pierson and Lincoln Pierson, the latter the head of the Pierson U-Bar Co.

Frank Beu exhibited a vase of his pompon chrysanthemum named for Mrs. Beu, which for several years has been a good seller in the Chicago market.

Smith & Fetters, Cleveland, made an original display of cabbages, some of which had been expanded and decorated with fruits and flowers in imitation of ladies' hats; but, if truth must be told, while the ladies never failed to admire the arrangements, a great many thought they were table decorations.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. had a table of White Perfection November 14 that was fine. It will take a good carnation to displace this as an exhibition white.

There were three President Tafts at the show; one of them was the new red carnation of Scheiden & Schoos, another the pink begonia of J. A. Peterson, and the third the white chrysanthemum of Elmer D. Smith & Co.

The Schiller estate staged an attractive group of palms.

The plant growers "chipped in" a collection of plants for the children to vote to the most popular school. It was a good special feature.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

WASHINGTON.

November 12 the most successful flower show ever held in the nation's capital opened in the old Masonic Temple. Every exhibit in the main hall was in place, the walls and balcony done in southern smilax. The arrangement was, without doubt, the finest ever seen in the capital. Corinthian columns, banked on top with large Boston ferns and with southern smilax trailing half-way down the base, banked with ferns and cut blooms, were used in the general decoration.

In the center was the American Beauty fountain of Gude Bros. Co. This was fifteen feet high, with two ledges and an urn on top, with 16-foot base or basin effect. The vase on top held fifty 4-foot Beauties. The ledges were banked with Brynii ferns, which hid the vases in which Beauties were arranged to represent streams of water tumbling from one ledge to another. The basin had a coping of Piersoni fern. Four tall, slender glass vases held long Beauties spraying, as it were, on the fountain proper. This firm also showed a large wreath on an easel, made of the new green known as Mexican ivy, and a table banked with ferns and vases of cut flowers.

F. H. Kramer had a large table and showed the Queen Beatrice rose at its best; also his new yellow, Kramer's Pet. He also had a fine lot of mums and ferns at one end of the table. The public was invited to vote for the most popular lady, whose name should be chosen for his pink seedling.

George Cooke banked the base of one of the columns with a fine lot of yellow mums, Friendship, and ferns. He also had a table and mantel decoration. The first two days it was done in Beauties, the mantel banked with Farleyense. The last two days, by request, he put on the yellow umbrellas he used last year, as recently illustrated in the Review.

Mr. Marche, former decorator to the king and queen of England, had a Japanese table done in white mums and red bouvardia, with Japanese slippers on each corner, filled with bouvardia. He also showed a unique swinging crib, with two dolls covered with a blanket made of small white mums, valley and pink ribbon. He also showed a shower bouquet he calls the Queen Alexandra bouquet.

George Shaffer showed a fine vase of Beauties and a pretty table decoration done in cattleyas, valley and Farleyense. The mantel was banked with Farleyense, white mums, orchids and valley. He also showed a neat home wedding decoration and bride's shower bouquet of valley and orchids, with bridesmaid's shower of Enchantress carnations.

Mayberry & Hoover had a table arranged with Perrin mums, furnished complete with napery, candy and cake. On the two last days the table was done in Richmond roses and was especially effective and well arranged.

Z. D. Blackistone had a mantel and table done in yellow pompon mums with an old tree stump effect the two first days, and changed to a centerpiece made of oncidiums and Baby mums.

John R. Freeman had the two main banks in the large hall, and showed some exceptional specimen palms, araucarias and ferns. He also staged some fine mums and his own grown violets, which were the finest ever exhibited here.

W. W. Kimmel showed some handsome metal window boxes and urns filled with hardy stock. This exhibit was a credit to him, as it was a surprise to many in this line of work.

Vernon Ley showed a fine lot of ferns grown by Ley & Bickings.

Edward Schmidt exhibited the Kift berry and fern globe, and had singing canary birds hanging all through the building.

The Wm. H. Moon Co., Morristown, Pa., showed a fine lot of evergreens.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., exhibited a fine lot of Farleyense in 6-inch pots, also some fine Chadwick and Convention Hall mums.

Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., staged a vase of his pink carnation, Dorothy Gordon, which showed up fine.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, sent a vase of Mrs. Potter Palmer rose.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., sent a vase of President Taft, white mum.

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., sent a vase of Lynnwood Hall mums.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, staged a vase of Beauties and of Mrs. Jardine and My Maryland roses.

The Knopf Co., Richmond, Ind., showed some of its new carnations. A maroon named Ruby showed up well, as did Delight, a pink.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. showed a fine lot of the latest pompons. Samuel Simmonds, gardener for Mrs. L. Z. Leiter, had a table of the finest decorative plants ever seen here. The Botanic Gardens also showed fine specimens.

James Carberry composed the Washington Florists' Two Step, and played it Friday night and, by request, repeated it Saturday night.

The Baltimore florists came over in a body November 13.

The first day the attendance was 3,000. This was the only day complimentary tickets were issued. For the second day there were 1,500 paid admissions. Saturday it rained all morning and the balance of the day it snowed, and this put a crimp in the attendance. O. O.

PHILADELPHIA.

The fall exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall last week, opening on Tuesday evening, November 10, and continuing throughout the three following days. The exhibition varied from its predecessors in many important respects. The hardy varieties of chrysanthemums were more in evidence than ever before. So rapidly are they pushing to the front in the race for popular favor that they almost divide honors with the large flowered varieties, not only in cut blooms, but also in plants, though to a less degree. The specimen foliage plants and ferns for the fall exhibition are becoming greater favorites than ever.

But the crowning feature of the display was the orchid exhibit of C. J. Roebling, Trenton, N. J., James Goodier gardener. This exhibition was placed in the position of honor in the center of the hall. It comprised not only the commercial varieties of orchids, but many of those that are never seen in commerce, and some that are rarely seen outside of this collection. It was beautifully staged, foliage plants and ferns, notably Adiantum Farleyense, being combined with the orchids with telling effect. Grouped about this central display were the specimen plants of chrysanthemums in large pots, many of them showing a high degree of culture, but nearly all bearing evidence of the fact that the chrysanthemum season is earlier this year than for many years past, the blooms being a little past their best when the exhibition doors were opened.

David Ingram's exhibit of the best six varieties, which won first prize, comprised Mutual Friend, white; Mrs. Weeks, white; Mrs. Sinnott, pink; Golden Age, yellow; Mrs. Marshall, light pink; Georgiana Pitcher, yellow. Near this prize-winning group were a half dozen beautifully grown 6-inch pots of Old Gold from Wm. Robertson. On the right-hand side of the hall was a choice exhibit of orchids from Wm. Kleinheinz. Beyond this the smaller chrysanthemums, grown in 6-inch pots, single blooms, were interspersed with groups of foliage and flowering plants arranged for effect. The most striking of these groups was the exhibit of John H. Dodds, gardener to John Wanamaker, whose arrangement comprised the choicest and most graceful palms, ferns and orchids, just enough flowers being used among the delicate green leaves and fronds to give them richness, which should never deteriorate into vulgar profusion. The dark purple and brown of the orchids were confined to the lower and middle zone of the group; the whites, and especially the yellows, of the graceful oncidiums were clustered above.

In the right-hand corner was a choice exhibit of hardy outdoor chrysanthemums from the Overbrook nurseries of E. A. Stroud. On the opposite side was the silver medal exhibit of the crested Scottii fern, the Nephrolepis Scholzeli. Beyond this were prize-winning groups of magnificently grown ferns. The first prize, for a group of six, was won by Thomas Long, with Samuel Batchelor a close second.

The center was occupied by the Henry A. Dreer Co., with a most complete collection of ornamental foliage and stove plants. Among their varieties were choice specimens of Phœnix rupicola. Below these were Cocos Weddelliana, grown only as they can grow it, Pteris Childsii, Pteris Wilsoni, Kentia Wendlandiana, Pandanus Veitchii.

Opposite the stage, at the other end of the hall, were three collections of crotons in 6-inch pots, each plant exceptionally well grown. Wm. Robertson captured first with Craigii, Seedling, Queen Victoria, Golden Thread, Lonsdale Seedling, Reedii, Golden Beauty, Complete, Czar Alexander, Miss Swan. A magnificent specimen croton, Queen Victoria, as fine a plant of its kind as one could wish to see, was shown by John H. Dodds. It was in a 20-inch or 22-inch pot, was completely clothed with foliage and stood over six feet in height.

The foyer contained the cut chrysanthemums, the collections of Wm. Robertson and Samuel Batchelor, of twelve varieties, three blooms each, showing wonderful flowers. The former's varieties were George Hill, yellow; Mary Mason, red and yellow; Merza, white; Brutus, bronze; O. H. Broomhead, pink and white variegated; Glenview, bronze; Nellie Pockett, white; Mary Donnellan, superb yellow; Beatrice May, white; Miriam Hankey, lavender pink; George Haller, yellow. Samuel Batchelor's were Glenview, bronze; Mrs. Duckham, yellow; Dr. Enguehard, pink; Cheltoni, yellow; Wm. Duckham, pink; Colonel Appleton, very fine yellow; O. H. Broomhead, lavender pink; Merstham Crimson, crimson; Nellie Pockett, white; Morton F. Plant, pink; F. S. Vallis, canary yellow. Opposite these was the exhibit of the Robert Craig Co., comprising choice specimens of their cyclamens in various colors. Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, Otaheite oranges, Ficus pandurata, Nephrolepis Todeaoides, the London fern, and Croton Edwin Lonsdale, the coming crimson variety, were all there. Near these was a superb collection of begonias, Lorraine type. There were the original Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and the new variety Begonia Wm. K. Harris, both from the well-known grower whose name it bears, certificated by the society; Begonia Lorraine, Lonsdale type, from Girard College. These begonias alone were worth going a long way to see.

The extreme end of the foyer was devoted to the ferns and foliage plants and to the ornamental plants. It is really surprising how much good stock there was in this section of the show, dracænas from Thomas Long being beautifully grown. The same exhibitor also sent a half dozen Adiantum Farleyense of especial merit. More space might readily be devoted to these exhibits to advantage. They form what might be termed the brawn and sinew of the exhibition plants, that required knowledge and skill to produce.

On the Walnut street side were the hardy chrysanthemums. Wm. Kleinheinz captured a silver cup with twenty well grown varieties in twenty vases. The flowers were large and well colored.

The center of the stairway was filled by the Wm. H. Moon Co., with choice evergreens in boxes. On each side were specimen cut chrysanthemum blooms in vases. On each side of the stairway Thomas Meehan & Sons had choice evergreens in tubs and pots.

The lower hall contained some of the most wonderful ferns I have ever seen, and evidently as hard as nails to stand the draughts of air so well; of size and culture glorious to behold. The Henry F. Michell Co. displayed its bed of red, white and blue hyacinths, grass bordered, most effectively. The florists' supplies and implements at the rear of this exhibit were brightened by electric lights, the whole presenting a most attractive appearance. The Henry A. Dreer Co. showed bulbs and table ferneries filled with Cocos Weddelliana surrounded by pteris of several varieties. The richness of the silver and green was brought out strongly by a deep green cloth.

The average collections in the basement were of unusual merit, all varieties of vegetables being well represented. Two more collections of pompon chrysanthemums were seen in this room, one from Thomas Meehan & Sons, comprising something like sixty-five vases, covering a wide range of color. The flowers were large, the colors clear, and many of the varieties were of great merit. The Henry F. Michell Co. had forty varieties in fine form. This exhibit, which was beautifully arranged, was in charge of Charles A. Goudy. On the other side of the room Hosea Waterer had a full line of fine bulbs and of garden supplies. Next him, Henry A. Dreer Co. had a complete assortment of implements and supplies for greenhouse and garden, an assortment so complete that the visitor wondered at its scope. John S. Hay was in charge. Hick Bros., Wyomissing, near Reading, Pa., sent three of their seedling chrysanthemums. Robert Craig Co. received a certificate for Baby Margaret chrysanthemum, a white counterpart of the yellow Baby. W. H. Ritter had an interesting exhibit of succulents and cacti. Robert Kift showed his new berry bowl in all sizes, filled with growing ferns.

The feature of the rose table was the exhibit of Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa. It embraced White Killarney, seen for the first time here; Duchess of Wellington, another interesting novelty, a large flower of yellow color with sunset tints, and Mrs. Jardine, last year's well-known introduction. All were in fine form. Edward Towill, Roslyn, Pa., showed My Maryland that was a revelation to all who saw it. The balance of the exhibit was made up of standard varieties from the leading private gardeners.

The feature of the carnation tables was the six vases from the Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., and the Strafford Flower Farms, Strafford, Pa. The former included Wanoka, a dark crimson unknown here. The Joseph Heacock Co. staged a fine vase of Dorothy Gordon, described as somewhat similar to Rose-pink Enchantress. White Enchantress was the feature of the balance of the carnation table, from the private gardeners, the flowers being extremely large. All the other prominent varieties were shown in good form.

Edward Swayne, West Chester, Pa., sent a plant of a new violet with distinct foliage, the flowers of which were spoiled when seen.

The attendance was up to the average.

PHIL.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held at Churchill house, November 11 and 12. The show was one of the best ever held by the society, although the number of exhibitors was hardly up to that of former years. The quality of the flowers exhibited was unusually high and one of the noticeable features was the number of the newer varieties that were benched.

The setting up of the hall was under the direction of William Appleton and the effect was attractive and pleasing. At the end of the hall opposite the main entrance was an immense bank of ferns, palms and other decorative plants, while similar banks flanked either side of the approach to the hall. The vestibule leading from the outer doors to the hall was prettily decorated with potted stock, while great bunches of cut mums added to the general effect.

In the hall the great bunches of mums surpassed anything of the kind ever seen here. The principal exhibitors in the mums were John A. Macrae, F. Macrae & Sons, S. J. Goddard and Seth Borden. There was but one entry in the collection class of fifty blooms, that being Seth Borden's, although in the other special classes there were good entry lists. The prize winners, however, were practically confined to Seth Borden, John A. Macrae and F. Macrae & Sons.

In carnations John A. Macrae, S. J. Goddard, J. H. Cushing and J. Gerrard were the principal prize winners, Mr. Macrae leading.

The judges on chrysanthemums were Adin Hixon, secretary of the Worcester Horticultural Society; William H. Hill, of this city, and George McWilliam, of Whitinsville, Mass.

Samuel Kinder, of Bristol, exhibited a new seedling crimson carnation that attracted much attention, as it was considered to be far ahead of Harry Fenn, running to the size of Enchantress.

George H. Walker had a fine show of dahlias, picked out of doors, for which he received a gratuity. W. H. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

The flower show, given by the New Orleans Horticultural Society at the Washington Artillery hall, was opened November 12. Owing to different causes, some florists did not prepare themselves in time to have large specimen plants of chrysanthemums and consequently the exhibit was a little weak on that line, but in cut flowers it surpassed all our previous exhibitions and was the most creditable that we ever had.

The entries for plants were made by many florists, the principal ones being the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., taking first prize in palms; Charles Eble second. The first prize for group of foliage and flowering plants, arranged for effect, went to the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co.; second to Mr. Kraake, gardener for Lawrence Fabacher. The prize for crotons was awarded to the same exhibitors, in the same order. The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. took the three first prizes for ferns, the second being divided between M. Cook's Sons and M. M. de Lapouyade. Abele Bros. were first in assorted and hardy palms. Group of araucarias, Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. first, M. Cook's Sons second. Special mention for group of flowering plants and sweet olive were given to M. Cook's Sons. A. Alost took a first prize with a hanging basket. A group of Phœnix Roebelenii, as rare plants as ever were seen, by Charles Eble, received second prize. U. J. Virgin had a display of assorted plants, not for competition. The J. Steckler Seed Co. exhibited seeds and garden implements. James A. Newsham had a display of orchids in bloom. Floral designs were arranged by Jos. Schindler & Co. and Charles Eble, Jos. Schindler & Co. taking the first prizes.

The ladies' judges for floral work were Mrs. O. H. Simpson, Mrs. Navra and Mrs. Jones.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, sent a specimen plant of chrysanthemums, which was received with a special mention. On chrysanthemum cut blooms the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. took ten first prizes and one second, H. Doescher two first and seven second, Abele Bros. one first and two second. On cut roses the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. had the largest display, and we may say of that part of the exhibit that the best feature of the whole show was the 100 American Beauty roses exhibited by the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. Not only did they compare favorably with any rose grown under glass anywhere else, for size, color or texture, but they are the results of a form of culture which has never before been attempted in New Orleans, and to H. Papworth is due the credit of its introduction into Louisiana.

T. G. Owen, of Columbus, Miss., sent three vases of roses, not for competition.

The management of the whole display was intrusted to E. Baker, who had a good group, arranged with good effect.

Owing to bad weather, the attendance has not been large, but, no doubt, the next two days will be better, and the success of our 1908 exhibition will be complete. M. M. L.

NEW YORK.

The American Institute show, which opened November 11, while, as usual, too crowded, was a fine show so far as quality was concerned, practically all of the big eastern growers contributing something. Such an exhibition and such an attendance is worthy of far larger quarters.

In the class for twenty-five flowers, one variety, long stems, Thomas W. Head, of Groton, Conn., was first, with splendid Miriam Hankey, W. Turner, of Oceanic, N. J., running a good second with W. R. Church.

Fifty flowers on short stems also fell to Mr. Head, while twenty varieties on short stems fell to Mr. Turner, Mr. Head second.

Ten varieties on short stems was won by D. Dunn, gardener to F. K. Sturgis, Lenox, Mass., with splendid competition.

Ten white, long stems, was won by W. Turner, with fine Merza, Harry Turner, gardener to Howard Gould, Port Washington, L. I., being second, with fine Mrs. D. V. West.

Ten pink also went to W. Turner, with Hankey, Thomas W. Head being second, with the same variety.

Ten yellow went to W. Turner, with fine Appleton, second to Harry Turner, with the same variety.

Ten crimson was won by Harry Turner, with Mrs. Partridge, and ten in ten varieties by Jos. Kennedy, gardener to Mrs. W. E. Strong, Seabright, N. J.

Six white was won by W. Turner, with Merza, and six pink, with Hankey.

Six yellow was won by Thos. W. Head, with a grand lot of Mrs. W. Duckham, and six crimson by Harry Turner.

Six bronze was won by W. Turner, with Glenview.

Six incurved white went to Frank Melne, gardener to E. H. Weatherbee, Mamaroneck, N. Y., with May Seddon.

Six incurved yellow was won by Thos. W. Head, with Appleton.

Six incurved pink went to Jos. Kennedy, Seabright, N. J., and six reflexed yellow to Thos. W. Head.

Six Japanese reflexed was won by Jas. Fraser, Morristown, N. J., with splendid Morton F. Plant, H. Turner being second with the same variety.

The anemone section was well contested, Geo. H. Hale, W. W. Kennedy, Oscar Carlson and A. McKenzie being the principal winners.

In hardy pompons and singles there were many exhibits, the prizes going to James Dowlen, W. H. Waite and E. H. Weatherbee.

In the specimen plants, which are always well shown here, Peter Duff had a clean sweep, getting first on specimen white, with a beautiful Lady Lydia; specimen pink, with Annie Laurie; any other color, with Brutus; standard white, with Mrs. Weeks; standard pink, with W. Duckham, and on standard yellow, with Mrs. R. Hooper Pearson. It is a pity Mr. Duff was not an exhibitor at the Chicago show, for his plants are always models of culture.

All the single-stem 6-inch classes fell to H. Turner, and the class for plants as grown for market to James Bell, Garrison, N. Y.

The group of foliage and flowering plants was won by Harry Turner, who made a beautiful display with orchids, Duckham chrysanthemums, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and other choice stock, the whole forming a beautiful picture.

In the orchid section Julius Roehrs Co. and Lager & Hurrell were splendidly represented, with the honors resting with the former.

The specimen palm was won by W. H. Waite, of Yonkers, and the specimen fern by Julius Roehrs Co.

In the rose classes L. A. Noe and W. H. Waite were chief prize-winners in the Beauty classes, and Wm. Inglis, Port Chester, N. Y., and Frank Melne, Mamaroneck, figured largely in the tea classes.

In the carnation classes F. R. Pierson was the largest winner, taking practically all the classes.

Exhibits staged not for competition included some 100 varieties of pompons from R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., and a splendid lot of palms and foliage plants from Julius Roehrs Co.

Chas. H. Totty made a big exhibit of singles and staged some fifteen new varieties of the big flowers. Pockett's Crimson was given a special certificate by the Institute, this making six certificates this remarkable variety has received, in addition to capturing the sweepstakes in the seedling classes at Chicago. Other novelties shown included Pockett's Surprise, Freda Bedford, C. H. Totty and Mrs. J. Hygate.

The New York growers have one more show, November 17 to 20, in which to display their goods, after which we will settle down to business for another year.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

Little Rock tried its first experiment in flower shows in 1907 and succeeded so well that a larger exhibition was planned for this year and an even better result secured, artistically, socially and financially, so that it now is assured that the event will be an annual one. The affair is really carried forward by Vestal & Son, Tipton & Hurst and the other Little Rock florists, Paul M. Palez acting as manager, but the commercial interests are kept carefully in the background in order that the society element included in the Arkansas State Floral Society may be brought to the front. The show is held in the banquet room of the Hotel Marion, a handsome hall that provides an ideal setting for the flowers. The social element turned out in full force and the show was graced by as well dressed a gathering as any held anywhere in the United States. Full dress was the rule rather than the exception each evening and dinner parties filled the hotel dining room, all tables being reserved some time in advance. The spirit of true southern hospitality prevailed.

C. M. Dickinson, Chicago, was the judge and the exhibitors included many well known northern growers. E. G. Hill Co., H. W. Buckbee, Elmer D. Smith, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Bassett & Washburn and others sent good stock. The awards were:

One hundred blooms of pink, white and yellow chrysanthemums, Tipton & Hurst first.

One hundred cut chrysanthemums, ten varieties, Vestal & Son first.

Fifty white mums, Vestal & Son first.

Fifty pink, Vestal & Son first.

Twenty-five blooms in variety, Elmer Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., first; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., second.

Twenty-five blooms one variety, E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., first; Vestal & Son second.

Twenty-five pink, E. G. Hill Co. first, H. W. Buckbee second.
Twenty-five yellow, Vestal & Son first, H. W. Buckbee second.
Twenty-five red, H. W. Buckbee first.
Twenty-five any other color, H. W. Buckbee first, Vestal & Son second.
The Glencoe Co., of Glencoe, Ill., took the first on a display of 500 double violets, and Edward Marquardt, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., took second.
Mrs. C. E. Ferguson, Little Rock, was first on hanging basket, Vestal & Son second.
Display of crotons, George Wittbold Co., Chicago, first.
Best palm, Vestal & Son first.
Best phœnix, Wittbold Co. first.
Boston fern, Mrs. O'Neal first, Hostetter & Geldmaker, Little Rock, second.
Asparagus plumosus, Hostetter & Geldmaker first.
Maidenhair fern, Vestal & Son first, Wittbold Co. second.
Orange plant in fruit and for rubber plant, Vestal & Son first.
Araucaria, Vestal & Son first, Wittbold Co. second.
Collection of chrysanthemums, six varieties, twelve blooms to the variety, Vestal & Son first. competition for this cup confined to the territory south of the Ohio and west of the Mississippi.
Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., first for display of cut orchids in variety, and also for display of growing orchids.
Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, the Hotel Marion trophy for display of cut roses in variety.
One hundred red carnations, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, E. H. Hunt, Chicago, second. Same awards for 100 Lawson.
One hundred Enchantress, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Heim Bros., Blue Island, Ill., second.
One hundred white carnations, Carl Neiman first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.
One hundred striped carnations, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, E. H. Hunt second.
Three hundred carnations, six varieties, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Heim Bros. second.
One hundred crimson carnations, E. H. Hunt first, Frank Schramm second.
Poehlmann Bros. Co. was first for general display of carnations, and E. H. Hunt second.
Fifty American Beauties, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, second.
Fifty Richmond, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Joy & Sons Co., Nashville, Tenn., second.
Fifty Brides, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first.
Fifty Bridesmaids, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, John Wolf, Savannah, Ga., second.
Fifty Potter Palmer and for fifty Killarney, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first. The same firm won on fifty Perle.
Fifty Rhea Reid, E. G. Hill Co. first.
Fifty Marshall Field, Peter Reinberg, Chicago, first.
Poehlmann Bros. Co. first for general display of cut roses, second going to Bassett & Washburn.
Fifty blooms Arkansas-grown mums, Vestal & Son first, J. U. Underwood, Levy, second.
Single varieties, Vestal & Son first, Mrs. Ramsey second.
Ten white mums, Vestal & Son first, Cottage Floral Co., Little Rock, second.
Ten pink mums, Vestal & Son first.
Ten yellow mums, Cottage Floral Co. first, Vestal & Son second.
Ten red, Tipton & Hurst first, Cottage Floral Co. second.
Ten blooms odd color, Tipton & Hurst first, Vestal & Son second.
Fifteen blooms in three white varieties, Vestal & Son first.
Fifteen blooms in three pink varieties, Tipton & Hurst first, Vestal & Son second.
Fifteen blooms in three yellow varieties, Vestal & Son first.
Fifteen crimson, Cottage Floral Co. first.
Fifteen blooms odd color, and for the best fifteen blooms, fifteen varieties, Vestal & Son first.
Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, took a novelty prize on a grafted chrysanthemum plant.
Collection of house plants, Cottage Floral Co. first, Hoekstra & Geldmaker, of Sweet Home, second.
Collection of chrysanthemums grown outdoors, J. U. Underwood, of Levy, first.
Collection of roses, chrysanthemums and other flowers grown outdoors, Tipton & Hurst first.
John Karstens, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was first for twenty-five blooms of a new rose, with Mrs. Jardine.

There was a section devoted only to amateurs, in which competition was close and in which much interest was taken.

LENOX, MASS.

At the recent exhibition of the Lenox Horticultural Society, October 28 and 29, the following new chrysanthemums, exhibited by Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., received certificates of merit: Merstham Blush, Chas. H. Totty, Merstham Crimson and Mrs. O. H. Kahn.

Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich., also exhibited Leslie Morrison, an immense flower; Frank Payne, Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. G. W. Pook, the first two named receiving certificates of merit.

E. Jenkins, Lenox, also received a certificate of merit for the new single white chrysanthemum, Anna. G. H. I.

ORANGE, N. J.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society held its fourteenth annual flower show November 13, at its assembly rooms in this city. The exhibits were up to the usual standard, which has given this body its just celebrity, and chrysanthemums, roses, carnations and orchids were in force. Among the trade contributions was an extensive exhibit of decorative pompon chrysanthemums from R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, Md., including some of their new introductions, which were peculiarly interesting from the fact that they comprised some of the new, fashionable colors in dry goods. They attracted considerable attention, being massed upon one table with three contrasting colors in a vase. Lager & Hurrell and the local trade were represented, and among the visitors were Mr. McTaggert, of Thorburn's, and W. E. Marshall, of New York.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Freesias.

If the earliest batch of freesias is growing on a shelf or light bench in a sunny house, where a night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees is maintained, it should be possible to get in a fair proportion for Christmas. A little extra effort to do this should be made, as holiday prices on this sweet bulbous flower are always about double what they are later.

Freesias need a lot of water at the root, and many growers do not give them nearly enough. The soil may appear moist on the surface when underneath it is dry. If the leaves hang down it is a sure sign they are too dry. Soak them well and notice next morning how much more rigid the foliage is. Manure water twice a week, now that the flats and pans are matted with roots, will strengthen the flower spikes.

Azaleas.

A few of the earlier azaleas are already coming into flower. They will be a little too early for Christmas, but at Thanksgiving there is always a nice little trade in flowering plants. As the flowers begin to expand, keep water off them. Rub out any young growths being made. These frequently come ahead of the flowers, particularly if forcing has been done in a warm and moist house.

Any other plants you may desire to have for Christmas should be started right away. There now remains only five weeks until that holiday and, with diminishing heat and light, forcing does not bring on the plants so rapidly as in the early spring, when the climatic conditions are reversed. Do not attempt any varieties which do not naturally flower early. Such sorts as Hexe, Charles Enke, Apollo, Deutsche Perle and Verveneana are among the best of the earlies.

Astilbes.

The roots of the astilbes, or spiræas, as they are still more popularly known, will arrive in a few days, some being already to hand. We always like to give these a thorough soaking in a tub of water on arrival, as many are badly dried out in transit, afterwards heeling them in the open until they have had one or two good freezings. If potted without freezing, they seem to start irregularly early in the season, although later in the winter the rest seems to answer just as well.

In the way of varieties, the old S. Japonica is inferior to such sorts as compacta multiflora, which can now be bought as cheaply as the older variety. Astilboides is also a beautiful variety, as well as Gladstone, which carries immense trusses of snow white flowers. The three last named spiræas take about ten days longer to force into bloom than the old Japonica. For selling as pot plants no customer would select the older sort, if any of the other three were offered.

The beautiful new pink spiræa, Queen Alexandra, is still rather high priced for the average commercial grower. It will pay, however, to try a few of them. Its charming peach-pink color always makes it a quick seller. This spiræa possesses extraordinary vigor, small clumps making splendid plants.

Antirrhinums.

Already some nice flower spikes are opening on the early antirrhinums. While the mum season lasts there is little sale of these, but now that it is passing, well grown spikes of popular colors will sell well. To secure really good spikes, such as are seen at the exhibitions or in the better class stores, requires considerable care. The number of stalks per plant must be limited to three or four and all other shoots rubbed off. It really pays better to get this number of big stalks rather than treble the number of smaller ones, if you are selling at wholesale. If retail trade will take the smaller sizes, it will be well to grow both grades.

Any space vacated by mums can now be utilized for some of the later antirrhinums. A night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees is ample. In a warmer house the plants grow spindly and the flowers lack substance.

Stevia.

With the passing of the mums, stevia, the cheaply grown but useful little flower, comes into season. It wants to be grown cool; anything clear of freezing will answer. To secure a longer succession, a few pots can be placed in a warmer house from time to time. For mixed bunches, as well as funeral work, Stevia serrata is one of the indispensables. The cooler it is grown the longer will the stalks keep fresh when cut.

Rambler Roses.

It will be necessary to get the ramblers under cover before severe weather sets in and breaks the pots. The canes will by this time have lost most of their foliage and be well ripened. Store them in a frame, cellar or pit, where they can be kept near the freezing point in winter. If the pots are protected with hay or straw it will be all the better if the temperature goes a few degrees below freezing. If you have omitted tying and potting up ramblers, do so without delay. It is poor policy to dig up and pot them just before forcing. Plants pot-grown all summer will always give better results than fall potted stock. Still, the latter, if done in October or early November, will produce nice plants.

Brief Reminders.

Are all roofs tight before severe weather strikes? See to it that any necessary glazing is done while climatic conditions are tolerable.

Keep hydrangeas somewhat on the dry side, where they can be just clear of freezing.

It is still rather too early to start any Van Thol or La Reine tulips. Let the shoots grow a little longer.

Keep Moschosma riparium in a carnation temperature to have it in nice bloom for Christmas.

Water the poinsettias carefully.. Remember that a loss of foliage resulting from a single day's neglect may largely reduce the value of your plants.

Plant pansies, double daisies and myosotis in a cool house for winter blooming.

Look over the smilax and Asparagus plumosus frequently, so that they do not become entangled.

It is better to use cold storage valley for forcing until the new year.

Do any banking around coldframes now, before the ground freezes solid. Strawy stable manure over leaves makes a warm covering.

Pack dahlia roots in boxes of dry sand. They will keep well in a dry, frostproof cellar, away from fire heat.

BOSTON.

The Market.

It cannot be said that any particular improvement has yet taken place in cut flower conditions. It is time for chrysanthemums to be easing off and Thanksgiving will see about the last of them, but even this does not act as a fillip to the market. All the late varieties of mums are now coming in except Mlle. Jeanne Nonin, which will be held back for Thanksgiving. Prices show no special change from a week ago. Roses are selling better than other flowers and are of fine quality. Carnations are still overabundant and, although the quality is high, a great many have to be moved at absurdly low prices.

There is no special call for Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites, both of which are arriving. A small lot of stevia has made its appearance, and callas are arriving in small lots. Lilies are exceptionally good and sweet peas are coming with much better stems. Lily of the valley is in fair demand, with no change in prices. Violets are becoming abundant, and move rather more slowly. There is a steady call for green goods of all kinds.

Plant trade is picking up a little, there being more call for palms and other decorative plants. Some nicely bloomed cyclamens and primulas are already coming in.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, November 17, attracted a large number of members and the attendance was the best seen at a November meeting. Eber Holmes, of the Montrose Greenhouses, gave a helpful paper on "What We Can Do to Improve Our Club." It contained much sound, common sense and excellent advice and was highly commended by those who joined in the resultant discussion. Under the new by-laws, nominations of officers for the coming year were this year made from the floor. The names to be voted on at the December meeting were as follows: For president, F. E. Palmer, Wm. Downs, Eber Holmes; vice-president, W. J. Kennedy, J. W. Duncan, Kenneth Finlayson; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, Edward Hatch; executive committee, E. P. M. Miller, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Robert Cameron, Peter Fisher, Wm. Sim, James Wheeler, Wilfred Wheeler, Wm. Robb.

Six new members were elected. The committee on affiliation with the Chrysanthemum Society of America reported adversely and the report was accepted. Mr. Farquhar announced that the landscape classes will start in a few days at 50 cents per member per night. The club voted $25 to assist the classes.

Exhibits included two good white seedling carnations from E. B. Beals, Springfield; several good seedlings from Peter Fisher; new carnations Pink Pearl and Splendor, from S. J. Reuter, which were promising and received honorable mention; My Maryland rose, also from S. J. Reuter, received a report of superior merit; Violet Baronne Rothschild, from S. W. Fletcher; two vases of roses from Montrose Greenhouses; Chrysanthemum Baby Margaret from Robert Craig Co., which received a report of merit; good Calanthe Veitchii and Primula obconica, from Duncan Finlayson; an excellent white sport from Eaton, from H. F. Woods, which received a report of merit.

In discussion on the talk by Eber Holmes, Wm. Downs, H. A. Stevens, D. Finlayson, K. Finlayson, Wilfred Wheeler, W. J. Kennedy, F. E. Palmer and M. A. Patten joined.

Refreshments were served, as usual.

Various Notes.

There was a rather small attendance at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, November 14, due, in large measure, to the absence of any contests for the various offices to be filled. The following officers were elected: President, S. M. Weld, third term; vice-president, Charles W. Parker; trustees for three years, W. M. Bowker, C. S. Sargent, Peter Fisher, Thomas Roland; delegate to State Board of Agriculture, Wilfred Wheeler; nominating committee, N. T. Kidder, Thomas J. Grey, George V. Fletcher, William Sim and William F. Thatcher. The sum of $5,000 was appropriated for prizes for the ensuing year.

The market was much stronger November 18; fewer flowers, more demand, higher prices.

Daniel Iliffe has bought a farm in South Weymouth.

Patrick Welch is suffering with a severe cold. His firm is now doing heavy shipping.

W. H. Elliott is marketing fine Bon Silene and Safrano from Madbury.

The fine group of Garza chrysanthemums, illustrated in last REVIEW, was staged at the late Boston show by Sidney Hoffman, and not Thomas E. Proctor, as stated in that issue. This group was one of the best features in the show.

If the next national flower show is held in the east, no city can give a finer display of the many spring blooming plants than Boston. Such a show would be much more varied and interesting than a fall exhibition, owing to the much greater wealth of flowering material in pots available.

J. T. Butterworth is right in the midst of his crop of Cattleya labiata, which is this season better than ever and meeting with a good sale.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, are cutting large quantities of Cattleya labiata and Oncidium Rogersii.

Local visitors to the Chicago national show were duly impressed with its magnitude, and are loud in praise of hospitalities extended during their visit.

William Walke, of Salem, has extra fine lots of Lorraine begonias, poinsettias and Harrisii lilies, in the culture of each of which he is successful.

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Trade.

The Dayton florists, taking everything into consideration, are not able to give a very glowing report as to the condition of last week's business. While it was not altogether dead, still we cannot boast. Several of our florists were attending the great national flower show in Chicago, and perhaps their absence accounted for these conditions. On Monday the prospects were somewhat encouraging, but trade for the remainder of the week dropped off considerably. There were a few large decorating jobs done by some of our florists, but stock was so plentiful that the quantity of flowers they consumed did not make much impression on the general state of affairs. Bright, warm weather prevails, bringing on good crops and first-class stock, and it seems a shame that the market should be so poor, and that such good stock has to go at a mere sacrifice.

Carnations are plentiful and stock could not be better. Roses, in size, color and foliage, are fine. Beauties are first-class, and there seems to be a better demand for them than would naturally be expected, with trade, in general, so dull.

White chrysanthemums are scarce, also the pink, but yellow are plentiful and they certainly are great. Callas and longiflorums are holding their place fairly well. Valley, one of the latest additions to the Dayton market, moves slowly, but better than was expected, while the call for violets is somewhat spasmodic. There is an abundance of smilax, but cut Sprengeri and plumosus are a little scarce.

Various Notes.

The city of Dayton saw its first snow storm of the season November 13. The storm, however, did not amount to much.

All of our florists who attended the flower show in Chicago have returned, and each expresses the same opinion, that the show was a grand success. None regret the time and money spent in seeing it. They also speak highly of the banquet and praise the various committees and their chairmen for the successful manner in which everything was conducted.

Taking a peep into the greenhouses of the Miami Floral Co., one sees a fine crop of longiflorums coming on, while there are others to follow as soon as the present crop is used. They are also cutting some fine valley and callas, for which, considering the present condition of trade, they find a fairly good market.

Warren G. Matthews, upon his return, brought back from the Chicago show a handsome specimen of chrysanthemum, containing 360 blossoms.

The Dayton Floral Co. had a large decoration last week at the Dayton Club, where 200 fancy chrysanthemums were used in decorating, besides palms, etc. The event was a banquet tendered to the traveling salesmen of the Lowe Bros. paint store, by their employers.

H. H. Ritter, who had anticipated attending the national flower show, was detained from going on account of three large decorating orders, which came in just in time to keep him at home. One of these decorations was for a large Masonic banquet, held in the Dayton Masonic Temple, where 800 Masons partook of the feast. Another was the decoration of the new café at the Algonquin hotel, which was artistically arranged with palms and cut flowers. The third was for a banquet at the Beckel House.

M. Anderson reports that since enlarging and improving his store, business has increased considerably.

Mrs. George Bartholomew spent a few days in Sycamore, Ill., last week, where she had a pleasant visit with relatives.

Mrs. Herbert Githens, daughter of Warren G. Matthews, accompanied her father to the Chicago flower show.

John Boehner says that business over in his section of town has been almost dead for the past two weeks, but he is in hopes the spell will soon break.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Young celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary November 12. Upon their return from their store in the evening, they found their home beautifully decorated and tables spread with the markets' best productions, while their home was filled with welcoming friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Young were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.

The Goetz Pottery Co. reports the pot business good at present.

George Bird, of Sidney, O., visited some of our local florists last week.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The Englishman's description of our climate, "One minute you are roasted and toasted, the next you are up to your blooming knees in snow," is not so much out of place, since only two weeks ago geraniums, salvia and alyssum were nicely in bloom in our garden and today the ground is covered by four inches of snow. Everyone, however, seems satisfied, for while they may not have wanted a change in politics, a change in the weather was looked for to improve business.

Business, however, started a few days ahead, and while it is scarcely enough to brag about, the commission houses all seemed to be better cleaned up than they have been for some weeks. Even chrysanthemums, which were a glut all the week, cleaned up at some price, and carnations showed a slight advance. There was, however, no scarcity of anything.

The retail shops are all making the most of the cheap flowers by keeping up a grand display and doing everything possible to entice people into their places, if only to look. Most of them, however, would purchase something, the low prices catching them.

Various Notes.

The Zieger Co. celebrated its first anniversary Saturday. The store room was beautifully decorated; and as business was good, Mr. Zieger was at his best. While last year was not a particularly good year for business, this firm has gotten a fair share of what has been going and now is satisfied that it is thoroughly established and ready for the better things which all believe are coming.

A. W. Smith, who has been advertising in the street cars for several years, has a novel card in at present, which reads as follows: "We get the highest price in the city for our violets and still we sell more than any other florist." This they backed up by a window display of violets and their own special violet boxes and ribbons, which was attractive enough to hold the people notwithstanding the snow and rain. Directly in the rear of the window, but in view of the street, was a dining table, set completely, with floral decorations, china, silverware and candies, which was the special attraction of the women, but the men did not pass it by.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, the only woman in the business in this city, is the only retailer who has not complained of bad business during the present depression. Since her vacation last summer, her trade has been such as to keep her better than busy.

W. C. Drewes, the Braddock florist, reports two new firms about to open in his town. They are all men without experience, but they see the money there is in it.

The Pittsburg delegation to the national flower show reports a splendid show and a good time. The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. won two prizes on carnations, but was unfortunate in not getting its chrysanthemums from the express company in time to stage for judging.

The Pittsburg Florist Exchange has been having fine Beauties.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. are still the valley people.

The McCallum Co. is showing white violets.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has been pushing chrysanthemums and carnations.

Frank Myers, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, and W. R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., stopped in the city on their way east.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., was looking up the trade here last week.

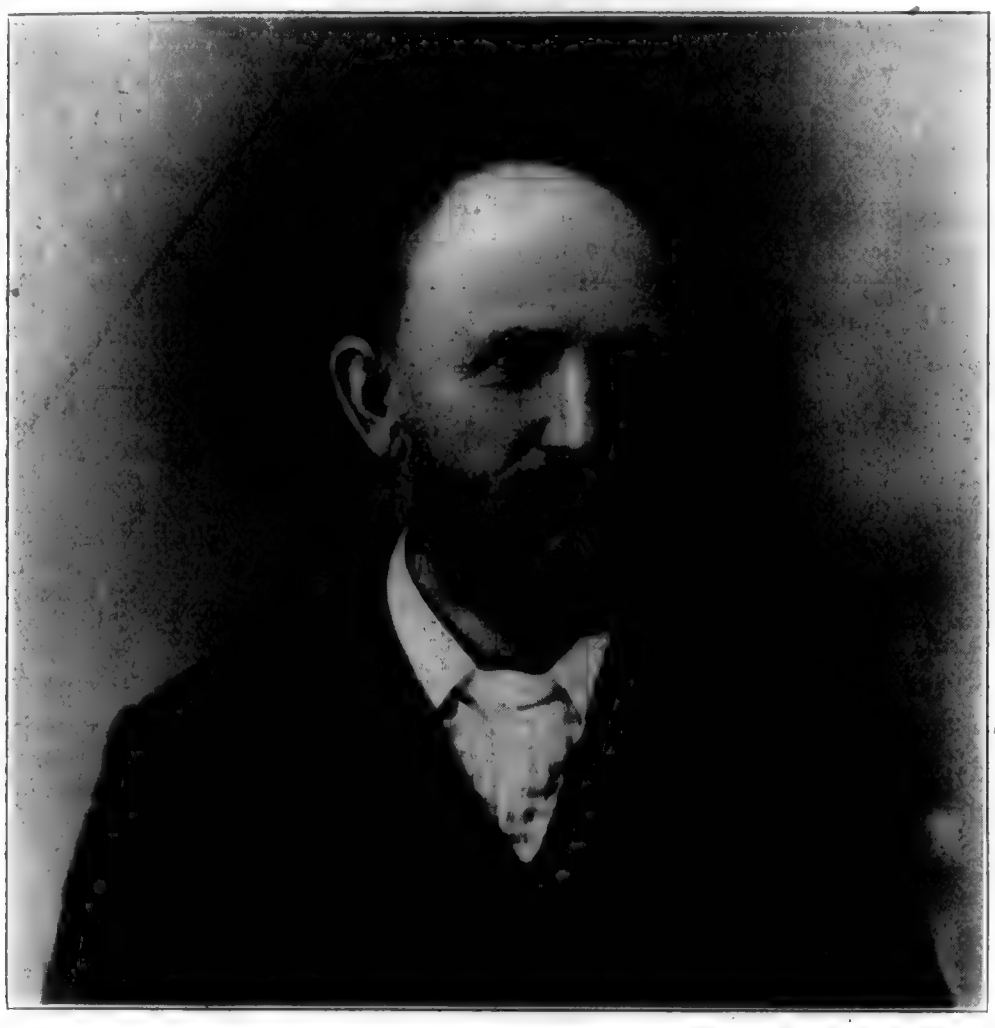
OBITUARY.



George M. Kellogg.

George M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo., who has been in feeble health for many months, died at midnight, November 15, of acute nephritis. The funeral was held November 17 from his late residence and was attended by many in the trade in his section.

George M. Kellogg was born in Westfield, Mass., April 16, 1838. He had been located at Pleasant Hill, Mo., for many years, where he originally was engaged in the dairying business, but early perceiving the development which was to come in the greenhouse industry, he started in a small way, conducting his greenhouses in connection with his other business enterprises. For many years everything that he undertook turned out to be exceptionally successful, and this applied to the greenhouse end of his business as well as to other branches. Rapid additions to the glass were the rule and now nearly 400,000 square feet are covered, there being in all some seventy greenhouses. A little over a year ago the establishment came into the public eye through the wrecking of one of the ranges by the most terrific boiler explosion which ever occurred in a greenhouse establishment. As an instance of Mr. Kellogg's great energy it may be stated that on the same morning that the accident occurred he bought boilers by telegraph, two carloads of glass, and made other arrangements for rebuilding. The plant was restored in record time.

Mr. Kellogg grew a full line of cut flowers and plants and did a large shipping business with the trade in the southwest, both from his greenhouses at Pleasant Hill and from his wholesale and retail store at 906 Grand avenue, Kansas City. The business will be carried on as the George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co.

Mr. Kellogg was taken ill in March with an attack of pneumonia, from which he never rallied. July 1 he went to a sanitarium at Battle Creek, where for ten days he appeared to gain rapidly, but it was found that his heart and lungs both were affected. He returned home and passed through a period of weeks of alternate rallies and sinking spells. It was his earnest determination to regain his health and resume business activities. He took great interest in all the affairs of the trade. He was a regular attendant at the S. A. F. conventions and at the big flower shows. He had some fifty-five men on the place and their welfare always was his interest. It was his practice to treat them to a quarterly dinner and he had worked out a profit-sharing plan, together with many other ideas for the general good. He was easily the leading citizen of Pleasant Hill, and his demise is regarded there as a public loss.

S. W. Flower.

Stevens W. Flower, president of the S. W. Flower Co., the Toledo grass seed merchants, died at 3 o'clock on the morning of November 13. He was taken with a congestive chill at 3 o'clock the afternoon before and sank rapidly after the attack.

Mr. Flower was 76 years of age and had been prominent in the commercial life of Toledo for forty years. Although he had practically retired as head of the commission house about ten years ago, leaving his nephew, C. S. Burge, in control, he kept in touch with business affairs and visited the office from time to time.

Mr. Flower was a philanthropist in the finest sense of the word, but his giving was so quiet and unostentatious that the world knew little of it. The notable exception to this was his gift to the Door of Hope four years ago, when he purchased the Sprague home and after fitting it up with the most modern conveniences and enlarging it gave it outright to the board of directors of that charity.

Mr. Flower was born in Clayton, Jefferson county, N. Y., August 21, 1832. He enlisted in the Tenth New York artillery at the outbreak of the Civil War and served until the close. When the war was over he located in Maumee, O., in September, 1865. He engaged in the milling business there with George W. Reynolds, and in 1868 removed to Toledo. He was married at Maumee in September, 1865, to Frances B. Reynolds, daughter of his business partner, George W. Reynolds. She died eleven years later.

In 1874 he was married to Miss Ellen Burge, of Maumee, and her death was a blow from which he never fully recovered.

Immediately after coming to Toledo Mr. Flower engaged in the grain and grass seed business of which he was so many years the head.

He was a member of St. Paul's M. E. church for many years, and Dr. R. D. Hollington, of St. Paul's, assisted Dr. T. N. Barkdull, a life-long friend, in the funeral service, which took place November 16.

Toledo Post, G. A. R., was the only organization apart from the church with which Mr. Flower was connected.

John A. Nisbet.

Stricken with apoplexy while riding up College Hill in an electric car on the evening of November 10, John A. Nisbet, one of the best known landscape gardeners and florists of Providence, R. I., fell dead from his seat. Mr. Nisbet had apparently been in his usual health during the day. He was born in Seekonk, Mass., in 1844 and when a boy worked on the old Elmgrove Farm. Much attention was devoted to flowers of all kinds, and to landscape gardening, and Mr. Nisbet, as a boy, showed particular aptitude for this line of work. Leaving the farm, he worked for several estates as florist and gardener and eventually entered business for himself. For many years he conducted greenhouses just outside of the city, but for the last few years had devoted himself to landscape work, although having charge of several of the estates of wealthy eastside residents. He married Miss Margaret McLane about thirty-five years ago. She survives him. There are no children.

James Lewis.

James Lewis died at his home on Algoma street, Oshkosh, Wis., November 7. He had been failing for some time, but was not seriously ill until about a week before his death. He was born in Herefordshire, England, in 1833. In 1873 he came to America with his first wife. He was for a number of years the manager of the greenhouses and gardens at the Northern State Hospital for the Insane. Since then he had been employed as florist by Edgar P. Sawyer. He was highly successful in his profession.

He is survived by his wife, Alletta Lewis, and the following daughters and sons: George Lewis, of Puyallup, Wash.; Dr. Alfred Lewis, of Valentine, Neb.; James Lewis, Jr., of Minneapolis; Mrs. Joseph La Pine, Mrs. Florence Hough, Mrs. Anna Goodland, Howard T. Lewis, Bessie and May Lewis.

Mrs. Daniel E. Gorman.

Mrs. Gorman, wife of Daniel E. Gorman, of Williamsport, Pa., passed peacefully away November 3, after a lingering and painful illness. Mrs. Gorman was a faithful helpmeet of her husband, and took active interest in their business, which in eight years has grown to a fairly good sized plant, consisting of some 40,000 square feet of glass. A woman of much energy, sterling character and many attractive qualities, her death is mourned by a large circle of friends. She is survived by her husband and an adopted daughter.

Joseph Bradford.

Joseph Bradford, a pioneer resident of Columbus, O., died Sunday, November 8, at his home, 26 South Garfield avenue, as the result of uremic poisoning. He had been confined for some time prior to his last illness. He was a well-known florist and an authority upon botany, but spent the last years of his life in other occupations. Seven children and a widow survive.

Will Greiner.

Will Greiner, of Bridgeport, O., was instantly killed November 6, in a runaway accident.

E. Leedham.

E. Leedham, the well-known bulb grower, died at his home in Santa Cruz, Cal., November 5, at the age of 80 years. He was a genial, kindly gentleman, as well as an expert in his profession, and his death is mourned by a wide circle of friends. Mr. Leedham was born in Leicestershire, England, but emigrated to Nova Scotia in his early manhood. Later he removed to California and lived for some years in San Luis Obispo county before making his home in Santa Cruz, sixteen years ago. He founded the business now conducted by the Leedham Bulb Co., and was its active manager till the time of his death.

STRATFORD, CONN.—Henry Meachen is making preparations for the erection of a greenhouse, to take the place of the one recently destroyed by fire.

NORTHBORO, MASS.—J. L. Moore, proprietor of the Northboro Dahlia and Gladiolus Gardens, says that orders are now over four times what they were at the same date last year, and that if the present volume of business keeps up long, he will be obliged to refuse wholesale orders, so as to protect retail and mail order trade, although his stock is more than doube last year's supply. His orders are largely from old customers, who prophesy a heavy trade in bulbs and general stock in the coming spring.

SPECIAL NOTICE

THANKSGIVING

Because, Thursday November 26, the day the Review is mailed, is a legal holiday, the issue for that week will go to press one day earlier than usual,

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 24

Advertisers and correspondents will please see that their matter reaches us not later than Tuesday morning, and earlier will be better.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

You can't get something for nothing, any more than you can sell something for less than it cost.

The white paper consumed in printing last week's Review weighed 7,236 pounds, or a little over three and one-half tons.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Work of the Committees.

New York, Nov. 11.—No. 1, light pink, Japanese incurved, exhibited by George Hale, Seabright, N. J., scored 85 points exhibition scale.

The name of the variety Golden Harvest, which was shown before the Philadelphia committee October 26, has been changed to Golden King.

David Fraser, Sec'y.

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI.

Herman Scholzel, a well known New Jersey grower, discovered a sport in his bench of Scottii fern two years ago, propagated it and named it Nephrolepis Scholzeli. It is the Scottii fern crested in the well known form of the crested sports of Boston. Mr. Scholzel disposed of his stock to the Henry A. Dreer Co., which has been exhibiting the fern at all the autumn flower shows. It has secured a long list of awards, including the Shaw gold medal for best new plant at St. Louis. It is illustrated on page 13.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society was held at the Coliseum, Chicago, Thursday evening, November 12. President Poehlmann occupied the chair, and among those present were Vice-president Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo; Secretary Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y.; ex-President Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.; Fred Burki, Pittsburg; W. R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Alex. Montgomery, Natick, Mass., and several others. The detail work of preparation for the Buffalo meeting and exhibition was up for consideration. The secretary reported that the society is for the first time free from debt and has a balance of $59.98 in the treasury. The annual report will shortly be issued.

CHARLES W. JOHNSON.

Charles W. Johnson, the new secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, is well known as the foreman of the greenhouse establishment of the H. W. Buckbee concern, at Rockford, Ill. Mr. Johnson was once in charge of the greenhouses at Mount Greenwood cemetery, Chicago, where W. N. Rudd grows chrysanthemums and carnations, and he was, during an interval in the service with H. W. Buckbee, in business for himself on the Pacific coast. He is a skilled grower and an admirable selection for the secretaryship of the society. His portrait appears on page 15 of this issue.

A FLORISTS' SUPPLEMENT.

One of the sections of the Washington Times for Sunday, November 8, was devoted exclusively to the floricultural interests of the national capital. The first page, with its decoration in colors, was devoted to a history of the local Florists' Club, which W. R. Smith says dates back to 1822, and to an account of the plans for the 1908 exhibition. The other pages carried illustrated accounts of the floricultural interests and the advertisements of local florists. Gude Bros. Co. and F. H. Kramer had full pages. There were several half pages and many smaller advertisements of retail florists.

This is said to be the first time that any metropolitan newspaper has devoted an entire section of a Sunday issue to florists and flower shows.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

All things considered, business was quite fair at the end of last week, and shipping trade was good at the beginning of the present period. City trade is not yet active and in many cases country buyers are still selling their own chrysanthemums and not yet calling on this market. As soon as the out-of-town buyers are cleaned out of the chrysanthemums they are growing in their own houses, this market will feel the effect. If this occurs before Thanksgiving day, it will result in a scramble for stock which will affect prices.

Receipts are reduced in many lines, but prices are not any too strong, because of the intermittent demand. An occasional rush of shipping orders will stiffen the market and when these are out values will recede again. There continues to be a wide variation between the prices which are obtained on regular business and those which it is necessary to make to induce the irregular buyers to clean up the picked-over stock.

It would take only a slight increase in demand to cause Beauties to become a pronounced shortage. Receipts are light, but there are enough Beauties to go around except of the shorter lengths, which are of course the ones called for in largest quantity. There are fair receipts of all other roses, Killarney and Richmond being most numerous, and it is possible to fill all orders for roses with first grade stock.

Carnations have improved steadily in quality and the quantity is equal to requirements, so that the growers who still are cutting short stems are getting small returns. There will be an improvement in the market for carnations as soon as the mums are gone.

The fine late sorts of chrysanthemums are now in and so abundant that values are below normal. There has been some reduction in the receipts of small mums, but enough Ivory come in to meet this demand and hold the prices on this grade at a low level. Yellow sells best. Bonnaffon makes fair average prices, though not up to last year.

There has been a reduction in the receipts of violets from Rhinebeck and some advance in prices. It has not been possible to supply all late orders. Locally grown singles are not yet abundant. The supply of valley continues ahead of the demand and there are plenty of Easter lilies for all orders booked a day in advance; usually enough for the late telegraphic orders. Sweet peas have not increased in quantity. There are a few pansies. Cattleyas have shortened up. The market for green goods is unchanged.

Various Notes.

Growers who are holding back stock for Thanksgiving ought to ship it in right away. No matter what the market is this week, it will be worse just before Thanksgiving if a lot of pickled stock is unloaded on the wholesalers. If only normal receipts come in the first of next week there will be good business for everyone.

The Fleur de Lis Club, largely composed of the young ladies at Randall's, gave a very successful dance at the Svithoid club, November 12.

George C. Hartung has an attractive place at 11816 Michigan avenue and says business is increasing rapidly. He says he expects soon to need more greenhouse room.

George W. Cohen, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, was in town during the national flower show. He had just returned from a trip through the west and says business is entirely normal in that section, with the prospect for a record business this winter.

The A. L. Randall Co. says the first few days the visiting florists were in town were devoted to looking around, but as time for departure approached the visitors become anxious to place orders. Everyone in its supply department was crowded with the work of writing down orders; it was no question at all of selling.

Bassett & Washburn report that in flower show week they had 348 visitors at their greenhouses at Hinsdale. There were over 200 in two days. Most of the visitors were specially interested in the O. P. Bassett carnation. Many left orders and many others are sending them in since returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beu met with a great and sudden loss last week in the death of their youngest son, Frank, 13 years of age, who died after only one day's illness. He was at the flower show November 7 and at school November 10. The funeral was held November 12 and many in the trade sent floral emblems of sympathy.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says that he thinks Diana is the best of all the small-flowered chrysanthemums. A large number of the wholesalers have it now and the retailers use it freely for baskets and table centerpieces. Mr. Pieser says it is one of the most readily salable items of present stock when it is well grown, but not specially salable if not well done.

E. C. Amling says business now is running well ahead of this date last year.

The forcing of valley is a new departure with H. Payne, of Hinsdale. He consigns it to Vaughan & Sperry.

E. H. Hunt is receiving some splendid Timothy Eatons from E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., also fine exhibition blooms from H. W. Buckbee, Rockford. Hunt's report a great business in the supply department when the flower show visitors were in town.

N. J. Wietor wears the cheerful air these days, because business is well ahead of last year at this date.

Percy Jones says he looks for violets and Beauties to be the two shortest items for Thanksgiving.

The E. F. Winterson Co. put its new green, called Mexican ivy, on the banquet tables at the Auditorium November 10, and everybody liked it.

August Poehlmann says they cleaned out 12,000 Virginia Poehlmann mums as fast as they were ready to cut and could easily have used a much larger quantity. There is a first-class demand for stock plants and young stock of this variety.

J. A. Budlong's say they are just coming into crop again and are looking for a good month.

At Peter Reinberg's Leonard Kill says the showing made by the Marshall Field rose is bringing a good many orders for young stock.

Kate Moulton rose is one of George Reinberg's specialties. It gives a large and steady cut and he finds it one of the most profitable varieties on his place.

Frank Oechslin says there will be no doubt about azaleas for Christmas this year. He got his stock much earlier than last year, the first lot October 1 and all in by October 17, and a big houseful, about one-third as many as he will have for Easter, are now well along for Christmas. The stock is all heavily budded this year. Mr. Oechslin forces only the standard commercial varieties and not so many large plants as a few years ago.

nue, supplies decorations with more or less regularity for several downtown hotels, restaurants and other public places, such as the Edelweiss, the Grand Pacific, the Chicago Club, the Union, the Bismarck and several others. In his stock of art ware he has some particularly unique and tasteful pieces which were recently imported from Japan. He also handles a novelty called the Illuminated Fern Stand.

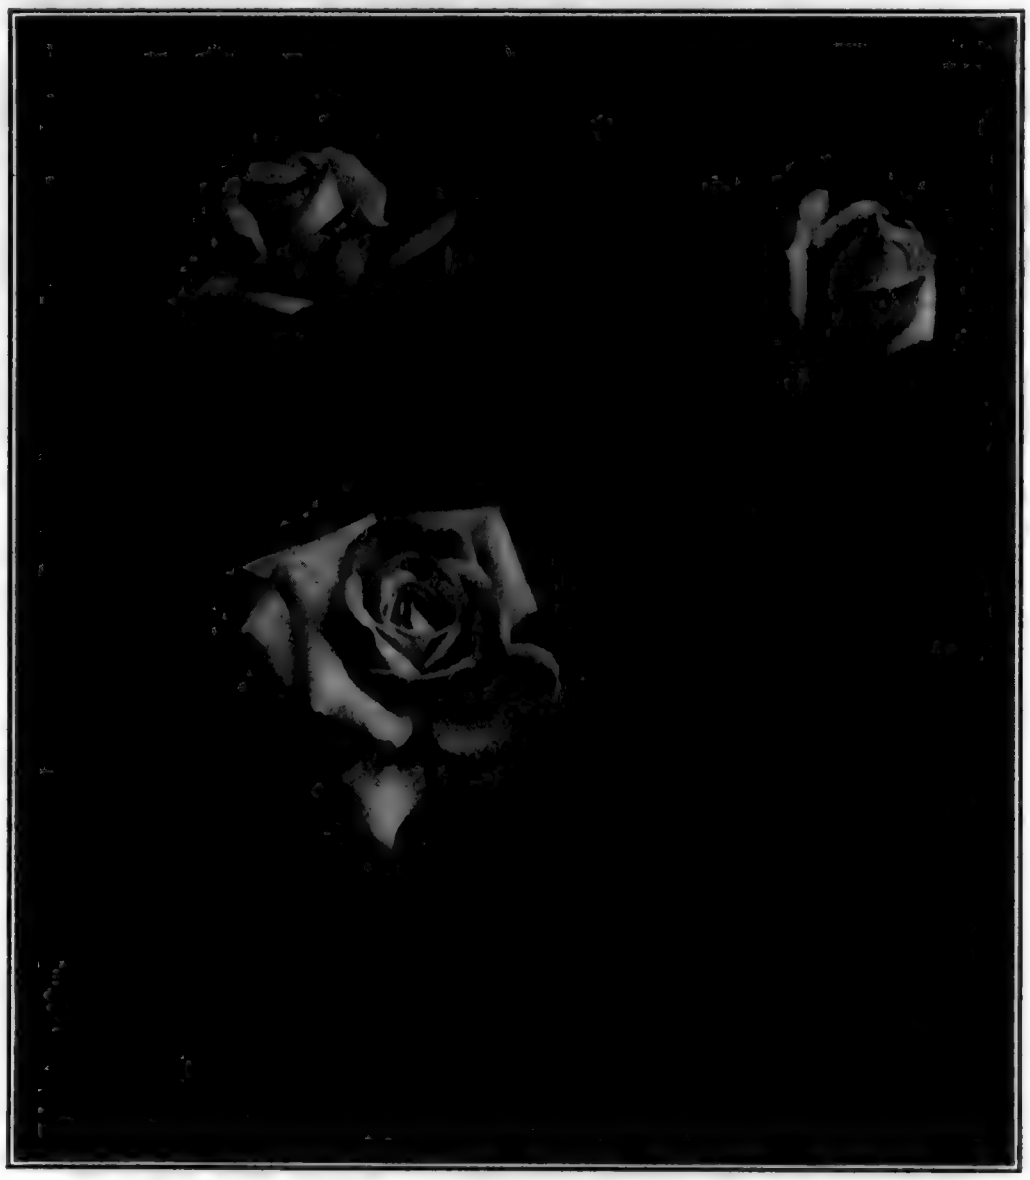
C. M. Dickinson returned November 17 from Little Rock, where he was judge of the flower show last week. He says hospitality is unlimited in that section.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The opening of the opera season November 17 occasioned a surprising demand for violets. The growers were caught unprepared, owing partly to the arrival of winter, which came unexpectedly November 14, in a snowstorm followed by a drop in the temperature, and partly to the late moving of plants into the houses. Those who had violets enjoyed an active business at advanced prices. Hightstown and the Hudson river contributed Lady Campbell and Marie Louise, respectively, to aid really superb singles in meeting the demand, and a fair showing was made.

Chrysanthemums have shortened considerably since last report. Major Bonnaffon is here, but is expected to leave shortly. Mrs. Chadwick, Mrs. Jerome Jones and Timothy Eaton, all in white and yellow; Golden Dome, yellow, and Mme. J. Rosette, pink, about complete the list of the varieties that are doing duty now and are expected to remain until after Thanksgiving. Prices have advanced, with the probability that they will remain high for all good stock until the close of the autumn queen's season.



Carnations are fine, plentiful, and unsatisfactory. By unsatisfactory I mean that they are selling too cheaply. For some reason, prices have not advanced as they should, except on thousand lots, which are quoted a little higher than a week ago. Indications point to an advance in the carnation market, an advance that is badly needed.

Roses are improving in quality. Beauties have become more plentiful. While they are selling well, there is no improvement in price, the supply being fully equal to the demand. Brides and Maids have improved, some really superb stock being seen. Richmond are plentiful and of splendid quality. Excellent flowers of all the other varieties of roses can now be found.

Bouvardia is coming in strongly, pink and red being the prevailing colors. Romans and Paper Whites have made their appearance. Stevia serrata is also here. Orchids are a trifle scarcer. Cattleya labiata is making its last bow, while C. Trianæ is coming to the front. Vandas, oncidiums, dendrobiums, and cyps give an excellent range of color. Lilium Harrisii has shortened considerably, the price hardening. Greens are abundant. The tone of the market, while not buoyant, is better. For quotations, see wholesale list.

A Floral Arcadia.

Fred Ehret sent out invitations for a chrysanthemum show, to be held in his combined stores at 702 North Broad street and 1407 Fairmount avenue, November 11 to 13. The show, believed to be the first formal affair of the kind conducted by a commercial florist, was also an opening for Mr. Ehret's new Broad street store. The two run at right angles with each other, meeting in a conservatory at the rear of both, so that the visitor may enter the front door at 702 North Broad street, go back through the store to the conservatory and, turning to his left, go through the store and out through the front door of the store at 1407 Fairmount avenue. Mr. Ehret had gathered all the choicest available material to be found in the Philadelphia market. There were specimen blooms of all the leading commercial varieties of chrysanthemums, many of the best flowering and foliage plants and an assortment of selected blooms of roses, carnations, orchids and other standard cut flowers, all being displayed to the best possible advantage. The new white chrysanthemum, Baby Margaret, not yet out, was kindly loaned by the Robert Craig Co. for the exhibition.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., gives the cheering news that since the election the buyers are buying with far more confidence.

The Moore-Livingston Co. made a handsome exhibit of its new plant stand in Horticultural hall last week.

James C. Clark, of the Henry A. Dreer Co., who is recognized as one of the leading fern experts of the country, says that Nephrolepis Scholzeli is the best crested fern today. Mr. Clark bases his judgment on the fact that N. Scholzeli is an exact counterpart of N. Scottii in every respect excepting that it is crested, and it is free from the drawback of nearly all crested varieties, of being too dense at the base.

The Market.

Trade was not as good last week as the week before. There is still a lack of steadiness among the retailers, and some of our leading store men say that about half of the week was good, while the other half was slack. The principal work done by the north and south and downtown florists is for funerals, while the west-enders' work is for weddings, dinners and other social work.

At our wholesale houses last week all had an abundance of stock in roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, with demand light during the last three days of the week. As to prices, all grades were selling low. The wholesaler was compelled to do this in order to dispose of his consignments.

Violets have been in demand, and the few that come clean up pretty well. Lily of the valley has had a fair demand.

In roses the quality is fine, especially in Ivory, Chatenay, Potter Palmer, Bride and Maid. American Beauties were plentiful, with extra specials at $3 per dozen. Carnations, too, are fine, with Rose-pink and White Enchantress among the fancies. Nelson Fisher, Lawson and Perfection come next. Chrysanthemums are in abundance, with all the late varieties in. Some extra fine blooms of Eaton, Bonnaffon and Morel were seen. All sorts of greens are to be had. Smilax and asparagus have a good call.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club took place Thursday night, November 12. This is the first night meeting the club has held for many years, and it did not prove a great success, there being only fourteen members present out of a membership of nearly 100. It was thought that the large number of new members, mostly employees, admitted at the October meeting would take advantage of the night meetings, this night being especially chosen for them, but none showed up. The meeting was held in the Knights of Columbus hall, at Grand and Olive streets, and opened at 8:30, with President Wm. C. Young in the chair. J. J. Beneke acted as secretary in the absence of Mr. Bentzen.

A. W. Murray was elected to membership, and William Mackle made application through F. H. Weber. It was decided to have an annual smoker, and the chair appointed Messrs. Angermueller, Schoenle and Beneke a committee to prepare for a smoker and report arrangements at the next meeting.

The president called on several members who visited the national show, at Chicago, for short talks. The treasurer's report showed the club to be in good financial condition. The question box brought out a good discussion, which closed the meeting.

Various Notes.

Charlie Fulgraf has resigned his position at the Missouri Botanical Garden, and is now employed in the city forester's office, as inspector, under Andrew Meyer, Jr.

The Foster Floral Co. furnished the floral decoration for the first anniversary of the Scruggs department store. The decorations consisted mostly of yellow chrysanthemums and made a pretty sight.

Professor H. C. Irish, superintendent of the Missouri Botanical Garden, left November 12, for Chicago, to take a look at the national show.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, is sending to this market some extra fine Beacon, White Enchantress and Enchantress carnations, also a nice cut of California violets. The above are the only varieties grown at his place.

Park Commissioner Phil Scanlan and wife left last week for a ten days' stay at French Lick Springs, for the benefit of Mr. Scanlan's health.

Mrs. Frank Ellis departed last week for Panama, to join her husband, who is running a banana plantation at that place.

Ostertag Bros. had the decoration at the big republican banquet at the Coliseum, Saturday, November 14, in honor of Governor-elect Hadley. Three hundred American Beauties were used.

The chrysanthemum show at Shaw's Garden this week is having an extraordinary run, the attendance averaging 5,000 daily, admission free. The show is held under a big tent near the main entrance of the garden. It is open until 10 p. m. All standard varieties are shown, as well as a number of new ones. A fine group of single-stems drew a great deal of attention. A number of local florists were in attendance during the week.

The St. Louis delegation that visited the national flower show last week numbered twenty-four, including eight ladies. All have returned home and report a great show and an enjoyable time.

A. J. Bentzen reports that he has had trouble with his boiler of late and had to use stoves to heat up. The new section came Thursday, November 12.

The new florists' bowling club organized two teams on Monday night and bowled three games at the new De Soto alleys. The scores were as follows:

Schrifer	480	Alves	365
Young	391	Geiger	348

The Market.

The market opened this week with steady prices, about on a par with those of Saturday, and with a general tone of encouragement for all departments of the cut flower trade. Growers begin to wear their accustomed fall smiles, wholesalers are clearing out daily at some price, with much smaller surpluses to be sacrificed, and the retailers have everything to enthuse them. Weather conditions are perfect. There must be progress from now on, and we all look for a splendid Thanksgiving and Christmas trade.

quantity and their quality is superb. Prices are better for the selected stock.

The flood of medium and common stock is nearly over. There will, however, be enough and to spare of all grades beyond Thanksgiving.

Beauties are advancing slowly and holding their ground as they go forward. Some fine Maids and Killarney touched 8 cents November 14, Saturday, though these grades were few and selected. The average top was 6 cents.

Orchids have advanced, 60 cents being asked at the end of last week.

The carnation supply is heavy, with quality far from uniform, and prices do not move upward. Violets hold at 75 cents for the best, with plenty to go around and some leftovers for the street, where the sidewalk merchants are again much in evidence. The clean-up usually is made at from 25 cents to 35 cents per hundred.

Narcissi are here again in limited supply, and selling up to 30 cents a dozen. Lilies are looking up.

Growers are warned against any holding back or pickling for Thanksgiving. It is risky business these days, with so many wholesalers building their reputation and stability upon first-class goods. No one dares send out stock of questionable freshness, and the picklers are really the ones who suffer.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's smoker was held at the Grand Opera house, Wednesday evening, November 18. The city was full of gardeners attending the flower show, and all of them were invited to attend. Mr. Rickards had a fine musical program and a splendid collation. It was a gala night and not the last the club will enjoy this season.

The fall exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York is on this week. W. E. Marshall is manager. The floral committee includes F. R. Pierson, C. W. Ward, J. E. Lager, F. H. Traendly, John Young, I. L. Powell, Peter Duff, J. H. Troy, G. V. Nash, W. W. Burnham, J. A. Manda and Leonard Barron. Mr. Pierson is chairman.

The American Institute show last week at the Berkeley Lyceum was a splendid success, one of the best of the seventy-seven held by the institute. Lack of room was never more seriously apparent.

The auctions continue. We are having perfect weather for planting in this vicinity. The attendance continues large and prices satisfactory. Many shipments of boxwood and rhododendrons are made daily. Hardy roses are bringing $10 per hundred. Evergreen stock is in splendid condition. Vesey street monopolizes this method of distribution. The auctioneers declare it has been a successful season, wonderfully so, considering the unrest with which the selling began.

John Scott, of Flatbush, is now convalescing after a narrow escape from his second relapse with typhoid fever.

Mr. Whitman, of Hoboken, N. J., has been suffering from a bad case of blood poisoning. He is the husband of our champion lady bowler and one of the popular and successful Jersey florists.

Young & Nugent had the decoration for the big wedding November 18, at St. Bartholomew's church, where over 2,000 chrysanthemums were used. Mr. Nugent has invented a new style of muff wedding bouquet with valley shower effect. Mr. Hanft, formerly with Thomas Young, Jr., is now in the employ of Young & Nugent.

George Cotsonas has doubled the capacity of his store at 50 West Twenty-eighth street. He handles over ten millions of fancy ferns in a season.

Herman R. Scommodan is now traveling for Russin & Hanfling.

R. McMillen, president of the Greenwich Gardeners' Society, was in the city November 13. He has a fine retail and landscape business at Greenwich.

J. J. Brozat, of Bloomfield, N. J., was a visitor November 14 in the wholesale section. He is sending some fine mums to the Growers' Cut Flower Co. Manager Coan says over forty growers are now shipping to this center.

Morrice Christatos, of the firm of Christatos & Koste, was married last week to Miss Hilda Fohrlander, of Sweden. Seventy-five guests attended the reception and many beautiful wedding presents attested their popularity. The honeymoon was spent at Atlantic City. Arthur H. Pritchard is manager for the firm, which has an up-to-date store at 706 Madison avenue and a branch store at West End, N. J.

The Newman Floral Co. is greatly pleased with its location at 202 Fifth avenue, and the encouragement already given it. Mr. Newman feels quite at home in the big city and has a handsome store in one of the best sections of New York. This is the first invasion of Manhattan by the Hub, and seems to be a successful one.

Afternoons are hardly popular for busy florists, and the turnout at the last bowling session was limited. High scores were made by Messrs. Young, Marshall, Schreiner and Butterfield, with 188 as the top. Monday evenings the club bowls at Thumm's alleys on Broadway.

Arthur Boddington is back from the Chicago exhibition, with enthusiastic accounts of its success. The improvements in the office and big annex of his store are rapidly approaching completion. Harry Bunyard is up to his eyes in new catalogue work.

The Market.

With a good supply of stock, business for the first part of the week, locally, was nothing to brag about. Even the shipping trade was slack, up to the last few days, when an improvement was noticed. While mums are still the main item, other cut flowers, which are of a good quality and not quite so abundant, moved pretty well, considering all conditions. Some fine roses and carnations have been coming into this market of late.

Various Notes.

All of the local florists who visited the national flower show at Chicago pronounced it grand, and it certainly was well worth the time and money spent.

C. C. Pollworth is treating himself to contrasts, for to be at the national flower show one day and leave for his annual deer hunt in the northern woods of Wisconsin the next day, is going it some.

This is the second season of the Mueller & Schroeder Co. in business. Gust, the manager, is wearing a big smile since they were awarded first prize for carnashort on Bouquet green. We know something about the Green Proposition, and as the state of Wisconsin leads with the supply, we make it our business to keep thoroughly posted.

From October 19 to November 1 we covered the entire Bouquet Green districts and we can guarantee full delivery on any accepted order, with absolute certainty.

Forest fires included vast destruction of Bouquet Green in our former best districts. Deer hunting commenced November 10, and a snow storm at any unexpected moment will have telling effects on the supply and price, but our acceptance of an order assures you of full delivery under any circumstances. 700 crates we shipped last year. Remember we are right on the ground during the Green season of picking and we make good on every order placed in our care. Santa Cruz, Cal.—E. Leedham, founder and manager of the Leedham Bulb Co., died November 5, at the age of 80 years. Further particulars concerning him will be found in this week's obituary column.

Santa Clara, Cal.—Charles Woodward had a narrow escape from being killed in his garden by a robber whom he caught prowling about on the premises shortly after 2 o'clock on the morning of November 1. Mr. Woodward had concealed himself in the garden with the purpose of protecting himself from the depredations of Hallowe'en jokers, but encountered, instead, an actual robber, who was overcome after a severe struggle and turned over to the police. At one stage of the fight the robber had a revolver aimed at Mr. Woodward's breast, but the weapon failed to explode.

PASADENA, CAL.

The Pasadena Nurserymen's Association has been organized, with a membership of ten, and the following officers were elected: President, Thomas Chisholm; treasurer, J. B. Wagner; secretary, T. E. Gould. The president appointed a committee of three to formulate by-laws and a constitution, to be submitted to the members for discussion at their next meeting, which is subject to the call of the president.

The formation of this association has been contemplated for some time, but the action of the City Commissioners in planting street trees and caring for them, at the expense of the taxpayers at large, was the immediate cause of the formation of the Nurserymen's Association. A petition of the nurserymen with reference to this matter was presented at the meeting of City Commissioners November 2, and was brought up for further discussion November 9.

The Pasadena Gardeners' Association also issued a formal protest, signed by President John Blake and Secretary Robert McKenzie, which reads as follows: "At a special meeting of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association, held in the Board of Trade rooms, October 30, after a discussion of the present plan of planting and caring for street trees in the parkings of lots, vacant and otherwise, which has been recently started by the city of Pasadena, this association, by a unanimous vote, declared themselves opposed to the system."

CUTTINGS OF HARDY VINES.

With the beginning of the cool weather in November, it is a good plan to make cuttings of hardy vines that can be grown in this way. A coldframe or a greenhouse is an ideal place in which to root them, if they are planted in flats filled with sand or any light soil. With many of our hardy shrubs it is not advisable to make cuttings until we have had a tinge of sharp frost to cause the leaves to drop and the stems to become thoroughly dormant, but with practically all our vines this is not necessary, and whether they are deciduous or evergreen makes but little difference.

In an ordinary flat, 18x24 inches, three inches deep, 200 cuttings can be planted without crowding, and there is no difficulty whatever in handling them if they are sheltered by glass overhead, providing they are not allowed to get too warm by an unexpected hot spell and are not given too much moisture before they have become well calloused. Boxed cuttings are lost much oftener through an excess of moisture than through too little, and oftener through insufficient circulation of air than from too much ventilation. These rules apply, of course, only to stock that is hardy outside, and not to such articles as have to be kept under glass throughout our cold season.

Honeysuckles, passion vines, lantanas, solanums, tecomas, bougainvilleas, mandevillas, jasmines, ampelopsis, plumbagos, ivies and many other vines can thus be grown easily in a small space, where it would be necessary to give them considerable ground if they were planted in the open. Cuttings that are planted outside have to be very carefully watched, and although they make stronger plants in less time than they do if grown in flats, the chances for their drying out or not being able to withstand climatic changes are always against them.

About the end of March should show the cuttings well rooted and they can then be potted or planted out in open rows for a heavier growth, as all danger is then past of succumbing to any ordinary setback.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The excitement of election time is over and business has resumed its normal aspect again, and I am pleased to say that, all things being considered, we are having a fair share of trade at present. The big intercollegiate football game takes place on Saturday next, at Berkeley, Cal., and already the chrysanthemum growers have their hands full supplying the retailers and the street hucksters.

Never in the history of the mum in this state have the blooms been of such extra good quality and sold at such reasonable prices. Everything in the flower line is cheap, however. Carnations, which at this season of the year should net the growers at the rate of at least $4 per hundred, do not realize over half that figure. Roses also, except fancy stock, can be had in any quantity at from $2 to $4 per hundred. The continued warm, sunshiny days, coupled with the fact that the demand has heretofore been rather light, are the factors that are to blame in the matter. The weather at present shows no signs of changing to be colder, and until we have some sharp frosts or a few weeks of dark, cloudy weather, we need look for no relief from low prices.

Violets are in abundance and sell well, probably better than any other article the retailer handles. Maidenhair fern and asparagus are somewhat scarcer than they have been, but smilax is daily becoming more plentiful and of better length and longer keeping qualities.

DETROIT.

The Market.

A summing up of a report from all the downtown stores is gratifying indeed. "Business is picking up nicely," is heard on all sides. The weather has been favorable.

There are many fair sized wedding decorations being executed, some calling for much good stock, such as orchids, valley, violets, etc.

Pompons and the single varieties of mums are in demand. In fact, these small varieties sell better this year than ever before. Many large yellow mums were disposed of Saturday, November 14, for the U. of M. football game at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Carnations sell readily at good prices. Some fine stock is available.

Various Notes.

The revised edition of the new constitution and by-laws of the Detroit Florists' Club was mailed to the members Monday, November 16. The season's program was also mailed this week.

Business opened up nicely with E. A. Fetters in his new flower shop. Miss Gentlemen, formerly with Mrs. Allen P. Cox, has been engaged by Mr. Fetters to look after the store. An appropriate football window attracted much attention the latter part of the week.

W. B. Brown reports business in general as being good. He, being on the avenue, disposed of several hundred large yellow chrysanthemums at a fancy price.

Murray T. Patterson is well pleased with the outlook for the season. This firm disposes of many violets and these have been in good demand lately. Mr. Patterson claims that when people commence buying violets freely, it is a good omen.

Breitmeyer's staff has been quite busy. Several fair sized decorations have called for considerable work and stock. They also had a tasteful window in pale blue and yellow, these being the colors of the University of Michigan.

Walter Taepke reports the usual amount of funeral work, also several good wedding orders.

Painters and decorators somewhat upset things at Schroeter's last week, but they are straightened out again. A good run of funeral work and several weddings are keeping this firm busy.

William is back in harness again at Sullivan's, but is still weak from his injuries. Many yellow mums were disposed of by Sullivan's for the football fans Saturday, November 14. At the present writing Norman is still sojourning somewhere between Detroit and Chicago. Before returning home he will visit with Ernest Sullivan at Notre Dame College, in Indiana.

Call up Albert Pochelon, of the Bemb Floral Co., when you will and he is always busy. Last week he furnished the decorations for the Schmidt wedding, at Grosse Pointe. Yellow and white were the predominating colors. Chrysanthemums and valley were about the only flowers used. A unique centerpiece adorned the wedding table. Two hearts, made of valley and pompon chrysanthemums, were held together by a small Cupid of marble, producing a pretty effect.

Even the wire man is getting more busy. Wm. Hielscher's force has been compelled to work overtime to take care of his orders and keep up his large stock of designs. H. S.

THE sweet corn now being taken in is the best the seed houses have had the pleasure of handling in a number of years. The autumn season has been specially favorable.

A REPORT of the death of E. Leedham, of Santa Cruz, Cal., will be found in the obituary column of this issue of the REVIEW. Mr. Leedham was the founder of the Leedham Bulb Co., and its manager till the time of his death.

THERE is an evident disposition to hold down both wholesale and retail prices on the scarcest items of the season's seed supply, although many who are quoting low rates on scarce items acknowledge they canont supply the demand and say the stock is worth much more money, except for the fact that the competitors' prices are equally low.

AMONG the seedsmen visiting Chicago during the national flower show were Eugene Schaettel, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France; L. L. May, of L. L. May & Co., St. Paul; Charles N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia.; Wm. Currie and wife and Allister Currie, of Currie Bros. Co., Milwaukee; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.

AT Memphis, Tenn., Hugo Sachs and Rudolph Schreiber, doing business at Quedlinburg, Saxony, as David Sachs, filed suit in chancery November 11 against the Ullathorne Seed Co. The object of the suit is to collect an account alleged to be due and unpaid. Israel H. Peres is solicitor for the complainants, and the bill alleges that $694.19 is due.

AT Chicago, November 17, timothy seed was dull at $3.87½ bid for November and $3.95 bid and $4.10 asked for March. Country lots, $2.60@3.75. Clover seed was unchanged at $9.20 for November and $9.50 for March and $6.00@9.00 for cash lots. At Toledo, November 17, clover seed was, cash, $5.52½; November, $5.52½; December, $5.55; March, $5.67; No. 2, $5.35; No. 3, $5.25; rejected, $5.10. Alsike, prime, $8.80.

OFFERS of onion seed are coming from all sorts of unheard-of places. Last season's experience resulted in the planting of bulbs in dozens of out-of-the way localities, and fair yields of seed, which now serves to depress the market. These odd lots of seed are generally of unknown quality and the larger seed houses will have nothing to do with them, but they will eventually be sold through the country merchants and will have their effect on the demand for stock of known character.

SAN JOSE MERCURY AND HERALD: SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 8, 1908.

SEED GROWING IS IN INFANCY IN THIS STATE.

Description of a Recent Visit to the Largest Seed Farm in the World.

Only One of the Several Big Ranches Owned by Braslan Seed Growers' Co.

BY GEORGE H. STIPP.

FEW people in San Jose and the Santa Clara Valley—indeed, few people in the State of California realize that in their midst is an enterprise of such magnitude that the results of its operations reach practically the four corners of the earth. In a small and unpretentious building in a modest part of the business section of the city of San Jose is located the mainspring and governor that keeps the mighty machine steadily moving. In other words, the general office of the owner and manager may be found at 360 South First street in this city. Reference is made to the Braslan Seed Growers' Company, which is under the able management and control of Major Charles P. Braslan.

Here I found a half dozen stenographers and clerks busily engaged in handling the immense correspondence of the seed company, and from this point is controlled and regulated the details of several monster seed ranches located in different parts of the Santa Clara Valley. Through the courtesy of Major Braslan, I was given an opportunity to inspect one of these big ranches which served as an index to the conditions prevailing at the others.

The Sweeney Ranch.

The one under consideration is known as the Sweeney Ranch, adjoining the Flood estate at Menlo Park, and consists of 835 acres. Here was found work of enormous detail and great magnitude. On this ranch Major Braslan has what he jocularly calls "Tait's Restaurant of San Francisco." It is a building several hundred feet long and 40 feet wide in which are fed the several hundred hands employed on the farm. It was stated that the men are all served with their meals inside of twenty minutes after they sit down to the table, so perfect is the culinary and dining-room service.

Across the road are the bunkhouses which accommodate 500 men. Each man has separate bunk quarters and is practically in his own castle. These are occupied by the Orientals—Japanese and Chinese. The white employees, of whom there are also many, have separate living and eating houses. The dining rooms and kitchens are in all cases immaculate.

The next thing that attracts the attention is the blacksmith shop, which is fully equipped for all necessary farming purposes and at which several men are employed.

Office Management.

In the office management at this ranch one white man is employed as manager. There are also one Japanese and two Chinese managers. Each of these has a separate office and telephones connecting with the general ranch and outside systems.

In the barns, several stablemen have nothing to do but care for the seventy-five head of horses. They must see that they are properly fed, watered and groomed and ready for business by 6 o'clock in the morning.

Systematic Operation.

Each department of this ranch has its head and that man is held responsible for the conduct of business under his care. Major Braslan does not know any of the men of the rank and file, but he is in constant touch with the managers and superintendents at all of his ranches and looks to them strictly for results. The personnel, equipment, system and discipline on one of these big seed farms may be compared with the conduct of affairs on a big battleship, so methodically is every effort directed. Everybody is working and everything moves on the moment.

Wandering out into the field one is astonished at the great expanse of land under cultivation, extending as it does from Menlo Park to Redwood City, two and one-half miles in length. There may be seen an enormous traction engine of sixty-five horse-power, dragging sixteen plows which break the soil to a depth of twelve inches. From morning to night this big engine covers five miles every trip it makes around the field. After it does its work, another force of men follow with harrow and discs which pulverize and smooth the ground. After this comes still another force with markers and they mark the rows to receive the seed. This crew again is followed by 200 to 300 men who do the planting by hand. They are accompanied by superintendents who oversee the work that it may not be done amiss and that no man shirks his duties.

Extensive Effort.

The public little appreciates what all this extensive effort means and mere figures convey but indefinite meanings, yet something of the volume of the work may be understood when it is explained that 2,600,000 pounds of onion bulbs must be planted by the human hand to produce the enormous quantity of onion seed which is raised on this ranch alone. This, too, means indefinite detail. As each bag is opened and the contents are spread on the ground, careful selection is made so that no mixture can take place in the propagating of the seed. Each onion is handled individually. It is interesting to note the number of bulbs that are handled and it is safe to say 100,000,000 are annually placed in the ground on this ranch, each bulb being planted by hand.

In one part of the farm several men with horses were observed operating seed sowers. They were planting lettuce. At some distance, perhaps a mile or two away, another crew of men was planting sweet peas. In other fields other crops were being sown.

Many Men Employed.

Upon reaching Major Braslan's private residence it was found to be surrounded by twenty-one acres devoted to home planting. Among this vegetation were many rare specimens of flowering plants and bulbs intended to beautify the home surroundings and feast the eye of the visitor with plant life out of the ordinary.

At the present time over 600 men are employed on the various ranches owned and operated by the Braslan Seed Growers' Company, and, at some seasons, this number increases to 1,400 and 1,500. All soon learn and must know their places and each man fits into his respective duties like the cogs in a great wheel. Of course, large numbers of white men are employed, as many as Mr. Braslan can find able to do the work.

On the return to San Jose a short stop was made at the ranch in Sunnyvale, where Major Braslan was in consultation with the chiefs of the several departments and instructing them with reference to new work to be undertaken.

As many be imagined, many thousands of dollars are paid out in wages to the hands employed on these big seed farms. This money is spent by the men for things to wear and eat. In the enjoyment of the trade from these people every merchant in San Jose and the valley towns participates in the prosperity of this big enterprise.

Largest Seed Farm in World.

Major Braslan stated yesterday that the company owns large ranches at Centerville, Newark, Sunnyvale, Edenvale, Coyote and in other places. He said further that the products of these ranches reach every hamlet and town in the United States and Canada and outlets for the trade are found in Havana, New Zealand, China, England and in all foreign countries. Yet he considers that seed growing in the Santa Clara valley is still in its infancy.

It is said that the Sweeney ranch is the largest and best conducted seed farm in the world at the present time; and, when it is in bloom, it is unquestionably the show place of California for beauty in floral culture and display.

crops and although some seed crops have suffered from too dry weather, the main crops are fine and perfectly satisfactory to both grower and dealer.

THE crop of German aster seeds is good, as a result of fine fall weather, and prices are below those of last year.

THE fall weather has been fine the world over and has aided no little in increasing the supply of many items in seeds.

REAPPRAISEMENTS.

The United States Board of General Appraisers has made the following reappraisements of interest to the trade:

BULBS.—From F. Bansel & Co., Marseilles, exported July 28, 1908; entered at Philadelphia. File No. 49420. Entry No. 13124. Findings of Sharretts, G. A.: Fac. Roman hyacinths, 12 to 15 centimeters, entered at 65, reappraised at 65 francs per 1,000. Roman hyacinths, 11 to 12 centimeters, entered at 41, reappraised at 50 francs per 1,000. Ditto, 12 to 15, entered at 62, reappraised at 65 francs per 1,000. Add cases. Discount on entered values, 5 per cent; on reappraised values, 3 per cent.

AZALEAS.—From Horticulture Amandia Nurseries, Ghent, exported October 21, 1908; entered at New York. File No. 49922. Invoice No. 12642. Findings of Waite, G. A.: Azalea Indica, 14 to 16 inches; entered at 22 cents, advanced to 26 cents each. Ditto, 16 to 18 inches; entered at 36 cents, advanced to 38 cents each. Add cases and packing.

DUTY ON SEEDS.

Henry & Lee, New York, recently filed a protest on the assessment of duty on an importation of merchandise classified as "seeds not specially provided for" under paragraph 254, tariff act of 1897, and which they claimed to be free of duty under paragraph 656 (flower seeds), or paragraph 548 (seeds which are drugs). The protest was overruled.

a tuberous-rooted climbing plant. We do not think the seeds of a shrub or tree or a hardy vine, such as holly or wistaria, were intended to be included within the description of flower seeds in paragraph 656. In our opinion, the commodity is not assessable under that paragraph, nor under paragraph 548, but is correctly classifiable as seeds not specially provided for and assessable as found by the collector at thirty per cent ad valorem."

VICK'S NEW ASTER.

James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., have a new aster, named Mikado Pink, to be sent out this season. They think it one of the best things they have thus far disseminated and give a glowing description of it, concluding as follows:

"We realize that some of our statements may seem strong, and we certainly have no desire to exaggerate the importance of any of our asters. Although we have introduced more new varieties of commercial worth than all other American seedsmen combined, we have made it our policy to be conservative in the praise of our asters, and to make only such statements as could be corroborated by any careful grower using our seed. We do not violate our policy by these statements with reference to this aster. Indeed, it is difficult to find words to convey a correct impression of the high value we set on this splendid aster.''

Vick's Mikado Pink belongs to the Comet class. The outer petals show to their full extent, while toward the center they curl across each other, making a large, full, fluffy flower. The color is between Vick's Branching Pink and Semple's Pink. The growth is that of the Branching type. It is vigorous and did well in the dry season just past. Its period of blooming is between Queen of the Market and Vick's Branching. The firm states its opinion that under favorable conditions flowers can be grown seven and one-half inches in diameter and on stems two feet or more long.

ERFURT SEED CROPS.

At Erfurt, Germany, the September and October weather was fine and seed crops were handled under most favorable circumstances. Turnip-rooted beets are short, while the long kinds have done fairly well. Garden kales are good, but the feeding kinds, such as Thousandhead, are scarce. Cabbages and savoys have yielded poorly; still, stocks of some of the leading kinds are heavy and no great advances in price are probable. Brussels sprouts are under average. Some carrots are plentiful, especially field carrots, while the shorter sorts of garden carrot are mostly under average. Cauliflowers are a good crop, and the same may be said of celery, chicory, cucumber, tomato and spinach. Endives are fair. Kohlrabi has in general not turned out well, but owing to stocks in hand prices will likely be about the same. Lettuce, radish and parsley are all above the average. Parsnips are fair to good. Of onions the yellow varieties have done well; Zittau is middling, and the red kinds are short. Turnips have yielded freely, except the White Dutch, which is poor. The leading herbs, such as savory, borage, lavender and marjoram, are mostly good crops, sage especially so, whereas thyme has done badly.

FALL IMPORTS FROM HOLLAND.

The Steamer Statendam, arriving in New York November 4, from Rotterdam, had the following horticultural consignments:

American Shipping Co.—12 cases trees.
Abel, C. C., & Co.—9 cases bulbs.
American Express Co.—25 cases trees, 37 cases plants, 6 cases shrubs and trees.
Baldwin, A., & Co.—3 cases flower roots.

WEST GROVE, PA.

Baylis Bros. and D. H. Green are shipping large quantities of chrysanthemums to the Philadelphia market daily. Prices are moderate, but the demand for choice flowers is good.

The Conard & Jones Co. is now engaged in harvesting its immense crop of cannas. Notwithstanding the dry weather during the growing season, the tubers are of a fair size and quality.

The shipments of mushrooms from the Dingee & Conard Co. are daily growing heavier. They have yet three houses to fill and expect to do a rousing business in this line this winter.

Reports to both floral concerns from their branch nurseries in North Carolina indicate that a large crop of roses will soon be ready to be sent north. Choice varieties of the hybrid and hybrid tea classes have made an excellent growth and will be ready for the trade early next spring.

NORTH AUGUSTA, S. C.—At the recent Georgia-Carolina Fair the Boatwright Floral Co., of this city, won thirteen blue ribbons, on chrysanthemums, both blooms and potted plants, and a specimen fern. Second prizes, also, were awarded to the firm, on roses and ferns. The exhibition booth was artistically constructed in the form of a pergola.

RIDGEFIELD, CONN.—George I. Haight's new greenhouse, on Danbury avenue, adjoining his office, is a fine, modern building, 30x220 feet. It is heated by hot water, with the boiler room in the center. On account of its modern construction, its compact shape and its connection with the office, it is much more convenient and serviceable than Mr. Haight's former greenhouses on West Lane.

Vegetable Forcing.

Cabbages will keep well all winter if they are buried head down in soil, so that only two or three inches of the root stems appear above the ground.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Cucumbers, 60c to $1.25 doz.; lettuce, 30c to 40c case.

Boston, Nov. 16.—Tomatoes, 12½c to 16c lb.; cucumbers, $2 to $10 box; lettuce, 35c to 75c box; radishes, $1.75 to $2 box.

New York, Nov. 16.—Boston cucumbers, $3 to $10 box; Boston lettuce, 75c to $1.75 strap; mushrooms, 25c to 50c lb.; tomatoes, 8c to 15c lb.

A USEFUL LETTUCE.

Henderson's New York Lettuce may not be as delicious to the taste as some other varieties, but for a hot weather lettuce I found it to make good last summer when every other variety under cultivation failed. And again, when good heading lettuce outdoors seemed out of the question, the latter part of October I had 1,000 or more splendid heads of Henderson's New York, all of such great size and excellent quality that I quite successfully lifted them out of the open ground and planted them in frames, for use as they may be required. B.

SOIL STERILIZATION.

[A paper by B. H. Thorne, of Wooster, O., read at the meeting of greenhouse vegetable growers in Cleveland, October 31, 1908, and begun in the Review of November 12.]

Sterilizing by Heat.

In sterilizing by heat we can use hot water or steam.

Hot water is not practicable except for sterilizing small articles, such as pots or flats placed in a tank of boiling water. It can be used on the cutting bench, but formalin will do better work. Steam contains so much greater an amount of heat that hot water cannot be considered when sterilizing on a large scale. When it is convenient to use steam, it is the best sterilizing agent, as it kills everything, including weed seeds.

Steam sterilizing can be done in any of the following ways, using the one that best suits the conditions: By the box method, by steam coils placed temporarily in the beds and by tiles placed permanently in the bottom of the beds.

The Box Method.

In using the box method a large box is built outdoors on the ground, or a small, movable one is made for indoor work, making it as tight as possible and as large as the capacity of the boiler will allow. In the bottom are placed 1-inch or 1¼-inch pipes, spaced from twelve to fifteen inches apart, connected with a header at one end for the inlet of steam and plugged at the other end. The pipes are drilled every four to six inches, with ¼-inch holes for low pressure and ⅛-inch or smaller holes for high pressure. All joints should be tight. The holes are turned down and the pipes covered with burlap to keep the dirt out. If possible, the capacity of the holes should be about the same as the capacity of the flow pipe.

The soil is thrown into the box from one side, either from a wagon or a pile, and after being steamed it is thrown out on the other side, on to boards or something to keep it separated from other soil. After the steaming gets well along, the box should be covered tightly with boards and left over night before being emptied. Green lumber is best to use for steaming purposes, as it will not warp as much as dry lumber.

In steaming a large amount of soil two boxes would be quite a convenience, as one could be emptied while the other was being steamed.

Steaming Soil in Beds.

In steaming soil in beds, the steaming coils are made in sections convenient to handle and half the width of the bed. They are laid on the surface of the bed, with the holes down, and covered with burlap, and the remaining soil is piled on top and the whole boxed in and covered with boards. This is a very laborious method, however, and a far better way is to lay drain tile permanently in the bottom of the bed, about eighteen inches apart, connecting the tile at one end with a header. The openings from the header into the tile should be reduced enough to give an even distribution of steam into each line of tile. The steam pressure in the tiles should not be more than two or three pounds, or it will make blow holes or mud geysers. This method not only sterilizes the soil, but the bottom and sides of the bed as well, which is nearly as important as steaming the soil.

Treatment After Steaming.

In order to get a good crop on steamed soil, the after treatment is as important as the steaming. Steaming soil makes a physical change in it, running it together so that it holds water tenaciously. This can be overcome by thoroughly turning it over several times, breaking it up as fine as possible and allowing it to dry some before each turning. Even then it must be carefully and lightly watered the first few times.

Now, this is all of no avail unless you begin at the very beginning; that is, with reference to the seed bed most especially. All flats or pots must be thoroughly sterilized, as well as any soil or manure used in growing the plants, and any soil or manure added afterward to the beds. This was impressed upon me last winter, when part of one bed went to the bad. Some of the plants used were grown in old flats and some in new ones. The part of the bed planted from the old flats was badly spotted with rosette, while that planted from the new ones was all right.

The Resultant Crops.

Now, as for the growth of crops on sterilized soil, I have no data except in one instance with a lettuce crop. This was a bed planted out after being sterilized with formalin, which gave as heavy a crop in two weeks less time than one beside it that had been sterilized with formalin two crops before. The first crop after a formalin sterilization has always seemed to grow faster than at other times, but I am not able to prove it. It is likely that other conditions enter in, besides the effect of the formalin.

In steamed soil it is necessary to thoroughly break it up and dry it somewhat, in order to get a quick crop.

The cost of formalin sterilization, when buying the formalin from the local druggist and using the mixer, has been about three-fifths of a cent per cubic foot. In buying it directly from the manufacturers or jobbers, the cost can be brought down to about two-fifths of a cent.

The cost of the tile method of steam sterilization is about the same as for formalin, while for the soil or box methods it is somewhat more because of the extra labor. The cost of the apparatus used is not counted, in either case.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

NURSERIES dealing in hardy phlox are doing a good fall business on this item.

IN many cases nurserymen find the dry season has retarded growth and stock has not attained the size expected.

THE Illinois State Horticultural Society will hold its fifty-third annual convention at the Agricultural building, University of Illinois, at Champaign, Decemzer 8 to 18. An elaborate program has been prepared, with many demonstrations of nursery and greenhouse practice.

THE thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Southwestern Iowa Horticultural Society is announced for Council Bluffs, December 15 to 17. A number of western nurserymen have places on the program. There will be a large display of fruit. The National Horticultural Congress will be in session at Council Bluffs December 14 to 19, and the National Corn Exhibition, just across the river at Omaha, December 9 to 19.

DUTY ON NURSERY STOCK.

On a protest of P. Ouwerkerk, the following articles were held dutiable as evergreen seedlings under paragraph 252, tariff act of 1897, as claimed by the importer: Aucuba Japonica, rhododendron, and box tree.

At the Boston port of entry an article invoiced as Buxus arborescens and commonly known as boxwood, which was classified as nursery stock under paragraph 252, tariff act of 1897, was claimed to be dutiable under the provision in the same paragraph for evergreen seedlings. Appraiser Waite gave the following opinion in overruling the protest:

"That boxwood is an evergreen is conceded, but the protestants have not sustained their claim that these importations were seedlings. The government has offered in evidence the testimony of the examiner of nursery stock at the port of New York, whose experience and acquaintance with such merchandise covers a period of forty years. He states that, although it is possible to raise from the seed such plants as imported, as a matter of fact it is not done; that they are started from cuttings, for the reason that too long a time is required to germinate from the seed. In the light of such testimony and in the absence of any evidence sustaining the importers' claim, we overrule the protest."

Chas. D. Stone & Co., customs house brokers, filed a protest relating to seedlings of white pine and blue spruce, classified as evergreen seedlings under paragraph 252, tariff act of 1897. The importers claim that "both these varieties of trees shed their foliage in the winter time, and are therefore manifestly not evergreen," but should be dutiable as nursery or greenhouse stock at twenty-five per cent ad valorem under the same paragraph. Appraiser Waite said: "The above quoted statement of the protestants, upon which they base their claim, would seem to have been made in error, for the trees named are perhaps among the best known of the evergreens. They are found in the forests in the north of our country, and their characteristics are so well known that all authorities agree upon their habit of always retaining their leaves. We consider this to be matter of common knowledge, and the mere statement of the fact suffices."

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Club Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club, held November 10, the members were highly pleased with a splendid display of chrysanthemums and carnations by Clinton L. Reese, to whom a vote of thanks was extended. Mr. Reese briefly explained his methods of growing, stating that the mums, in about ten varieties, had been permitted to produce an average of three blooms to the plant, and it was generally conceded, by a number of competent judges present, that the results attained were equal to any flowers seen by them from the houses of the largest growers for critical city trade.

Mr. Reese casually remarked that he had grown on his place, not only the flowers, but the vases as well; whereupon it was discovered that the "vases" containing the carnations, which had been taken to be tastefully decorated earthenware, were simply vase-shaped gourds, with the smaller ends detached and the contents removed. The exhibitor had the laugh on the floral experts, whose eyes were evidently better trained to judge flowers than vases.

C. L. Reese and C. C. Leedle were appointed a committee to outline a plan for holding a flower show at about this time next fall. The new houses recently erected by Charles Unglaub, Gustav Schneider and the Leedle Rosery Co., together with the enterprise of Mr. Reese and other local retailers, have given a strong impetus to the growing of cut flowers, and there is no reason why Springfield should not take its proper place in this branch of the floral industry, as well as in the mail order business and wholesale rose and plant growing.

The topic for the evening was "Construction and Heating of Greenhouses," and quite an interesting informal discussion was held, the vacuum system of heating receiving chief attention.

Mr. Mellen, for the program committee, reported that E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., who had been requested to talk to the club on the subject of his frequent trips to Europe, had designated December 14 as the date for his coming, and it is probable that the regular meeting for next month will be changed to the date named. Chrysanthemum Novelties

The Prize Winners as Usual

The list I have this year will contain the finest lot of novelties I have ever sent out, and that is saying much. Among them will be Yellow Miller, a yellow sport from the bronze Mrs. J. A. Miller. This is a sterling variety and is bound to make good. Pockett's Crimson, a crimson and gold beauty that I am distributing with Wells this year. Charles H. Totty, an enormous chestnut scarlet. Mrs. O. H. Kahn, a bronze that will depose any bronze we now have. These are already certificated for me.

Other grand ones will be Clara Wells, a lovely incurved yellow; Mrs. G. F. Coster, a deeper yellow than Donnellan; Rose Pockett; Geo. Mileham, 1908; Pockett's Surprise, and many other fine seedlings.

New Carnations == 1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal, with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal, closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, and holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives one good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives one grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

The Market.

Trade has been steadily on the increase and loads of stock have been moved in the last two weeks. The bulk of the midseason mums is cut now and the later ones are making their appearance. There has really been no glut on the market here, though a great many more mums were grown than heretofore and it was predicted they would be overdone. This shows how the demand is increasing for the beautiful. Roses and carnations are coming in finely and at times it looked as though there would be a glut on roses, but, taking it all around, these have been very satisfactory. There have been a number of weddings lately, which have helped to swell the receipts for November.

Violets are coming in better and find fairly good sales.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club, Tuesday evening, November 10, there were some good mum blooms. While the number was not large, they made a good showing. Several songs and several selections on the piano were rendered during the evening and were much enjoyed.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, R. A. Currie; vice-president, C. P. Torrey; treasurer, J. Reichert; secretary, James McKellar; sergeant-at-arms, J. H. Williams; trustees, Sherman Stephens, George Bauman, I. D. Seibert, William Metzmaier and C. D. Batelle.

A good number went from here to the national flower show and all report a fine time and a great show. J. M.

DES MOINES, IA.—The Society of Iowa Florists will hold a meeting at the Capitol building, December 9, in connection with the meeting of the State Horticultural Society.

HAMILTON, ONT.—McKay & Vossen have done remarkably well since their opening day, November 2. They say that cut flowers move slowly, but there is a good demand for funeral work. Mr. Connon reported a good demand for cut flowers on Saturday, November 7, for Thanksgiving.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Golden Glow and Pacific Supreme, our last spring's Novelties, have been well received by the commercial growers.

Their verdict for our 1909 sorts can not be other than satisfactory.

They possess commercial qualifications that are sure to make them popular.

They have all been certificated by the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

Early planting and early buds are not imperative, as they produce double flowers when planted late.

Gloria, an early Enchantress-pink, October 10 to 25. Pres. Taft, midseason, incurved white, October 25 to November 10. Mrs. W. E. Kelley, late, midseason, bright yellow, November 10 to 25. 50c each, $4.00 per 10, $35.00 per 100. Early delivery.

Novelties and standard sorts, Exhibition as well as complete list of Singles, Pompons, Hairy and Anemone varieties.

The new crested Scottii Fern Nephrolepis Scholzeli

This crested sport of Scottii will hold the same position to all the crested forms of Nephrolepis that Scottii now holds to the Boston. It is entirely distinct from all others and will become even more popular than its parent, with which it is identical in every way except that the pinnæ are subdivided, giving it a beautiful crested appearance.

We have shown the plant at the Exhibitions noted below and have been awarded the following honors:

SHAW GOLD MEDAL. St. Louis Horticultural Society, November 3rd, 1908. For "Best plant, of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce."

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Adolph H. Campe, who since last spring has been employed as landscape artist on the Hartman Stock Farm, about five miles from this city, says that he is busy in the work of transforming thirty-eight acres of the farm into a park. He says that the proprietor is also planning to build greenhouses and carry on horticultural operations on a large scale.

In the center of the farm, Mr. Campe says, is an elevation which is agreed to be the highest ground in Franklin county, being fifty feet higher than the famous Arlington Heights, near Cincinnati. It was formerly known as Spangler's Hill, but has recently been rechristened Hartman Crest. This hill, whose surface is about twenty-five acres in extent, is a part of the tract which Mr. Campe is laying out as a park.

The Hartman Stock Farm has an area of about 5,000 acres. It is locally known as the White City, on account of the fact that the buildings are all painted white. It is owned by Dr. S. B. Hartman, the proprietor of the Peruna Drug Mfg. Co. As the farm is already distinguished for the fine breeds of horses and other animals which are raised on it, it seems probable that the new horticultural enterprise will also be successful.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The dark weather caused a shortage of flowers the first part of the week. Carnations and violets are still in arrears, but roses are plentiful. The temperature dropped considerably, and heavy frosts are experienced.

Various Notes.

The sympathy of the trade is with Leo Brandt, of the City Workhouse, who lost his wife last week.

Minneapolis florists visiting the Chicago show express themselves as highly satisfied, and all, apparently, had a good time.

A. Hans, representing K. J. Kuyk, of Ghent, Belgium, is the forerunner of the Holland salesmen who favor us from now until spring. M. E. M.

WYANDOTTE, MICH.—John E. Smith recently held a two days' flower show at his place, to mark the opening of his remodeled and enlarged greenhouses. When Mr. Smith came here, nearly sixteen years ago, he opened a greenhouse in a small building which formerly stood on the same corner where he is now located. About four years ago adjoining land was purchased and three houses were built on the Poplar street frontage. Last year several more new buildings were erected on Second street, and the present establishment covers 8,000 square feet of ground.

ORCHIDS FRESHLY IMPORTED

DENVER.

The Market.

Trade last week was good. Social events were numerous and created a good demand, while there was a good call for funeral flowers. The quantity of material arriving, however, is more than the market can use, so in some instances prices ruled low, especially on carnations and chrysanthemums. With the passing of the mums an improvement may come, for it is certainly much wanted.

Roses are plentiful in all varieties and the quality has improved steadily since good weather came. Carnations are far too abundant and likely will be so until the mum season is over. The price does not seem to move them, and they are of midwinter quality, too. There has been some complaint that the Rose-pink Enchantress is not a good keeper.

Violets are coming in now in fair quality, and the quantity is enough to meet all demands.

It looks as if there would be a plentiful supply of all kinds of flowers for Thanksgiving.

Various Notes.

The great society event of the season, so far, was the Evans-Cheeseman wedding, it perhaps having more elaborate decorations than any that preceded it. The work was done by E. F. Neiman, of the Park Floral Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross S. Mahan and daughter, of the Columbine Floral Co., expect to go to California for Mr. Mahan's health. He has been in poor health for some time. E. S. K.

Now that Election is Over and the Uncertainties Removed

Prepare for Thanksgiving and Christmas

We protect the trade. We employ no fakers, no drummers. No department stores handle our goods. We have great faith in Uncle Sam (the mail). He is our partner.

Look at the photo! What a lively time at Aschmann's, the busy bee unpacking his big importations of Azaleas, Palms, etc. We have it. Have what? An immense stock of the choicest salable plants in season and everybody who sees them will be astonished and say, "No use talking, you're a cracker-jack." I am going to make things lively this fall. Five thousand Araucarias, twice as many Ferns, Palms and Azaleas and many thousands of other salable stock must go at panic prices. By Christmas all must be sold. Why? We want the room to force our extensive Easter stock.

We Lead the Country in Araucarias

Have been in the lead in the past; have it now and shall lead in the future.

We have houses full of choice Excelsa robusta compacta and Excelsa glauca; enough to supply the entire country.

Will you pay 50 per cent to 100 per cent more by buying from others who are not specialists? Hope not; the wise are on guard. We are going to sell all of them and without drummers. By jingo, we must sell them; an elephant for 40c, 50c and 60c; a jumbo for 75c to $1.00; and a holy terror in size for $1.25 to $1.50.

TAKE NOTICE!

Plants have grown considerably and are now fully 10 per cent to 20 per cent bigger than advertised below.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitmani and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in sunny houses (not whitewashed), which will produce stiff fronds; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta. Perfect shape, nothing finer grown, a houseful to sell, 3 to 4 tiers, 4 years old, 20, 25 to 28 inches, $1.25, $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, spring importation 1908, have a houseful; plants, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 4 years old, 22, 24, 26, 28 to 30 inches high, the same in width, perfect beauties, $1.25, $150, $1.75 up to $2.00; specimens, 40 inches high, $2.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Scottii Ferns, never before were as fine, 5-in., 35c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c and 60c; 7-in. pots, very fine, 75c; $1.00 to $1.25.

Piersoni, 6-in., 50c.

Whitmani, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, made up or as big as a bushel basket, only $1.00, worth $1.50; 8-in. pans, three large plants in a pan, $1.00; 9-in. pans, 3 large plants in a pan, as big as a wash tub, $1.25 to $1.50. We have a big stock of these varieties and they are pot, not bench grown. Amerpohlii, 5-in., 30c, 35c to 40c.

Wilsoni, 6-in. pans, made up, 25c to 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 to 6 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 20 inches high, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, a large one, about 40 inches high, in the center, surrounded by three smaller ones, $4.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 36 inches high, $2.00; specimen, 7-in., 40 to 50 inches high, $2.50 to $3.00; 6-in., 30 inches high, $1.50; 6-in., 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00; 6-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in., 50c; 4-in. pots, 35c.

Cocos Weddelliana, bushy plants, 3-in., 15c, 18c and 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, 2½-in., $4.00 per 100; 3-in., 6c. A big stock, best assortment.

USE OF NICOTINE.

The article in the REVIEW of October 29, in reference to the use of extracts of tobacco, was quite clear, but I would like to ask when is the best time to spray? It is stated it should be done when the thrips are feeding. How often should it be done? I. A. P.

On cloudy days and evenings are suitable times to apply nicotine extracts. There is more danger of injury by burning if spraying is done while the sunshine falls on the plants. So much depends on the varieties of plants which need spraying, that it is difficult to advise you how often to apply the nicotine. If you have a bad dose of thrips, give sprayings on alternate days for a week. After that once in a week or ten days will keep the thrips and aphis in hand.

ANOTHER BULB GROWER'S VIEW.

Now that Mr. Reid has had his final say, may I have one? He has moderated his tone, but I trust the trade will conceive he is going beyond reason when he talks of "eliminating" the southern grown bulb flowers. There are plenty who are pleased to handle them and do not wish them eliminated. Such a thing will not occur. On the contrary, it would be an easy matter for us to combine as the Rhinebeck people have done, and market our own stock, although it will not come to that. As an onlooker in this controversy, I thank you for the advertisement you have given the southern bulb stock. I have no doubt it will bring us many direct orders.

In conclusion, as to demoralizing the market, I fear it is often in this state. What is doing it now? And what did it last May? At that time we were not demoralizing it, and yet we bought the best carnations we ever saw at $10 per thousand at Philadelphia. They were worth about half this at New York.

As to our flowers being a side issue, this is wrong. By selling the blooms we can afford to and do sell our bulbs at fifty per cent below the cost of imported stock. If our shipments get in the way of florists who force bulbs, they are very slow, because we do not ship until March, which leaves them January and February. We force one house and we fire sufficiently to clear it by February 20. I think this should explain away the gentleman's objection.

W. O. D'ALCORN.

NOT A QUESTION OF ETHICS.

In regard to Mr. Reid's and Mr. Guille's bulb discussion, I do not see that the right of one or the other to do or not to do has much bearing on the question, for that question is not an ethical proposition, but a business proposition, and will settle itself, as all other such questions settle themselves, on a basis of profit and loss. Ethics have no standing or show when they come in contact with the mighty dollar; not even our sacred law stands much of a chance nowadays. Why should ethics in business be an exception?

If the bulb grower in Virginia finds it profitable to grow outdoor cut flowers from his bulbs and ship them north, he has the inalienable right to do so, even if every producer in the north of glass-grown forced cut flowers or bulbs has to go out of business in that line. It will not come to that, of course, but if it did those northern growers would disappear from the markets as bulb-consumers. Then the question would revert to the grower of bulbs: is there profit enough in his cut flower sales to make up for the loss of sales on bulbs from the men he has forced out of that line? If there is, you will find him selling all the cut flowers he can produce, or find a market for, in spite of any business ethics. If there is not, the gentlemen will quit it of their own volition. They will soon find out that they can't eat their cake and have it, too.

J. J. NUSSBAUMER.

WACO, TEX.—At a meeting of florists, held at the Business Men's Club rooms October 26, it was determined to have a flower show here sometime in November, the action being taken independently of the Waco Floral Society, the officers and directors of which had decided to eliminate the annual exhibit this year. The date for the show has not yet been named.

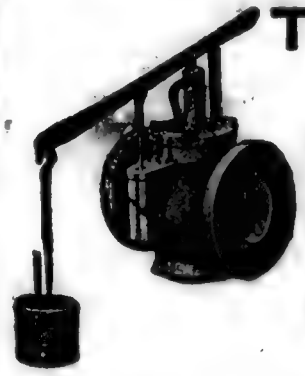
Greenhouse Heating.

AUTOMATIC STOKERS.

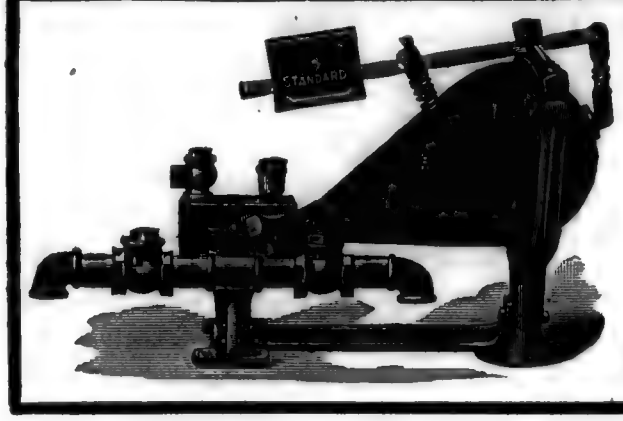
In recent years there has been a pronounced improvement in the character of the heating systems of the leading greenhouse establishments. Quite a number now operate electric lighting plants of their own and several have artificial refrigerating plants, operated in connection with their boiler plants.

Added to the need for economy in fuel, a good many greenhouse owners have found themselves confronted with the question of the smoke nuisance, and much interest has been taken in the various systems employed in power plants to meet these needs. The F. R. Williams Co., Cleveland, has just put in its second Murphy Automatic Smokeless Furnace. This is only applicable to high pressure steam boilers. The first one gave them such good results that a second was installed. In common with all mechanical stokers, it feeds the coal without opening the fire doors, thus adding to efficiency and economy. The fire also is cleaned and the ash removed automatically. The feed being in continuous operation, there is no period of belching smoke, the chimney being almost clear.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., Bakerstown, Pa., also has put in two of these stokers at a cost of $1,850.



CINCINNATI.



The Market.

Business here is still quite satisfactory and we have every reason to be hopeful that it will continue so. The demand seems to be a steady one, and while there are days when business is not quite up to the mark, it usually happens that the following day makes up for it, and the general average is what counts, after all. There have been quite a number of coming-out receptions and parties, and these have used up a great quantity of stock, and it is always the best stock, too. The average price of all varieties of flowers is gradually moving upward, with every prospect that the prices obtained at Thanksgiving will be good. There has also been a great deal of funeral work, of which large sprays of mums have formed a great part.

We had the first snow of the season November 13, but it was light. Good, hard frosts occur every night. In fact, so far as the weather is concerned, we are in winter. The sky is clear most of the time, though, and that makes conditions pretty good in the greenhouses. Stock is coming in fine shape, and the quality is first-class, but the bright weather has been forcing it along pretty fast, and we are beginning to wonder what will happen should a couple of weeks of dark, cloudy weather be handed out to us.

Thanksgiving day is now upon us, and we are ready to welcome it. The last few years have developed this day into one of the best of the year. Prices are not raised so high as to be out of reach of the average buyer, as at Christmas time, and in consequence great quantities of flowers are handled at good prices, and they go into the homes of the middle class of buyers. Thus Thanksgiving day is a day of general satisfac-

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY, Chicago, Ill.
GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two, purchased of you last year. We would not have them out for double their cost, and find them as sensitive as a watch. We will be in Chicago soon to take up the vacuum system with you.
Yours truly,

CAPITOL BOILERS

"Better be safe than sorry"

With the Capitol Boiler you can heat your greenhouse more entirely, thoroughly, completely, and more economically than you can with any other make of boiler. You are less liable to accident, and if you do meet with an accident, you can make quick repairs (because of the divided sections); you can make repairs without subjecting plants to injury by reason of lower temperature—because of the quickness with which repairs can be made on Capitol Boilers.

You are not obliged to be constantly keeping up the fire in a Capitol Boiler. It requires very little attention, and is very economical in fuel, while burning all grades of coal and wood.

It is better to be safe than sorry. Put in a Capitol Boiler. Any of our Branches or Sales Agencies will give you prompt attention, or you can direct your correspondence to the Home Office.

tion all around and we look forward to its coming with a great deal of pleasure. Everything points to its being a record-breaker this year.

The supply of stock for this market is much the same as reported last week. Beauties are somewhat scarce and violets are not equal to the demand. The price of both flowers is advancing. The double violets from the Virginia mountains are of better quality than they have been for years, and they are bringing better prices in consequence. Valley is selling especially well and lilies are in demand at good prices.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club room Saturday evening, November 14. There was little business of special importance to come before the meeting, but there was plenty to talk over, and the time was used to good purpose.

A number of the local boys are out after the rabbit and the quail and, from all reports, the carnage has been frightful, but so far we have seen nothing but feathers, and mighty few of them. George Magrie and Wm. Gardner went out last Saturday, and George Murphy reports that a hunting party is forming, and that they will soon be out in full force. As they are all good shots, we expect them to return with full gamebags.

C. P. Berthard, of the Ferncliff Floral Co., Springfield, O., was a caller.

The boys are all back from the flower show now, and they all report having seen a great show and having had a great time. C. J. Ohmer.

Wichita, Kan.—Charles P. Mueller recently invited the public to a special display of roses, chrysanthemums and violets in his greenhouses, at Hydraulic avenue and Ninth street. Large crowds attended and were highly pleased with the exhibition. Most of the visitors traveled in a special car, which was suitably decorated. Mr. Mueller has fourteen greenhouses, including three carnation houses, three rose houses and a violet house.

We are having much rain at present and have not had much cold weather yet. During these gloomy days many potted plants find their way into the homes. Gloire de Lorraine begonias, cyclamen and lily of the valley are among the specimen plants, while ferns in different varieties still hold their own. Large Cibotium Schiedei are seen in the floral stores and they are used much for decorating. Many dances are scheduled for this winter and more or less decorating will be done.

Various Notes.

A. J. Baur has gone on a business trip to Chicago.

Harry Kessler, of the Scranton Florists' Supply Co., was in the city this week.

Charles Offerle has moved into his new home on West Ninth street. Mr. Wolf is occupying the residence connected with Offerle & Schaal's greenhouses.

Roman Olskewski has opened a new floral store on Parade street.

Lewis Walker, an employee of the Baur Floral Co., has returned from a visit in Harbour Creek, Pa.

Vern Schluraff is well pleased with the prospects for his retail store in Conneaut, O. Convenient transportation by trolley enables him to keep up a good stock in his store, supplied by his greenhouses in Erie. The distance is thirty-two miles. B. P.

Beloit, Wis.—J. C. McMaster, who has greenhouses at 1141 West Grand avenue, is making preparations to build an addition, and thinks the prospects for business are encouraging.

No more old style alcohol lamps. This one saves you the extra expense of buying alcohol. Fill it with kerosene just as you would an ordinary lamp. Burner is standard size and furnished with wick. No solder to melt. Cup and oil pot made of one piece of metal.

Impossible for the Defiance Lamp to leak or get out of order.

Evaporates To-Bak-Ine Liquid, Nicoticide, Nico-Fume or any similar preparation and is guaranteed to do it better than any other lamp made.

Ask greenhouse men of Irondequoit, N. Y., about this lamp.

Geo. W. Titus & Co. say: "Would use nothing else."

Dell Titus says: "Very satisfactory."

That's what you will say when you use it.

Sample lamp by mail, 40 cents.

—a McCray built-to-order refrigerator—Quartered Oak with beveled mirror over display doors.

Florists Require the Best refrigerator they can get to keep their stock in a salable condition. Flowers require the best system of cooling to keep them fresh, fragrant and attractive to the buyer. Florists have greater success by using McCray Refrigerators.

McCray Refrigerators are built especially for florists. They have a patented system of refrigeration, which forces pure, fresh and cold air to all corners of the storage compartment. A McCray uses less ice than any other refrigerator. This saving in ice actually pays the first cost. They are lined with white enamel, tile, opal glass, marble or mirrors, as you prefer—easily kept clean and sweet and sanitary at all times.

The McCray line for florists consists of a wide range of regular sizes for immediate shipment, or they may be built to order for any requirement.

Write today—at once, for beautiful descriptive catalog No. 71, showing the entire line for Florists.

Girvin's Handy Cutter

Mr. Florist, if you once get one of these cutters on your finger you will never be without it for many times the price. Just the thing for cutting your carnations, sweet peas, asters, melons, grapes, etc. Why be bothered with a knife or follow the old way of breaking your flowers when a Handy Cutter will do the work better and save you money and time? Don't continue breaking your carnations and thus ruin hundreds of young shoots daily, simply because a knife is unhandy to work with, but try a Handy Cutter. If you are not entirely satisfied with it you can return it and have your money refunded. These cutters are made of spring brass, highly nickel-plated, and contain a removable blade.

ADVANCE
Ventilating Apparatus

It was a great pleasure to meet the many pleased customers of our line at the National Flower Show and to make so many new acquaintances. It was good to be there in more ways than one—to see the high standard attained in flower growing—to be in touch with the men that made the show possible and to hear the keen criticisms and approvals of other growers. It showed that we must have a line of merit to win the universal approval of all florists who have tried our line. Send for our new circular and prices.

The Market.

Things were livelier last week, there being several important weddings and debutante teas that made quite a demand for flowers. Chrysanthemums still hold the boards, and vases of choice Eatons, Bonnaffon, Chadwick and Jones give a gala appearance to the stores. Prices are about as last week, ranging from 75 cents to $4 per dozen. Roses are plentiful and of good quality. Carnations are moving well, easily holding their own in the race with other flowers. There are some good cyclamens seen in the market, and they sell well.

Saturday, November 14, Baltimore was visited by a sudden, heavy snow storm that almost paralyzed the market. The flakes were large, wet and plentiful, and with a brisk wind to give them momentum, they made quick work in covering everything with about six inches of snow. Fortunately, frost did not immediately follow the storm. This storm was the fourth snow storm that we have had in November in thirty-eight years. The others were on November 30, 1896, November 26, 1898, and November 13, 1904.

Various Notes.

The illustrated lecture which was given by J. Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia, at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, November 9, was well attended by members and their friends, who were delighted by the beauty of the views of Yellowstone Park. There were some fine vases of new seedling carnations; also a new mum called Golden King, scoring 98 points, which was grown by G. A. Lotze, of Glen Burnie, Md. A fine collection was also sent to the club from College Park, Md.

On Friday, November 13, the members of the club went over to Washington to see the mum show, stopping off at College Park for three hours and then continuing on to Washington, where a royal good time awaited them. The mum show was far superior to any seen there before.

The park board has asked for bids for about 40,000 pansy plants, to be delivered in March, for the parks and squares, as they make a much nicer display than bulbs. Q.

Looking Ahead

The National Flower Show, at Chicago, has demonstrated beyond all question that the love of flowers is growing throughout the country. The people are becoming educated in the right direction and everything indicates that the supply furnished for 1908 must be materially increased for 1909. More flowers will be used next year than ever before and the florists will be called upon to grow and produce them. If you are up to your capacity now, you will need to add more glass next spring and when you come to buy the new house, don't forget that we are foremost in the construction of the commercial greenhouse. Don't overlook the fact that we sell nothing that is inferior in quality, design or workmanship, and that, consistent with high-grade goods, our prices are reasonably low. We are always ready and willing to furnish sketches or estimates without charge and will be pleased to talk matters over at any time.

About the Frame and One Detail

It is not alone the matter of fastening the wood work to the iron frame, but first the iron members, such as the purlins, must be the right size for right strength to carry the roof—after that come the fastenings, such as Purlin End Header, for instance. You see from the cut that this Purlin End Header of ours is bolted (not screwed) to the header, and the purlin is securely held to it by a set screw. It not only supports the purlins, but virtually ties the gables together, giving an additional framing strength to your entire house. We just mention this bearer, used in our Semi-iron House, as an example of the thorough way we take care of every little detail of our construction.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

RESTARTING ROSES.

Can I start digging and manuring my rose house now? It has had two months' rest. When shall I start the plants going again, in order to have roses in January? W. M.

This work ought to have been done during August or September.

The best thing to do now would be to remove two or three inches of the top soil and replace with a mulch composed of two parts decomposed cow manure and one part good sod from old pasture land, adding a 4-inch potful of bone meal to each bushel of compost. Give the bench a thorough soaking. Give plenty of ventilation and keep the syringe going. RIBES.

MILDEW AND LEAF BLIGHT.

Enclosed you will find a branch of a Richmond rose. All our roses seem to be affected in the same way. They were planted in July. We used cow manure and they grew excellently. They were troubled a little with mildew, but not a great deal. The leaves seem to drop off at the least jar, but the plants are blooming nicely. What is the cause and the remedy? J. Y. L.

When the leaves reached me they were much dried up, which made it difficult to identify the trouble. They have at least some mildew and are also affected with some other fungous trouble, probably rose leaf blight. This trouble usually arises from defective drainage and a cold, damp atmosphere. From the fact that the leaves are easily jarred off, I am convinced this is the trouble.

Spray with the carbonate of copper compound, using five ounces of the carbonate to three quarts of ammonia and sixty gallons of water. Spray once a week, using a fine nozzle, and see that every part of the leaves gets wet. This is a sovereign remedy for many of the fungi which trouble the rose under glass. RIBES.

A FLOODED ROSE GARDEN.

I am somewhat perplexed and take the liberty to write to you for advice, as it is imperative that prompt action be taken to save our stock. We are located in Florida, on sandy soil, one-fourth mile from the river and one mile from the ocean. We have about 2,000 rose bushes in our garden and have been having a flood during the last ten days. Part of the time the water has been an inch deep on our ground. It is not now above the surface, but the ground is absolutely saturated, so that the roots are in water. We have done our best to drain the water off, but it keeps raining and so renews the oversupply daily faster than we can get rid of it.

As soon as the flood is past, some strenuous action will be needed to save our roses. What course would you suggest for best results in resuscitating the plants, fertilizing, etc.? Any suggestions you can favor us with along this line will be greatly appreciated. J. W. W.

The best thing to do with your rose beds is to drain off the surface water as soon as possible and then hoe up the surface to the depth of three or four inches. By keeping the surface open there will be less danger of souring, and if this can be prevented there is little danger to be feared from the effects of the flood. Of course the plants will be somewhat weakened and it would be dangerous to lift or shift them until they recover.

I have had my roses practically under water, in the greenhouses, for seven days during zero weather, without hurting them further than the loss of crop on them. RIBES.

BEST HARDY ROSES.

Will you kindly send us a list of such roses as would be best suited to offer to a first-class suburban trade, to people who take an interest in their own flower garden, for open ground culture in the latitude of Maryland? The requirements, we suppose, are hardy, thrifty growers, frequent and abundant bloomers, flowers of good form, as wide an assortment of colors as practicable, and sufficient newness to attract those who already have a number in their rose beds.

Also what climbers would attract this same trade?

Any information and help you will give us in this matter will be greatly appreciated. J. B. & S.

The greatest trouble in handling roses for this class of work is to keep the list small and at the same time be able to fill orders from amateurs, as their wants cover such a long list. The following varieties are all good growers, free bloomers, and hardy in your section:

Hybrid perpetuals — Alfred Colomb, carmine crimson; American Beauty, deep pink; Anna de Diesbach, carmine; Baron de Bonstettin, maroon; Baroness Rothschild, light pink; Clio, flesh colored; Fisher Holmes, crimson; Frau Karl Druschki, white; Gen. Jacqueminot, crimson; John Hopper, bright rose; Magna Charta, pink; Margaret Dickson, white with flesh center; Marie Baumann, carmine crimson; Marshall P. Wilder, cherry red; Mrs. John Laing, soft pink; Paul Neyron, deep rose; Prince Camille de Rohan, deep crimson; Ulrich Brunner, cherry red; Victor Verdier, bright rose.

Hybrid teas and teas—Caroline Testout, bright rose; Etoile de France, crimson; Gruss an Teplitz, scarlet, shading to crimson; Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, white; Killarney, flesh color; La France, silvery rose; Maman Cochet, carmine rose; Maman Cochet, white.

Climbers — Crimson Rambler, Pink Rambler, White Rambler, Yellow Rambler, Marechal Niel, yellow; Tausendschon, pink, turning to bright rose.

There are also the Wichuraiana class, containing such varieties as Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins, Farquhar, etc., which are attractive and command ready sales.

Procure a catalogue from a good firm which makes a specialty of roses. Such catalogues usually contain many profitable suggestions as to suitability, climatic requirements, etc. RIBES.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

TO INCREASE CASH SALES.

In the REVIEW of October 29 I notice that a subscriber complains of small cash sales, and as I, as well as a good many others in the trade, have had the same trouble, I should like to give my experience and remedy along this line.

A great many retail florists throughout the country, especially in the smaller towns, are men who have started in the business in a small way and have built up their trade gradually and slowly by doing all their own growing, building, etc., and a good many are general manager, foreman, grower and salesman, all combined. These florists, as a rule, have greenhouses out some distance from the center of the town and stick pretty closely to work in the houses, without making much effort to develop their ability to sell. They grow plenty of flowers, but their customers come only as occasion demands and their trade is mostly funeral work. They never think of trying to create a demand for flowers for all occasions.

Most of these retail florists in small towns, especially in the milder climates, have not much competition and they sit down, or rather work themselves down, at their greenhouses and wither away with their flowers. I will tell them right now that the only sure way to enliven things is by advertising.

Advertise whether you have competition or not. Advertise until you have everyone in your town thinking about flowers. Advertise until you make that young fellow think it is just as necessary to have the bride's bouquet as it is to have the license. Advertise until you make him think the other fellow will get his best girl unless he sends her a box of flowers every few days. Advertise until that young lady will think her sick friend will die unless she sends a box of bright, cheerful flowers. Make the people who are going to have that card party think they will be disgraced unless their house is decorated. Advertise until you make that young married man think his mother-in-law will come and live with him unless he keeps her yard and veranda nicely filled with bedding and pot plants.

Be honest in your ads. Come right out and tell these people a few things.

Why are so many bananas sold all over this country? We don't have to have them. It's because they hang out in front of every grocery and fruit store in town. You may not be able to hang your flowers out so your customer can see them, but you can hang an ad in front of their eyes every time they pick up their newspaper.

Don't say anything about funerals or floral designs in your ads. You and your friends will have to think about these things soon enough, and you can depend on it, that if you will advertise and talk your trade up to flowers for all occasions, you will still get your share of funeral work. Some florists have advertised funeral work so much that their customers think about flowers only when their best friend is dead, and if you keep this up they will think of you only when you are dead.

Don't cut your prices. Put a fair and reasonable profit on your stuff and stick to it, and your customers will soon find out that your flowers are worth all you ask for them and pay the price.

Now, about that side line. That's the worst thing you can do. Don't side line. It's like side tracking. First thing you know, the other fellow will go right on by you in a hurry, and you will have to follow. Stay on the main track with the line you are running on, and be right there with the goods and let the people know it.

Advertise or bust. If you don't advertise your place, the sheriff might advertise it for you. C. J. Burdell.

THE TRAVELER'S BAG.

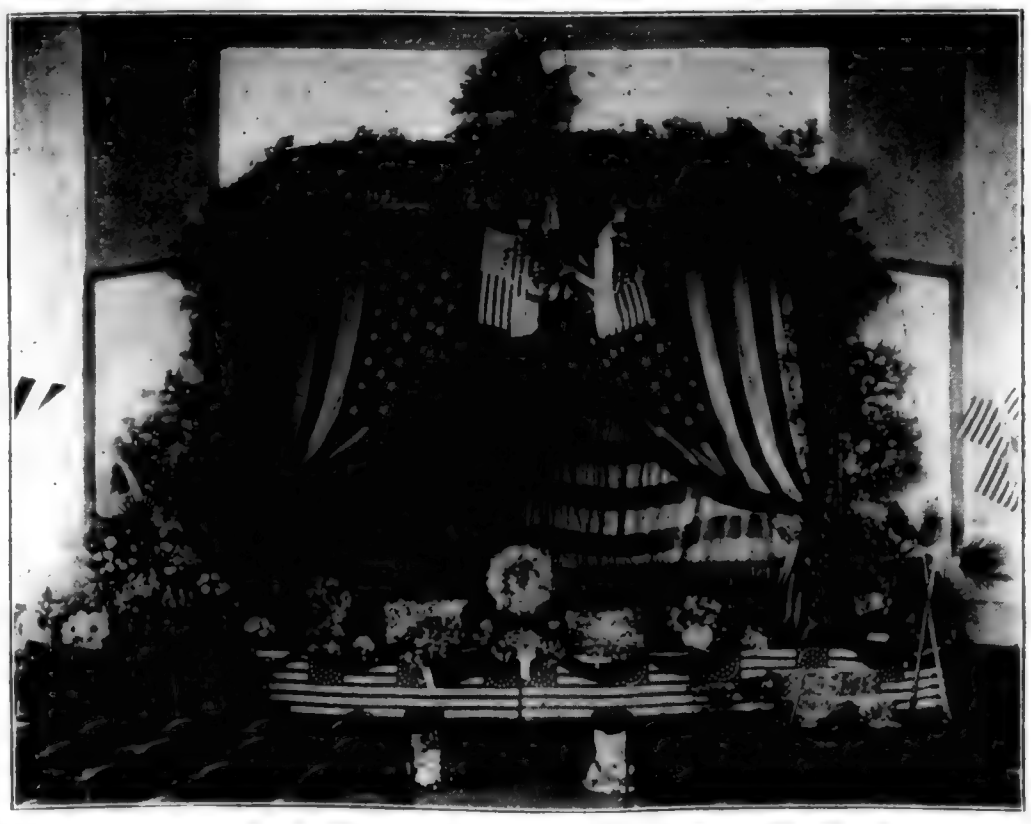
Every now and then the retail florist is called upon to make some unusual funeral design, something which shall typify the occupation of the late lamented.

Funeral Design by the Iowa Floral Co., Des Moines.

The accompanying illustration serves to show how well the Iowa Floral Co., Des Moines, the retail cut flower branch of the Iowa Seed Co., executed such a recent order.

This somewhat unusual design is a replica of an Oxford traveling bag such as is commonly used by commercial travelers. The body was made solid on all sides of Enchantress carnations, while the steel rib on top and on both ends was made of Lawsons. The handle consisted of violets wrapped on with green thread. The design was ordered by local traveling men and, when delivered, gave them great satisfaction. The emblem possessed one important realistic feature, in that it could be carried by the handle in spite of the weight of the wet moss. It may be noticed that an ordinary name plate was used, on which the names of the donors were written.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.



The florists in the country towns are in the majority and as such their work is of interest to all. Eaton Rapids is a Michigan town of only a few thousand people, but there are several progressive florists in the surrounding country, so when William Smith, an old soldier and leading citizen, was to be buried, the Mary La Fever Floral Co., the only florist in Eaton Rapids, naturally wanted to put its best foot forward in the matter of a decoration for the services. The accompanying illustration shows what was done.

THE SETTING SUN.

The setting sun is one of those standard arrangements that are called into being chiefly when variety is essential. The "sun" in the photograph was made with Chatenay roses, the field with Brides and lily of the valley. The same flowers are used in the star above. Whiteness of this design is further carried out by the Easter lilies in the base. This piece is one of the series of funeral designs by Charles Henry Fox, the Sign of the Rose, Phiadelphia, but Mr. Fox does not approve of this design, using it only when specially called for by a customer. Phil.

ANTIRRHINUM WILT.

Please tell me the cause and remedy for the wilt disease of antirrhinums. Large plants were lifted from the field in September and planted in five inches of soil on the bench. They were cut back when planted. They took hold and grew rapidly and appear perfectly healthy, except that now and then a branch will wilt in the middle of a sunny day, but will recover toward evening. This may go on for several days, but the recovery is less complete each day, until the branch remains wilted. Usually one branch after another is attacked until the plant is ruined, and the trouble is not checked by removing the first branch showing the disease. The plants are grown in a light, airy house with carnations, which are perfectly healthy. Is it necessary to spray foliage of antirrhinums to prevent red spider? I have never seen spider on it and do not wet the foliage. E. C. B.

Funeral Decoration by La Fever Floral Co., Eaton Rapids, Mich.

The Setting Sun.

The wilting you refer to is quite common with antirrhinums lifted from the open ground and planted in benches. It will also sometimes occur on plants grown in pots, but less frequently than in the case of the lifted stock. The cause is rather hard to determine. I think an excess of moisture at the roots before the plants become well established is the chief cause.

If the snapdragons, after planting, receive one thorough soaking they should be allowed to dry out fairly well before any more watering is done and the surface soil scratched over to let air in. Light sprayings overhead twice or three times a day will keep the foliage stiff.

In planting it is well to get small balls with antirrhinums. They do not lift so well as carnations. I have never seen them attacked by red spider and have had no occasion to syringe, with the object of combating that pest. Light sprayings on clear days in winter and spring are, however, beneficial. A carnation temperature, such as you have, should suit antirrhinums well. C. W.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

NEW YORK.

The Horticultural Society of New York gave its exhibition in the Museum of Natural History November 17 to 20, and, notwithstanding almost complete lack of recognition by the big daily newspapers of New York, nearly 10,000 visitors enjoyed the show, and were loud in praise of its extent and perfection. This indicates what would have been the appreciation had any effort been made by the press to let New Yorkers know of the feast that had been spread for them. W. E. Marshall made a competent manager. The space allotted the society was limited and, as F. R. Pierson said, if the show had been advertised the crush would have been beyond accommodation. Another year, with the whole lower floor of the great museum utilized, a flower show can be held that will throw all former efforts anywhere in the shade. A more beautiful and convenient place for the holding of a great exhibition cannot be found anywhere in the country.

Bobbink & Atkins sent over from Rutherford a forest of bay trees for decorative effect. F. R. Pierson Co., Julius Roehrs Co., Lager & Hurrell and Peter Duff were the largest exhibitors. C. H. Totty and Harry Turner responded nobly to the call for chrysanthemums. F. R. Pierson's exhibit of 500 carnations in 100 lots and five varieties was especially admired. H. A. Dreer sent Nephrolepis Scholzeli. Peter Duff had fourteen immense plants in his collection. James Cockcroft showed Carnation Georgia, and J. A. Manda a collection of orchids, including his Laelio-cattleya Irene, which took the prize for the best novelty not before on exhibition. Burnham and Nugent were the only retailers who made displays, and their artistic offerings were greatly admired. Nugent's wedding muff of valley and orchids was unique and original. Julius Roehrs sent a fine assortment of decorative plants. The Wanoka Greenhouses sent their new carnation, Wanoka. W. H. Waite sent three immense chrysanthemum plants.

In chrysanthemum plants the premium for three specimen bush plants went to Samuel Untermyer, all the other premiums in this section going to Peter Duff.

For chrysanthemum cut blooms, Howard Gould and Samuel Thorne divided honors about equally. C. H. Totty received the society's diploma for new varieties. F. R. Pierson Co. was first on pompons and Samuel Untermyer for singles and anemones. Howard Gould was first for the exhibit of blooms on short stems.

W. Rockefeller was first for Beauty, F. W. Howes for Killarney, and J. J. Riker for Richmond and Chatenay.

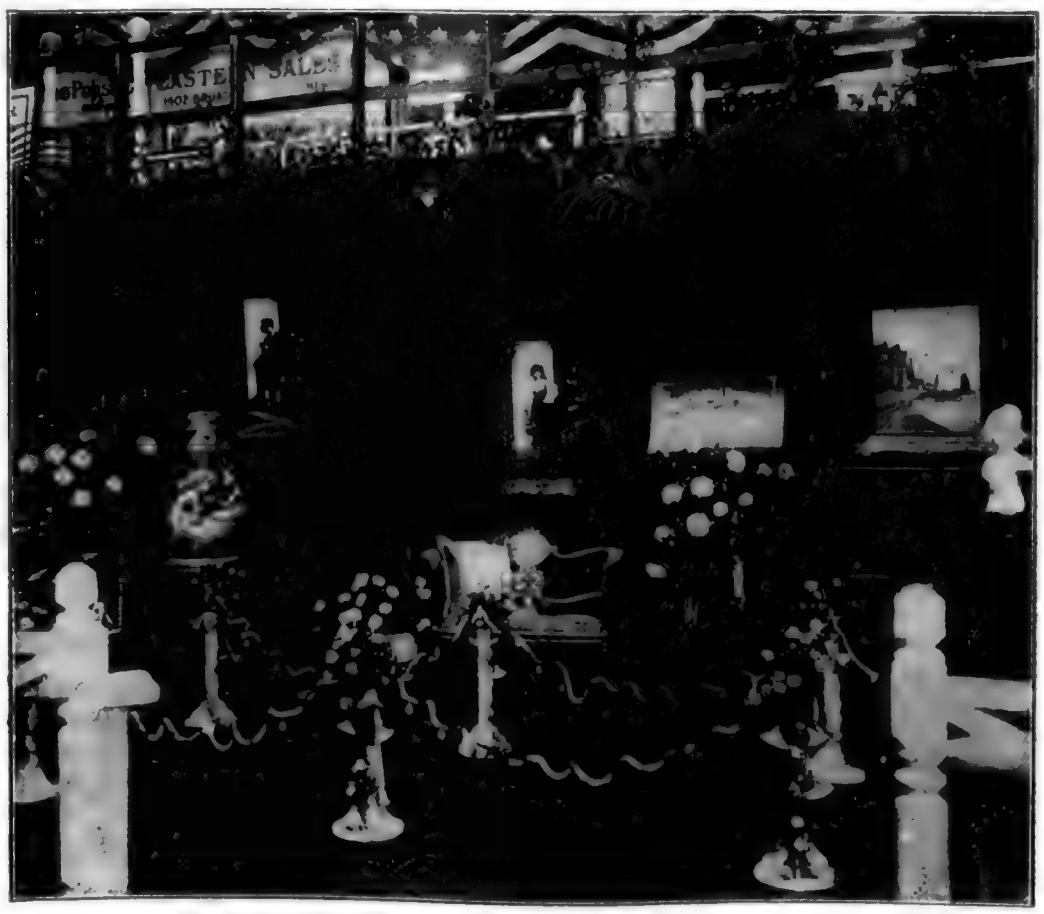
In the carnation classes F. R. Pierson Co. was first for white, Winsor, Enchantress, Crimson and Lawson color in the 100 lots. They also were first for best new variety, with Governor Hughes. Georgia and Apple Blossom were certificated. C. L. Bausher was first for white, Samuel Untermyer first for Winsor and scarlet, M. B. Metcalf for Enchantress and Fred Potter for crimson in the twenty-fives.

Young & Nugent were first for bridal bouquet muff, Bloomingdale Bros. for shower bouquet, debutante's bouquet and cotillion favors.

Julius Roehrs Co. was first for table of greenhouse plants, collection of conifers and for plants in pots suitable for table decoration. E. H. Weatherby was first for table of ferns, Bloomingdale Bros. first for fernery and for both indoor and outdoor window-boxes. Mrs. Henry Siegel was first for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

White Killarney received a silver medal, Nephrolepis Scholzeli a certificate of merit and Celosia Pride of Castle Gould a cultural certificate of merit.

Lager & Hurrell were first for collection of orchids, Julius Roehrs Co. receiving a certificate. Julius Roehrs Co. was first for three hybrid orchids. C. Moore was first for one hybrid orchid, with Lager & Hurrell second. Julius Roehrs Co. was first for Cattleya labiata and for twelve orchid plants in bloom. Samuel Untermyer was first for most of the amateur classes for orchids.



Special mention was made of the rare plants from the New York Botanic Garden, of the collection of orchids from J. A. Manda, of the chrysanthemum blooms from C. H. Totty and the Richmond roses from F. R. Newbold.

QUALITY OF SOIL.

We are sending you under separate cover two samples of soil. Please tell us what is wrong. You will see by the Primula obconica how it acts. It works the same on foliage, ferns and geraniums, only they do not make any root action. It may not be the soil, but we have tried almost everything. J. S.

The soil in which the Primula obconica was growing was much too heavy to grow this or any other of the soft-wooded plants well. If you would add not less than one-third leaf-mold, well decayed, and some old cow manure passed through a half-inch screen, it would lighten and enrich the compost so that plants of this description would do well in it. Also use some sharp sand to keep the soil porous. For ferns, leaf-mold is preferable to cow manure, but for vigorous growing sorts some of the latter may be added. It is safer, however, to apply it in a liquid form. The second and smaller sample of loam forwarded appears to be heavy and will become pasty unless such ingredients as sand and leaf-mold are added.

For primulas, cyclamens, geraniums, cinerarias, calceolarias, begonias, gloxinias and gesneras you would do well to add one-third leaf-mold. Vigorous growing subjects like marguerites, hydrangeas, fuchsias, chrysanthemums, etc., will prefer decayed manure. Your soil contains no fiber at all. The best soil for all these plants is pasture sod cut and stacked for a year. If not yet too late, plow up and make yourself a pile of this compost. You can layer it with cow or sheep manure. When chopped down this will grow nearly any plants you have satisfactorily. C. W.

LATHYRUS LATIFOLIUS.

Will you please explain the best treatment of Lathyrus latifolius, or everlasting pea? I have several hundred in 4-inch pots, four or five in a pot, sown last August, and would like a better idea of the temperature required, the time to expect bloom, etc. V. L.

I have had no experience with the everlasting pea, Lathyrus latifolius, under glass, and do not know of anyone who has so cultivated it. I doubt if it will pay you to grow it in the greenhouse. The flowers lack odor, and even if the plants bloomed freely, which they would not in all probability, they would be of little commercial value.

The everlasting pea is useful on trellises and for rambling over walls and fences. It succeeds best if left for years undisturbed. The pure white form is a useful florists' flower. I would advise you to carry your plants over winter in a coldframe and plant them outside in early spring, feeling sure that indoor culture would only cause you disappointment. It will pay you much better to sow some of the winter-flowering sweet peas now. C. W.

SPIRAEA QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

When first exhibited at the Temple show in London a few years ago, this beautiful spiræa or astilbe caused a greater furor than any other novelty. It is the first really good pink forcing spiræa and has jumped into instant popularity both in Europe and America. The plant is much more vigorous in habit than S. Japonica, more closely resembling S. astilboides. The dense, compact spikes are of a beautiful peach-pink color and are produced in surprising abundance from the smallest clumps. Not only is it valuable for early forcing, but it is excellent as late as June. For both Easter and Memorial day trade it is one of the finest novelties introduced for years. The illustration shows a plant in a 6-inch pot. W. N. C.

Spiraea Queen Alexandra.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamen.

Possibly a few of the earliest cyclamen plants may have had sufficient flowers open to make them salable for Thanksgiving, but it is at Christmas that the principal quantity should be moved. Be sure not to crowd the plants. To do them justice each plant should stand clear of its neighbor. This will make perfect foliage possible, and a cyclamen well leaved will sell if only a small number of blooms are open. Avoid all overhead syringing. Pick off any damping or decaying foliage, and, if the pots are well filled with roots, afford the plants manure water twice a week, taking care not to make it too strong. A night temperature exceeding 50 degrees will be liable to draw the foliage up. It never pays to try any forcing tactics on cyclamens. Give plenty of fresh air unless severe outside.

How are the little seedlings coming along for another year's crop? All should now be pricked off in flats and growing on a light shelf. Keep the surface soil constantly stirred and avoid overwatering. We have found it a good plan to sow seeds two inches apart each way in flats and let the seedlings remain until large enough for potting. These seedlings are much larger than transplanted ones. The main trouble with this plan is that if seed is not good there will be many blanks, giving the flats a spotty appearance, and considerable care must be exercised in watering.

Gladioli.

The bulbs of the Gandavensis section of gladioli are now to hand and forcing varieties, such as May, Augusta and Shakespeare, may be planted at once. A bench from which mums have been cut will make an ideal spot for gladioli. Fork over the compost, adding some well decomposed manure, and there will be no need to renew the soil.

If there chances to be no vacant bench for gladioli, do not try dropping them among your carnations, snapdragons and other crops. One will only spoil the other. A better plan in this case would be to plant in boxes containing six inches of soil. The boxes can be moved around, but the benched bulbs of course are fixtures.

That fine variety, America, is the most popular variety grown today. G. Colvillei The Bride and the sports from same, with the various forms of G. nanus, are much better grown in flats than in benches, and there should be no delay in planting the main batch of them. They only fritter away their strength in paper bags.

Lily of the Valley.

The new season's valley pips are now coming to hand. It will not pay to force these before January, as they will start erratically. To grow valley a brisk bottom heat in winter is essential, that provided by hot water pipes being preferable to steam for this purpose. A brisk bottom heat and a top heat of 60 to 65 degrees is what valley wants for a start, lowering the temperature as the flowers are opening. Given a good bottom heat, lily of the valley should be ready in a little over three weeks from the time it was started. Valley is not fastidious as to soil, for it will grow as well in clean sand as in loam. The pips should be kept dark until well drawn up, by laying heavy paper over the glass on the case.

Hardy Lilies.

There should be no delay in planting hardy lilies, as bulbs are now to hand and it is all-important that these should be gotten below the soil as soon as possible, for the bulbs will suffer if left lying around the sheds. The general tendency still is to plant hardy lilies too shallow; unless the bulbs are small they should be covered not less than eight inches deep and if your soil is of good depth, ten to twelve inches will be better. In stiff ground, inclined to be clayey and moist, a layer of sharp sand should be placed below and over the bulbs after planting, and when the ground becomes well frozen, mulch with marsh hay or leaves.

The forms of L. speciosum are the most valuable commercially. L. auratum usually does well the first year and then deteriorates. L. Hansoni is a good, reliable sort. L. tigrinum, L. superbum, L. Canadense and Henryi are all good as a rule; however, the demand is more for white than colored varieties.

Any speciosums and auratums intended for culture in pots can be comfortably taken care of now that the mums are out of the way.

Hardy Roses.

The ground will probably soon freeze up tight. It hardly seems possible, while we are enjoying such extremely open weather, that winter may be almost with us. The best protection for hybrid perpetuals is to draw earth up to the stems. If the bushes are pruned back hard each year, there should be no trouble in affording the needed protection. As a rule the wood covered by the earth will appear green in spring, even if all else is killed. The plan often still adopted, of banking roses with leaves or manure, before winter sets in, will answer well in some spots, but there is no better protection than mother earth herself.

Hybrid teas and teas, except in a few favored spots near the ocean, are not classed as reliably hardy, even if protected well, and it is always safer to dig up and store any plants of those sections, heeling them in a coldframe or pot where they can have a little frost. If no frame is at liberty, lift and bury the hybrid teas outdoors, laying a coating of straw or leaves over the surface.

Bulbous Plants.

Some of the earliest La Reine, Duc van Thol or Tournesol tulips will now have grown sufficiently to be removed to the greenhouse. Keep them darkened for a few days in order to draw up the stems, the general trouble with early tulips always being lack of stem. Trumpet Majors wanted for Christmas should also be housed if they have not already been taken in. Golden Spurs cannot be forced successfully for Christmas. Paper Whites and Romans both come on quickly when placed in heat, about three weeks being sufficient time to flower them in a temperature of 60 degrees. It is better, especially in the case of Paper Whites, to bring them along cooler, the flowers then having so much more substance.

Be sure that all Dutch bulbs in pots, pans or flats are not suffering from dryness. More forcing bulbs are ruined by dryness in the early stages of growth than by an excess of moisture.

Sweet Peas.

The early batch of sweet peas is now over three feet in height and giving us flowers with fine stems. These are constantly lengthening and by Christmas will be satisfactory. We find it necessary to look over the plants twice a week and loosely tie up the stems. The night temperature is kept at 45 to 50 degrees and it is better not to allow it to go any higher. Do not be tempted to try a little forcing to bring in a heavy Christmas crop. It will tell on your plants for the balance of the season.

The latest mums will now be mostly out of the way and any spare beds can be planted with sweet peas. Avoid too thick planting and be sure that you allow them abundant head room. Do not omit a fumigation once a week to keep insects in check.

AZALEAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Kindly inform me how many weeks before Christmas, and at what temperature, I should start to force azaleas for Christmas trade. K. V. O.

Azalea Indica wanted in flower for Christmas should be placed in heat at once. Do not start too warm at first; 50 degrees to 55 degrees at night is sufficient, or leaf growth is too much encouraged. After a fortnight you can raise the temperature 5 degrees to 10 degrees. As the plants come into bloom, remove them to a somewhat cooler house. Ply the syringe freely among them, especially on warm, bright days. The little Firefly, or Hexe, forces perhaps the most easily of any of the azaleas. Of the whites, Deutsche Perle is the earliest. Apollo is the best forcing red. Other suitable early varieties are Vervæneana, Simon Mardner and Mrs. Petrick. Charles Enke is a pretty little dwarf pink in the way of Hexe.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Plow the Field This Fall.

If you have provided your bench soil for next season, as I suggested some weeks ago, there is still another thing you will do well to look after before winter sets in. You are not likely to use any more of the carnation plants which are left out in the field. If you intend planting your young stock on the same ground next year you can pull up all that are left and have the ground plowed over this fall. Have it plowed as deep as possible and let it lie in a rough state.

This is to let the frost and the air into it during the winter. You will be surprised and pleased to see how it will help to mellow a soil which is inclined to be heavy and lumpy. This is a practice which could be followed with profit much more generally than it is.

During the winter you can spread on the field a coat of manure in quantity as your judgment may dictate. My advice would be to put it on shortly before you wish to plow in the spring, as the ground will dry out earlier if not covered with manure. A good plan is to make small piles at regular distances over the field. Then in the spring it needs only to be spread before plowing.

Give this matter your attention before bad weather sets in. A. F. J. Baur.

SPLIT CARNATIONS.

Can you tell me why most of my carnations split? Is it the heat, ventilation, or not enough water? Early in the fall they were lovely, but now those that open out are all split. In the daytime the temperature is about 60 to 70 degrees, and at night or early in the morning it is below 50 degrees. C. M. H.

There are many things which may cause carnations to split their calyx and, without more data to work on, it would be impossible for me to say what is the cause in your case. The most frequent cause, however, is irregularity in temperature. Extreme and sudden variations in temperature will cause almost any variety to split, and at this time of the year, when firing is done intermittently, this matter of even temperature is not so easy to control. Splitting may also be brought on by overfeeding, but that usually happens later—in midwinter. If the soil is dry at the bottom, that also may cause splitting of calyxes. So be careful with the temperature, with the watering and the feeding, and give all the ventilation you can at all times.

FAIRY RING.

Please tell me what is the disease, cause and remedy of the enclosed samples of carnations. The plants look fairly healthy, but as soon as the buds appear the disease manifests itself and ruins the flowers. The plants were bought from a reputable grower early in the spring, but never appeared strong while in the field. Can you suggest a remedy, as a great many plants are affected with the disease? P. C. M.

The specimens forwarded showed that your plants are affected with fairy ring and you will have to adopt vigorous methods to rid them of this disease. Of all the spot diseases this seems to be the most tenacious and the most difficult to get rid of when once it gets a good start. From now on the weather is likely to be against you, too.

To begin with, you will do well to cut off every leaf or stem that shows a spot, and burn it. Go over the plants daily, picking off newly developed spots, even though you may almost strip some of the plants. After having cleaned the plants, spray them with Bordeaux mixture as per directions. Repeat this spraying each week until the disease is checked. Stop syringing altogether if possible, except to wash the plants off about once in two weeks, choosing a bright, warm day when the ventilators can be opened wide. Apply the Bordeaux immediately after. Give all the ventilation possible at all times and keep the temperature as steady as possible, both night and day. Paint one of the steam pipes with a thick dope made of lime and sulphur and water. This will keep the atmosphere charged with sulphur fumes, which is especially desirable in case of rainy spells. Dusting the plants with grape dust on such occasions is a good idea too. Maintain a fresh, buoyant atmosphere. A. F. J. B.

FERTILIZERS.

I mixed a lot of manure with the soil when I spaded it before planting my carnations. Would sheep manure be a good fertilizer at this time and how much would it be safe to use? If not, what fertilizer would you use? E. R.

Sheep manure is a splendid plant food to be used as a top-dressing during the winter months. If your plants are well established and have made a strong growth, they will likely be benefited by an occasional light dressing of some of the materials adapted to that purpose. Sheep manure, dried blood, blood and bone, bone flour, wood ashes, all are good and when used in moderation will prove beneficial to your crop. You will also find that light but frequent applications will give far better results than heavy doses, administered at long intervals.

A good plan is to mix the material with the soil finely sifted. Take two parts soil and one part of the plant food and mix them thoroughly. Strew a handful of this mixture between each row of plants and water it in well. If there is a mulch of loose material on the bench you can stir it into that. This stirring will add extra value to the process. Repeat about once in ten days to two weeks and give your plants as much variety in diet as possible, according to the texture of your soil.

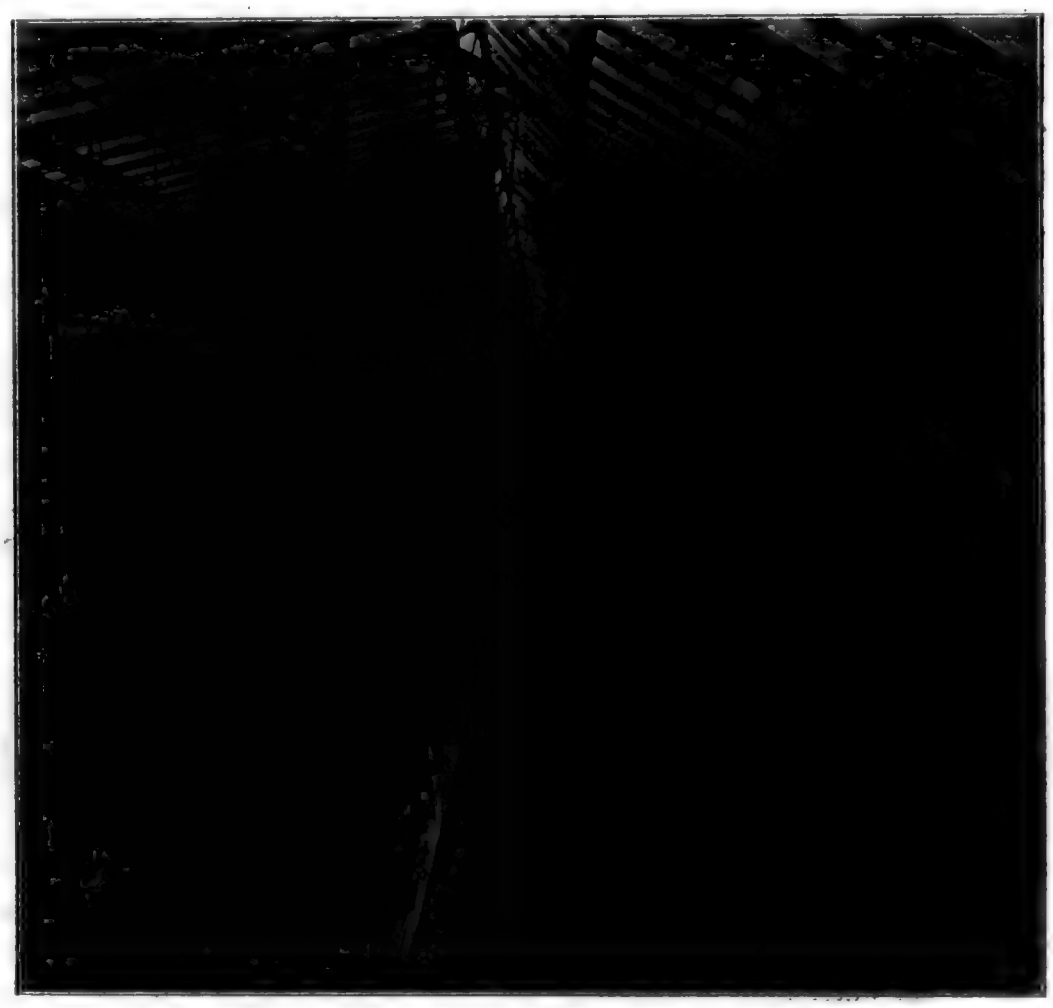
If your soil is light and contains much manure, then give more bone and wood ashes, but if it is heavy give manure and dried blood, with an occasional dose of ashes and bone. However, if you give light applications no serious harm is likely to result. A. F. J. B.

HOUSE OF DOROTHY GORDON.

The accompanying illustrations are reproduced from two photographs taken in the same house at the establishment of Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa. The house is planted with the new carnation, Dorothy Gordon, which in Mr. Heacock's opinion is an even better thing than Rose-pink Enchantress, which it somewhat resembles, being an Enchantress seedling. This house was benched with stock from the field, planted August 10, and the photographs were taken November 5. They show an excellent growth had been made. In the picture showing the transverse section it should be noted that the rows of plants are twelve inches apart. This house is now giving a splendid cut of high grade blooms.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Carnations Registered.



F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., register Carnation Pink Delight, an even, clear, waxy shell pink, with just a trace of salmon, which heightens and holds the color under all conditions.

Notice to Introducers.

For the exhibition to be held in conjunction with the annual meeting at Indianapolis January 27 and 28, 1909, any grower desiring to have his carnation named in Class B, of fifty blooms named varieties, $5 first and $3 second prize (varieties disseminated prior to July 1, 1908), can have the variety inserted in the premium list by sending the name to Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., and guaranteeing the payment of the prizes. It is the aim of the society to have this list as extensive as possible without too much expense to the society, and we hope that introducers will have enough pride in their introductions to see that they are entered in this list. To secure insertion, names must reach the secretary on or before December 4.

vided by hot water pipes being preferable to steam for this purpose. A brisk bottom heat and a top heat of 60 to 65 degrees is what valley wants for a start, lowering the temperature as the flowers are opening. Given a good bottom heat, lily of the valley should be ready in a little over three weeks from the time it was started. Valley is not fastidious as to soil, for it will grow as well in clean sand as in loam. The pips should be kept dark until well drawn up, by laying heavy paper over the glass on the case.

Hardy Lilies.

There should be no delay in planting hardy lilies, as bulbs are now to hand and it is all-important that these should be gotten below the soil as soon as possible, for the bulbs will suffer if left lying around the sheds. The general tendency still is to plant hardy lilies too shallow; unless the bulbs are small they should be covered not less than eight inches deep and if your soil is of good depth, ten to twelve inches will be better. In stiff ground, inclined to be clayey and moist, a layer of sharp sand should be placed below and over the bulbs after planting, and when the ground becomes well frozen, mulch with marsh hay or leaves.

The forms of L. speciosum are the most valuable commercially. L. auratum usually does well the first year and then deteriorates. L. Hansoni is a good, reliable sort. L. tigrinum, L. superbum, L. Canadense and Henryi are all good as a rule; however, the demand is more for white than colored varieties.

Any speciosums and auratums intended for culture in pots can be comfortably taken care of now that the mums are out of the way.

Hardy Roses.

The ground will probably soon freeze up tight. It hardly seems possible, while we are enjoying such extremely open weather, that winter may be almost with us. The best protection for hybrid perpetuals is to draw earth up to the stems. If the bushes are pruned back hard each year, there should be no trouble in affording the needed protection. As a rule the wood covered by the earth will appear green in spring, even if all else is killed. The plan often still adopted, of banking roses with leaves or manure, before winter sets in, will answer well in some spots, but there is no better protection than mother earth herself.

Hybrid teas and teas, except in a few favored spots near the ocean, are not classed as reliably hardy, even if protected well, and it is always safer to dig up and store any plants of those sections, heeling them in a coldframe or pot where they can have a little frost. If no frame is at liberty, lift and bury the hybrid teas outdoors, laying a coating of straw or leaves over the surface.

Bulbous Plants.

Some of the earliest La Reine, Due van Thol or Tournesol tulips will now have grown sufficiently to be removed to the greenhouse. Keep them darkened for a few days in order to draw up the stems, the general trouble with early tulips always being lack of stem. Trumpet Majors wanted for Christmas should also be housed if they have not already been taken in. Golden Spurs cannot be forced successfully for Christmas. Paper Whites and Romans both come on quickly when placed in heat, about three weeks being sufficient time to flower them in a temperature of 60 degrees. It is better, especially in the case of Paper Whites, to bring them along cooler, the flowers then having so much more substance.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

NEXT YEAR'S STOCK.

The flowers of all midseason sorts will now be cut, and Thanksgiving will this year see the end of practically all the late ones. There is a certain satisfaction in seeing the last of the mums cut early in the season. They are full of interest, but when the benches are heavily cut over and occasional little lots are left here and there, they become something of a nuisance, space being needed which cannot be had without sacrificing some good flowers. One lesson to be learned from this is to be sure to plant earlies, midseason varieties and lates in batches by themselves. Then as fast as one or the other is cut, you can utilize the cleared benches for other crops.

It cannot be said that the present season has proved a profitable one for mum growers, for prices have ruled low. The demand for big specimen flowers is less than it was, those of moderate size being most sought after, with a hankering after the small-flowered pompons, anemones and singles, which it would be well for growers to cater for next season.

Be sure that you do not keep over any varieties which do not take well. Sentiment does not pay in the florists' business, and it is necessary to drop with a sigh of regret old friends each year. Plant your stock in a bench in a cool house; anything just clear of freezing will answer well. Treated thus, you can depend on an abundant supply of strong cuttings when needed.

MILDEW ON MUMS.

I send you under separate cover a specimen of mums which I am sure are diseased, but I do not know what to do for them, or what is the trouble. They all seem to wither up and die, starting from below, as you will notice by the green-topped one. Will you kindly tell me whether there is anything I can do for them? H. M. P.

These leaves are covered with mildew, one of the forms of microscopic fungi. This disease is white, and forms a filmy coating over the leaves and tender shoots. It is caused by some sudden check, either to foliage or root action.

The accepted remedy is sulphur in some form. It can be applied as dust to the foliage, or by painting the pipes with the following mixture, worked to the consistency of paint: Air-slaked lime, finely sifted, one part; sulphur, two parts. Ribes.

THE TREND OF THE TIMES.

[A paper by S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, read before the Detroit Florists' Club, November 18, 1908.]

The supremacy of the man who has mastered his craft or profession, over the fellow creature who gropes in the dark and is tossed about on the waves of uncertainty, is apparent even to the casual observer.

Dame Fortune is never so fickle but she smiles upon the creature who is best qualified to respond to her alluring tune. The age of miracles has long since passed, never to return. No longer do we concern ourselves with the lucky stars, which, according to our grandmothers, wielded such a powerful influence over our destinies, nor do we believe in blind luck as such. A law as inexorable as the law of gravitation underlies every step we take, and governs every move we make, whether it be onward or backward. To quote a trite saw, "As thou sowest, so shalt thou reap." The truth of it is self-apparent, and needs no elucidation on my part.

When I accepted your kind invitation to address you upon a subject of my own choosing, it occurred to me that something might be said on the general conditions of these strenuous times, as affecting our own interests, and on the general requirements calculated to equip us in our struggles upon the great battlefield of modern commerce.

The Survival of the Fittest.

There is no gainsaying the fact that the theory of the survival of the fittest is based upon human experience, dating as far back as Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden. When the Bible tells us that the first progenitors of the human race were peremptorily expelled from their beautiful abode, we may well pause, ponder and draw our own conclusions. Disobedience to and disregard of law has taught them, and through them the entire human race, the lesson of the survival of the fittest. But why go to such remote sources for our lessons? History, both ancient and modern, is full of examples, showing that no race or clan has ever survived in a clash of arms with an opponent better equipped to fight the battle for supremacy. Mighty Spain lost her glory and her prestige because of her misdeeds, and because of her unfitness to survive. The throne of the Russian autocrat is tottering. Why? Simply because it never was and never will be fit to survive.

What holds true of races and nations holds equally true of individuals. No man can lay any claim to success in his vocation unless he is fit to survive, and no man can possibly survive, or come out on top, unless he is well qualified to meet the exigencies as they arise, and to make the best of the situation under all circumstances. Yes, one must be sure of his qualifications or fitness, before attempting to enter the ranks of those who are ever on the onward march.

Knowing One's Business.

In speaking of Napoleon, Emerson tells us that "here was a man who knew Chrysanthemum Golden King.

his business, who in each moment and emergency knew what to do next. Few men," continues the philosopher, "have any next. They live from hand to mouth, without plan, and are ever at the end of their line, and, after each action, wait for an impulse from abroad." Therein, indeed—in knowing one's business, and in knowing "what to do next"—lies the whole secret of success or failure. One need not necessarily be possessed of a penetrating mind to observe that the

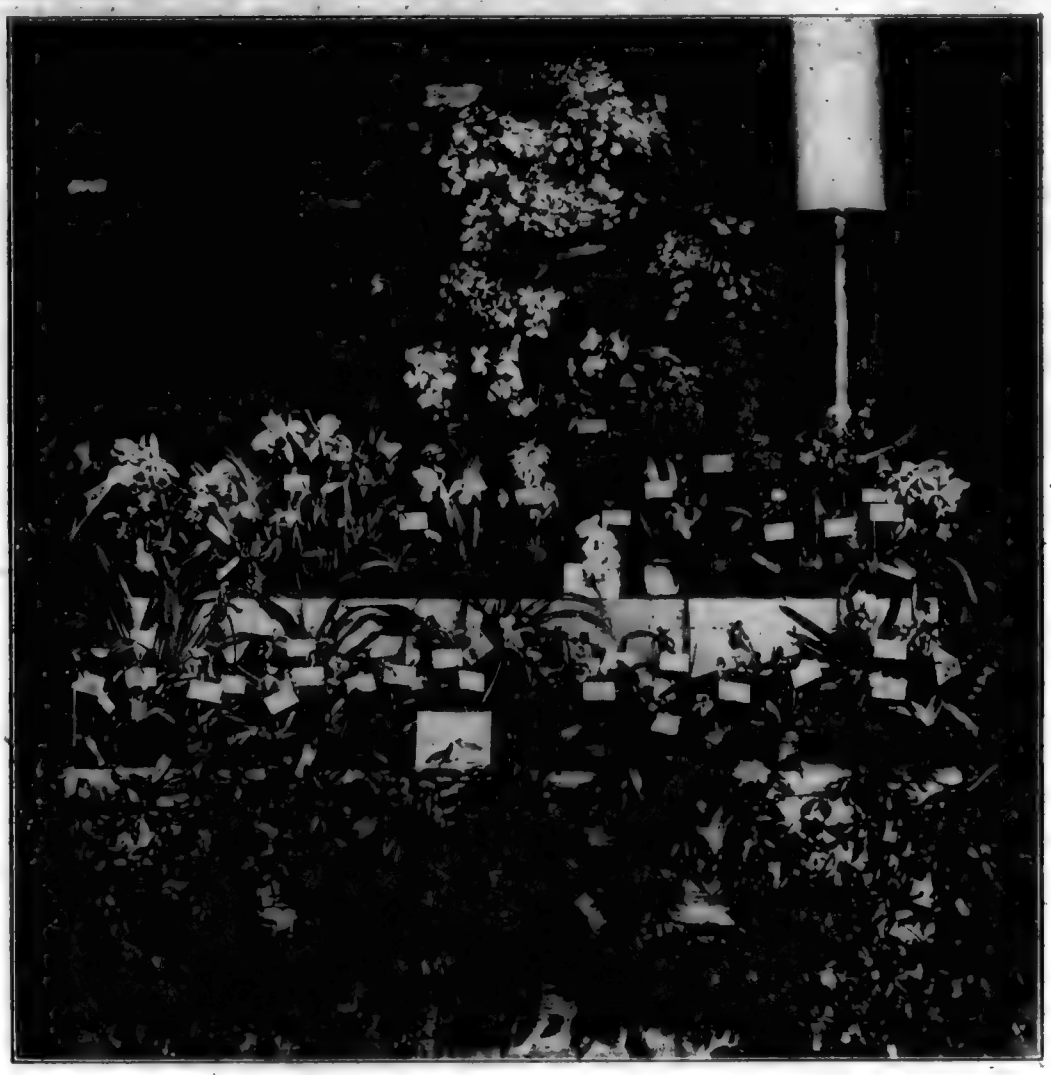
The Market.

The last few days have seen a decided improvement in cut flower conditions and a decidedly optimistic sentiment is now abroad. Everyone is looking forward to a good Thanksgiving trade, although no fancy prices are looked for. Roses have picked up a little and best Beauties are making $4 per dozen. Some fine Richmond and Killarney are arriving and meet with a good sale. Bride and Maid are of excellent quality and some nice Chatenay are seen. A limited supply of these old-time favorites, Safrano and Bon Silene, are selling well. Carnations are abundant, but are meeting with a better sale. Good average stock makes $2, while fancies will probably net $4 later in the week. Violets are moving better. The pleasant weather has caused people to buy these more heavily for corsage bouquets.

Some nice bouvardia is coming in and mignonette is much improved. Chrysanthemums, such as Bonnaffon, Chadwick, Jeanne Nonin, Gold Mine and Maud Dean, are good the present week and will about end up the supply of these. A good many small flowers are seen, which do not sell readily. Single flowering varieties have not sold well in the markets. Buyers are loth to take hold of anything new, but it is pleasing to note that all the better class stores are making features of them. There is a fair supply of lilies and callas, prices averaging about $2 per dozen on these. Sweet peas are improving, but not abundant as yet. Stevia, snapdragon, candytuft and French bulbous stock are seen in moderate quantities. Some fine Cypripedium insigne is also arriving.

Various Notes.



The Harvard-Yale football game November 21 caused a bull market on crimson mums and carnations and on violets, there being a big demand for these.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club should attract the largest attendance of the year. With three strong candidates in the field for president, to say nothing of the other offices, there should be excitement sufficient for everyone.

November weather to date has been charming. We have yet to record a snowfall and there has been no severe frost. Rainfall is much below the average, many streams, ponds and wells being perfectly dry still.

William E. Doyle is showing some fine gardenias, flowers which Mr. Doyle always has a big demand for. White Killarney holds a place of honor in the big window of the Boylston street store.

One of the largest and best equipped flower stores in Boston is that of Edward MacMulkin. The window decorations are always a feature here, choice fruits such as Gros Colman grapes being used in addition to flowers. Mr. MacMulkin is quick to take hold of everything new in flowers, as a glance around his store at any time will tell. He operates large greenhouses at Norfolk Dams, orchids coming in for considerable attention.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, is bringing in some splendid carnations to Park Street market. Mr. Christensen is one of the largest carnation growers for the Boston market. His product is handled by E. J. Rogean.

F. J. Dolansky is showing a nice lot of Pandanus Veitchii among other plants at his market stall.

F. W. Fletcher states that Violet Baronne Rothschild will outbloom Princess of Wales two to one. It has a stronger odor than the latter variety also.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The trade in general was somewhat better last week. The improvement was noticed in work for social functions. This, with other kinds of work, kept nearly all the store men busy during the week. This Thanksgiving week should increase the business greatly, as quite a lot of orders have been booked ahead. All of us are looking forward to a good week, so as to average up a good business month for November.

The cut in chrysanthemum blooms is decreasing and not nearly so many have been coming in, though some fine Eatons, Appleton, Ivory and Bonnaffon were to be had. American Beauties were in better demand last week, the supply being good in all grades. Other roses, such as Brides, Maids, Richmond, Ivory and Killarney, sold at low prices in all grades, as the supply greatly exceeded the demand. The quality of all the stock is first-class.

There are also plenty of good carnations in the market, with prices not so high. Enchantress, White Perfection, Aristocrat and Lawson are good sellers. Violets are coming in more plentifully, with fancy Californias at 75 cents per hundred. Stevia and lily of the valley make up the rest of the market.

Prospects seem good for a big Thanksgiving business and the wholesalers say they will have plenty of stock, with prices not so high.

Various Notes.

The first meeting of the St. Louis Horticultural Society's executive board since the close of the show was held Tuesday, November 17, in the rooms of the Missouri Athletic Club, with a good attendance. A general review of the late show was gone over and all prizes were ordered paid in full. It was reported that the show was a great success, both socially and financially, when compared with last year's show. At the next meeting of the committee, early next month, a decision will be made as to the holding of a spring show. Chairman Sanders presided over the meeting.

Hans Jensen, late foreman for A. Jablonsky, at Central, Mo., is now foreman for the Sanders Nurseries, at the Henley road place.

Walter Retzer, of the St. Louis Seed Co., spent a week with friends at Chicago and has returned home. His firm has been busy with fall bulb trade.

W. C. Smith reports that his company has been busy of late in the supply and wire department. They will have plenty of stock for Thanksgiving.

Alex. Siegel had a hard time last week. He took his thirty-second degree in Masonry. His work began at 9 a. m. He is a member of nearly every order known.

Arthur Ellison reports that his firm will start this week to erect the new show house, just west of the store. They have been busy of late with social work of all kinds.

The free chrysanthemum show at the Missouri Botanical Garden ran through the second week with an increased attendance, the weather being just to their liking for a tent show, warm and spring-like.

John Wunderle, formerly with Michel, Eggeling and Dunford, left the latter place last week and is now in business for himself in the landscape gardening work.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., and A. S. Halstead, of Belleville, Ill., were visitors last week. Both say they were much impressed with the big national flower show during their week's stay.

George Angermueller, chairman of the Florists' Club committee for the coming smoker, will call a meeting of the committee this week to perfect arrangements, date and place for holding the smoker. This big event should bring out a large attendance. J. J. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The sensation of the last week was the modest violet, modest no longer. Remarkable was its bid for popularity and its assertion of its right to recognition. The football game at New Haven caused the carrying of many thousands of the flowers to that city by Rhinebeck growers themselves, a decidedly new departure; the visits of wholesalers to the upstate growers with definite cash offers for their entire shipments; the combination of violet growers at Rhinebeck already consummated, and the scarcity of the flowers because of the abnormally warm season, all combined to create a condition unique, such as the violet market has never before been called upon to meet and consider. Many of the leading wholesalers, whose supply has been a surety for years, found themselves completely ignored and neglected. But Saturday night saw the beginning of the end. Prices fell to $1 after dark, with $1.50 for the specials in bunches of 100, and above these figures they are not likely to go even for Thanksgiving. Up at New Haven those who had the stock reaped a harvest. There was not a violet on the street Saturday. This week's developments are awaited with keen and universal interest.

The chrysanthemum supply is still ample, and will last over Thanksgiving. Prices are better, as well as quality. The men with the late mums will not have to worry about their winter coal. There are plenty of roses and carnations. Prices are slightly better. They will not be excessive for Thanksgiving; 12 cents probably for fancy Maids and Brides, 15 cents for Killarney and the other popular novelties, and a little more for Jardine, Rhea Reid and My Maryland. Carnations may touch 4 cents, with a little more for the novelties, and the balance of the offerings, lilies, valley, hyacinths, narcissi, sweet peas, etc., will enjoy the natural advance of the holiday. There is a lot to be thankful for this year, compared with conditions a year ago, and perhaps the prosperous will manifest a little of their exuberance in floral appreciation. Beauties hold firm at 35 cents, and 50 cents for Thursday will probably be the apex. A healthful and optimistic condition prevails, and we look for the merriest Christmas New York has known in many years.

Various Notes.

December 1 Harry Bunyard will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of his coming to America. In those two decades he has seen something of this country. If there is any spot where horticultural goods may be sold and which has not been visited by this indefatigable traveler, it has been a mistake which will be rectified promptly upon notice. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken during Mr. Bunyard's recent visit at his old home in England. Most of the readers will recognize Mr. Bunyard. The other figures are his father, his mother, Mrs. Bunyard, and his brother, Arthur, who is connected with the Market Growers' Gazette, London.

The Bunyard Family Group.

December 14 the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held. Officers will be elected. This will be a special night and should draw the greatest crowd of the year. Prepare for it and its surprises.

The club's smoker drew a large congregation, considerably more than 100, but not as many gardeners as the flower show should have attracted to the city. Chairman Rickards and his lieutenants provided an entertainment varied in its character, and which included Hibernian, colored stories and colored minstrelsy, legerdemain by Andrew Wilson, Scotch bagpipe music and the pocket edition of Harry Lander, rounded out with tenor solos that stirred the house, by George Clarke, one of the Clarke brothers, of Portland, Ore. It was a hilarious night and will likely be repeated early in the coming year. The club is growing rapidly and the young blood is coming to the front.

The prospective New York Retailers' Association, which we announced two weeks ago, has materialized and gives good promise of stability and value. Several times in the past the idea has died a-borning, but this time it is apparently here to stay. Charles A. Dards is president, Marshall Clarke, vice-president, and A. Warendorff, secretary. The objects of the association look to mutual protection against the deadbeat, to stop the unlicensed selling of flowers in the streets, to create a collection agency, and to confine the retailing of flowers to those entitled to that privilege. On such a basis the association has only to create and maintain harmony in its membership to guarantee a permanent success.

E. C. Horan paid Jamestown a visit last week and will hereafter handle the output of the Lake View Rose Gardens.

Millang Bros. are displaying some grand celosia plants in their window.

Moore, Hentz & Nash are receiving daily grand flowers of Killarney, Rhea Reid, Jardine and My Maryland from S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, R. I.

The optimist, Paul Berkowitz, of Philadelphia, was in the city November 21. He declares every part of the country west of Buffalo reveling in prosperity and says the east is now waking up and preparing for the best business of the generation.

George Stumpp, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., was absent from his desk Thursday, November 19. Inquiries developed the fact that Wednesday evening he had been initiated into the mysteries of the Elks, at Hackensack, N. J.

Paul Fischer, of Woodridge, N. J., submitted his new white unnamed chrysanthemum to the committee November 21, and will shortly place it on exhibition at Boston and Philadelphia. It drew much admiring comment in the window of Walter Sheridan, later. It is a pure white, incurved, of good size and a fine shipper.

Five years more is the decision of the New York Cut Flower Co. and the Cut Flower Exchange as to their quarters in the Coogan building. This does away with the rumor of concentration on the new building on West Twenty-eighth street, beyond Sixth avenue, for horticultural uses.

Louis Michell is now established as a retailer in the old store of Bonnet & Blake, on Livingston street, Brooklyn. He has been with Mallon's Sons nearly twenty years. He has fitted the place up handsomely and should succeed.

Little Nemo has contributed a bride to floriculture, W. T. Lee, son of the florist in the Hippodrome building, having just married Miss Isabel Strang, of the theater company.

Bowling.

The games November 16 resulted as follows:

McArdle	125	137	142	120	152
Falkner	69	89	87	128	90
Shaw	136	113	133	141	129
Scott	127	151	201	164	121
Manda	160	132	158	137	149
Marshall	156	208	144	167	144

Astoria has claimed some of New York's best bowlers. It seems a difficult thing to create enthusiasm or maintain a quorum in the big city. Most of the old reliables of other years have retired from athletics. The younger element is unstable, intermittent, forgetful. The timber is good and abundant, but hard to cut down. Monday is the best night for the majority, the alleys are the best in the city, but the attendance is discouraging to those who have faithfully endeavored to build up a club that would be a credit to New York.

At Astoria the membership is limited to twelve and the club is already full. The ladies' night and banquet last week were a great success. Mrs. Miesam and Mrs. Donaldson carried off the honors. The club will surely be heard from at Cincinnati. It bowls every Tuesday evening. The alleys are directly opposite the greenhouse plant of Wm. Siebrecht.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Trade during the month has been satisfactory. All stock has been plentiful, with the exception of violets, which are scarcer than for any like period in years. None of the growers seem to have any large crops of roses, although short stems and seconds have been a drug on the market. This is due to a slack demand for funeral flowers for the last ten days. From advance orders coming in for Thanksgiving there is every indication that nearly all good stock will be sold out for that occasion. There are not many late mums grown here, most growers seeming to take their chances on the main crop.

Club Meeting.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting November 17. There was a gratifying increase in attendance and there were a larger number of exhibits than at any previous meeting.

Mr. Swanson, of the committee on awards, reported on the scale of points for judging exhibits as agreed upon by the committee, and the report was unanimously adopted. The awards for the evening were as follows:

To Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind., for twenty-four varieties of seedling anemone-flowered chrysanthemums scoring 75 points, certificate of merit.

To A. J. Smith, of the Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouses, Minneapolis, for Major Bonnaffon, Eaton and Yellow Eaton chrysanthemums, and some well-grown plants of cyclamen and celestial peppers scoring 70 points, honorable mention.

To Louis Boeglin, gardener at the park greenhouses, Minneapolis, for forty varieties of chrysanthemums, including some new and rare anemone-flowered sorts and pompons, scoring 85 points, a diploma.

To the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, for Carnation Pink Imperial, a diploma; for roses Rhea Reid, Richmond, Chatenay and Killarney, honorable mention; for Princess of Wales violets, honorable mention.

A. J. Smith read an interesting paper on chrysanthemums, tracing their origin and introduction into England in 1754 down to the present and giving his methods of culture. In the absence of Mr. Jorgenson, who was to give his impression of the national flower show, Messrs. Will, Swanson and Wirth spoke on the same subject.

Mr. Underwood, of the Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, and a director of the State Fair Association, expressed the willingness of the association to assist the florists in every way possible in securing larger space for exhibits and larger premiums. T. E. Cashman, president of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, and a member of the state senate, spoke of his willingness as a legislator to assist the Florists' Association in securing a floral building at the State Fair and in every way possible contributing to the success of the association.

Other out of town visitors present were: W. B. Hastings, Cambridge, Mass.; Mr. Augspurger, Peoria, Ill.; A. N. Kinsman, Austin; W. H. Hart, Owatonna.

Various Notes.

T. Comandros, who has run a flower stand in one of the department stores here, has sold his interest and gone to Omaha. He is succeeded here by Will Bros., of Minneapolis, whose venture is watched with great interest. This firm, which has the most extensive range of glass in the state, has the glass on hand for another 100,000 square feet, to be erected in the near future.

The Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, will also build more houses for growing summer roses.

All from this section who attended the national flower show were well pleased with the exhibits and loud in their praise of the hospitality and courtesies extended by the Chicago brethren.

O. J. Olson and G. A. Clausen have returned from their hunting trip with several fine specimens.

Miss Hattie Neuhart, who has been with L. L. May & Co. for ten years, has resigned, and rumor says she is to be married.

L. L. May has returned from the east, bringing his invalid brother for treatment in a tuberculosis sanitarium in this state.

X. Y. Z.

ROCHESTER, N. H.—E. A. Corson has resumed business in his remodeled store on Hanson street.

NEW CASTLE, IND.—It is reported that Heller Bros. are planning to plant practically all their glass to Beauties for next season.

Vick's New Aster, Mikado Pink.

VICK'S MIKADO PINK.

In the Seed Trade Department of the REVIEW of November 19 there was a note on Mikado Pink, the new aster James Vick's Sons, Rochester, will send out this year. The accompanying illustration possibly gives a better idea of the flower than mere words can convey.

NEW ORLEANS.

At the last meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society the committee on arrangements at the flower show was not ready to give a full report as to the financial results of the exhibit, but, from what could be learned at that time, there will be a deficit, owing to the poor patronage from the public. As a show it was creditable and nothing was needed to make it as good as any previous show, but still the visitors were not numerous enough to make it pay. A spring show will be brought up for consideration in the near future, and will no doubt come at a better time for attracting attention.

Business has been at a standstill since the first of the month, but with the coming of cold weather there will be more demand for flowers.

B. M. Wichers & Co., of Gretna, La., have brought suit against the New Orleans Acid & Fertilizing Co., for damages to the amount of $15,615.50, alleging that by reason of the noxious odors emanating from the plant of the defendants the business of the plaintiffs has been ruined and that valuable plants have been destroyed.

THE ANNUAL

will be issued

DECEMBER 10, 1908.

Don't Forget:—

advertising copy must reach Chicago by Wednesday morning, December 9, to be in time, and earlier will be better.

First forms go to press Monday, December 7.

Some desirable advertisements usually are received the morning after going to press with a Special Edition. Send today. Don't get left.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

THE boxwood bushes are selling well for window boxes.

THERE is no flower business that cannot be increased by the right kind of advertising.

IN the majority of cases where one fails to get his money's worth, the cause lies in trying to get more than one's money's worth.

A GOOD many florists still are ordering supplies, writing on any old piece of paper. Better get a printed letterhead and be businesslike.

THE National Council of Horticulture makes a contribution to culinary literature, its press bureau sending out a chapter on how to cook cranberries.

IT is good business for a florist to know the facts about the stock he sells, be it plants or pottery, and be able to use them intelligently with his customers.

THE Washington flower show was the work of the retail florists and was especially attractive to the public on that account. The retailers have the artistic taste that wins.

THE single and pompon chrysanthemums make fine, light, graceful arrangements for baskets and table centerpieces. Exhibited at the fall flower shows, these arrangements have done much to cause a demand for the stock next season.

WE all have much to be especially thankful for this year.

WITH Killarney, My Maryland and Mrs. Jardine each claiming its share of the glass, Bridesmaid will no longer occupy the place of the leading pink rose—and there are more competitors to come.

W. FRANK & SONS, Portland, Ind., last year found a pink sport growing in their bench of the Richmond rose. It was a pleasing shade, somewhat darker than Maid, and they propagated several plants, all of which are now producing pink blooms identical with the original sport.

SECRETARY RUDD states that at the national flower show the membership of the S. A. F. was increased by forty-seven annual members and one life member. This is a good showing in comparison with the convention at Niagara Falls, where the accessions to the annual membership were sixty-three and the life members three.

SOME kind of protection is absolutely necessary for the preservation of many plants from the rigors of winter. Again, with many other plants, while they are of sufficient hardiness to stand the severest winters so far as their constitutions are concerned, nevertheless a covering of loose manure or leaves is of great benefit in preventing the uplifting of their roots out of the ground by the action of the frost. It will therefore be wise to strew litter or forest leaves along the rows, over the roots of almost all perennials and many hard shrubs. Especially is such a precaution desirable in the case of recently moved plants, be they perennials, shrubs or trees.

GUARANTORS GET MONEY BACK.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Flower Show, detail matters of accounting were sufficiently advanced to justify the adoption of a resolution authorizing the return to guarantors the two assessments, aggregating fifty per cent, which were paid in advance of the show. The guarantors will therefore receive their money back within the next few days.

At the same time a resolution was adopted asking the chairman to call a meeting of the National Flower Show committee at Indianapolis during the January convention of the American Carnation Society, for the purpose of passing upon final accounts.

OBITUARY.

Andrew L. Black.

Andrew L. Black, a well known member of the trade in the Baltimore territory, died November 18 at his home at Lutherville, Md. He was born in Scotland in 1841, but had lived near Baltimore for many years. He formerly had a considerable range of glass on Chase street, Baltimore, but increasing realty values caused him to sell the property and confine himself to the retail business, in which he was assisted by three sons.

Mrs. James Eadie.

The report comes from Cleveland, O., of the death of Mrs. James Eadie, widow of the late James Eadie, one of the pioneer florists of that city. She was 82 years of age.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Of all the factors affecting the flower market, the weather is possibly the most potent. Good weather increases the supply and reduces the demand, especially the shipping demands made on this market. Bad weather cuts down the supply and increases the demand. Of last week's business little more need be said than that the weather for the whole week was unseasonably bright, warm, and in every way delightful, except for its effect on the market.

Saturday, November 21, saw a large volume of business, but at no advance in price, despite the near approach of Thanksgiving. Receipts were extremely heavy in practically all lines. Conditions were such that it was impossible to hold the stock back, as is usually done to a greater or less extent the week before a holiday. The one exception to the rule of large supplies, somewhat slow demand and moderate prices, was the violet. Shipments from Rhinebeck were not heavy at any time last week, and the price steadily advanced. Locally grown singles, also, were in light supply, and prices on the upgrade.

Monday's Market.

The present week opened with two days of rain, but the bright sun of last week had started the buds, and the change in the weather did not affect the receipts appreciably. Nothing short of a continuation of dark weather and a decided fall in the temperature will have any special effect on production. If seasonable weather follows Thanksgiving, the market will respond with more seasonable values than have prevailed in the last fortnight. The passing of the mums will not be viewed with regret by growers of other stock.

Supply is large in practically every department of the market. Beauties are not in specially heavy crop and would be called scarce if there was any material increase in the demand, but the Beauty is not in special request at Thanksgiving. Good roses are to be had in quantity, with Killarney predominating. Richmond is now in special request and somewhat short of the demand. Carnations in many instances show the effect of the warm weather and are not so good as they have been, but there still is much excellent stock on the market. Prices did not stiffen as much as was hoped, except for red, which are scarce.

The chrysanthemum supply is ahead of the demand. The small mums are now pretty well cut, and this grade is bringing a rather better price than heretofore. Some of the best late sorts are now on, and large quantities of flowers of exhibition quality are offered, with the result that prices are unsatisfactory. Yellow sells better than any other color, $4 per dozen being obtained with effort for some of the best varieties.

The week opened with a continued scarcity of violets. Practically no eastern violets reach this market Tuesday. The bulk of the Thanksgiving consignments are due Wednesday morning, after this issue of the REVIEW is on the press. Wholesalers expect to be able to fill their orders, and the receipts may be larger than anticipated.

all orders can be filled if a few hours' notice is given. There are plenty of Easter lilies. Sweet peas are increasing in number. Cattleyas are scarce. Other orchids never are wanted if cattleyas can be had. Stevia and mignonette are now arriving.

Tuesday's Market.

By Tuesday the market was badly glutted and the wholesalers had given up all hope of a satisfactory Thanksgiving. The hoped-for shipping demand had not developed, even in response to telegraphic offers of cheap stock sent to the big buyers. It appeared that the same unseasonable weather conditions which produced the greatly increased supply in Chicago had done the same thing all through the great stretch of country that draws on Chicago in times of scarcity, and leaves us to eat or otherwise consume our flowers when local supplies are equal to their needs.

City buyers are quick to take advantage of such a situation. The larger the supply the more critical they are, and the less they will pay for even the best stock. Tuesday they bought little or nothing, knowing that the more stock piled up the cheaper it could be bought on Wednesday.

If there was any flower that was not a glut on Tuesday its value was destroyed by the general superabundance. The supply was the greatest ever known for Thanksgiving, the quality nothing extra, demand lightest, and growers must be prepared for about the worst average returns Thanksgiving ever brought. Tuesday it looked as though it would be impossible to clean up at any price by Thursday noon.

Thanksgiving day all the wholesale houses close at 12 o'clock. Only one mail delivery, about 9 a. m.

Various Notes.

Wietor Bros. think highly of the Mrs. Jardine rose, and are utilizing all the wood they can get for propagating purposes.

C. W. McKellar is handling bunches of cut Piersoni fern fronds, which sell quite well.

F. A. Farney, of the A. L. Randall Co., has returned from a trip of four months, during which he had uniformly good business. He will start out again directly after Thanksgiving.

Leonard Kill, president of the Florists' Club, is to be congratulated on the outcome of the flower booth operated by the club at the national show. Only a small amount of stock was donated, making the booth practically a purely business proposition, and yet a profit of $553 was made for the club. Mrs. T. E. Waters had charge of the selling, and to her efforts, and those of the club's president, much of the success is due.

E. C. Amling says that the business took on a different tone in the last few days of last week; had it not been for the fine weather and unusually large supply, prices would have advanced sharply on the strength of the increased demand. But it didn't last long.

C. S. Griffith has an attractive store at 160 North avenue.

Robert Johnstone is confined to his bed at Valmora ranch, in New Mexico. His tubercular trouble is complicated by other disorders.

William Nicholson is the last of the flower show visitors to tarry with us. With Mrs. Nicholson, he is staying for Thanksgiving with a daughter who lives at River Forest.

J. A. Valentine has been at the Kaiserhof since the flower show, busily engaged in his capacity as chairman of the auditing committee. He left for home November 24.

It appears to have escaped notice that at the recent election August F. Poehlmann was elected president of the village of Morton Grove.

Bassett & Washburn now put up all their carnations in bunches of thirteen and find that by so doing they save considerable breakage.

Percy Jones says that his growers are just beginning on their chrysanthemums. He figures the late mums will turn out much more profitable than anything except the earliest have been.

Zech & Mann are not among those who think the new pink roses will displace Bridesmaid. Some of their growers are having splendid success this year.

C. M. Dickinson, at E. H. Hunt's, says the Christmas rush already has begun in the supply department.

Peter Reinberg is cutting some specially fine Mrs. Marshall Field. They say the variety not only is extra good for summer, but produces as well as any winter rose at this season.

Vaughan & Sperry report local single violets as much improved in quality.

Kennicott Bros. Co. says the results with the pompon chrysanthemums this fall will lead to a much larger supply next year.

Weiland & Risch say the business situation begins to look much better to them.

J. A. Budlong estate has equipped each of its growers with rubber boots and apron, and reports this consideration of the employee's comfort pays well in better work.

The old Maud Dean chrysanthemum, as Poehlmann Bros. Co. is now cutting it, leaves little to be desired in the way of pink chrysanthemums.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. is figuring on increasing its planting of Beauty roses for next season.

George Reinberg has his new store at 51 Wabash avenue now fitted up in fine shape.

Kruchten & Co. report a good business in chrysanthemums, although prices are not yet up to previous seasons.

J. B. Deamud Co. reports business steadily on the increase.

Scheiden & Schoos sent an exhibit of President Taft carnation to the Buffalo show last week. Bassett & Washburn sent the O. P. Bassett and Peter Reinberg sent Mrs. Field rose. Each received a letter of appreciation.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

That wave of prosperity that we have been reading so much about must have reached Washington, from present indications. Everybody has been busy. Weddings, dinners and some of those old-time debut orders were booked this week, and this is only a forerunner of what is coming, according to the many announcements in the social columns of the press. Chrysanthemums are still plentiful and there is enough other stock to go around.

Various Notes.

Blackistone had the Wood-Philson wedding this week, which called for a lot of white mums and roses. The church was done in southern smilax, palms, autumn foliage and white mums. At the wedding breakfast there were four large tables, seating sixty people. The centerpieces were of Bride roses, Farleyense and valley. White mums were used throughout the house. Mr. Blackistone has received a fine lot of kentia palms from Dreer's, Riverton, N. J.

The Washington Florists' Co. has named its new rose Mrs. Taft. A description of this rose was given in the REVIEW during September.

The Gude Bros. Co. had the decorations for the unveiling of the Gen. Phil Sheridan statue, November 24. This called for 1,000 yards of specially made laurel garland, 200 wreaths, all sizes, and a quantity of pine brush. Gude's also had a large decoration November 25 for the Masonic smoker. The large ball room at Rauscher's was converted into a garden scene, requiring fifty cedar trees, palms, southern smilax and hundreds of colored electric lights. The same firm also had the decorations at the Chinese legation November 21 for the memorial service for the dead emperor. A floral altar, in a setting of palms, southern smilax, yellow mums and white roses, was used.

Mr. Marche, who recently opened a flower store on Eighteenth street, N. W., has leased a downtown store at the corner of Fourteenth and H streets for a term of years. This is considered a fine location for an up-to-date flower store. He will open about December 1. He will sell his uptown store; in fact, he has practically closed a deal for its sale. It will continue as a flower store.

The latest reports coming in from the flower show make the committee feel more elated than ever over the success of the show. The last night, Sunday, the show was packed to the doors. The only certificate given was to Mrs. Levi Leiter, for specimen plants exhibited by her gardener, Sam Simmonds.

Mr. Peterson, of Cincinnati, O., made his usual visit for this season of the year, with a fine lot of samples of his begonias and ferns. He showed some fine Lorraine, as well as Pink Lorraine, and his new begonia, Pres. Taft.

Mr. Craig, of Philadelphia, and H. Bayersdorfer, Jr., were in town. O. O.

The Market.

Club Exhibition.

Ever since the organization of the new Florists' Club the enthusiasm has increased wonderfully and each affair has surpassed the preceding. The same has proven equally true of the recent flower show held at the Iroquois hotel last week. The membership roll of the club increased lately and brought in W. J. Palmer, and our president made him chairman of the arrangement committee. He ably filled the bill, for with the help of his able supporters it was the grandest success of the club. All money matters were dispensed with and the competition was for glory and satisfaction.

The affair was first arranged to be on show for one day and to invite such business men as the committee thought might take an interest in forming a horticultural society such as other cities have. The success of the show was so marked and worked out so beautifully that the committee decided to run it one more day. The hall was well filled without being crowded and everything showed off to advantage. Through the kindness of E. D. Smith, E. G. Hill, Bassett & Washburn, Scheiden & Schoos, Peter Reinberg and others, we were favored with a few of the new introductions, so the show was complete in every detail.

In the evening of the first day the banquet was held in the same room as the exhibition. It was well attended by the members and a few friends. Wm. F. Kasting was toastmaster and ably filled the bill. He called on several men for a toast to the club, including Prof. Cowell to give a few remarks on a horticultural society and the national flower show. Mr. Cowell gave an excellent talk on both subjects.

Everybody was satisfied with results and it has since been learned that the society people have spoken of it highly and many expressed their regret in not being able to see it. With the help of a few shows of this kind, the people will soon be interested enough to form a society well worthy of the name.

Various Notes.

An interesting speaker at the banquet was D. B. Long, who has long since left the business proper, but still is interested enough to take an interest in the shows or other affairs. Mr. Long was the first man to start in the retail flower store business here. Thirty-six years ago November 20 the two brothers started where S. A. Anderson now has his magnificent store. Mr. Long also spoke of the advancement of the trade since he was in the business.

C. F. Christensen has about cut out of his famous Maud Dean. He had these to perfection this year, as the same were displayed at the show. His carnations are in tiptop shape and will have a good cut for the holidays.

Harry Eckert has opened a flower store on Elmwood avenue. R. A. S.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market showed greater activity last week than at any time this fall. There were some quiet days, but there could be no mistaking the fact that the volume of business was larger and prices firmer.

Beauties were plentiful and finer even than usual at this season. Killarney and Bride have improved. Richmond is selling better. Mrs. Jardine is good and plentiful, but My Maryland is scarce. White Killarney has made its appearance, showing excellent form.

Orchids are less plentiful. Cattleya Trianæ has advanced in price. The other listed varieties, barring cypripediums, are only in moderate supply at last week's figures.

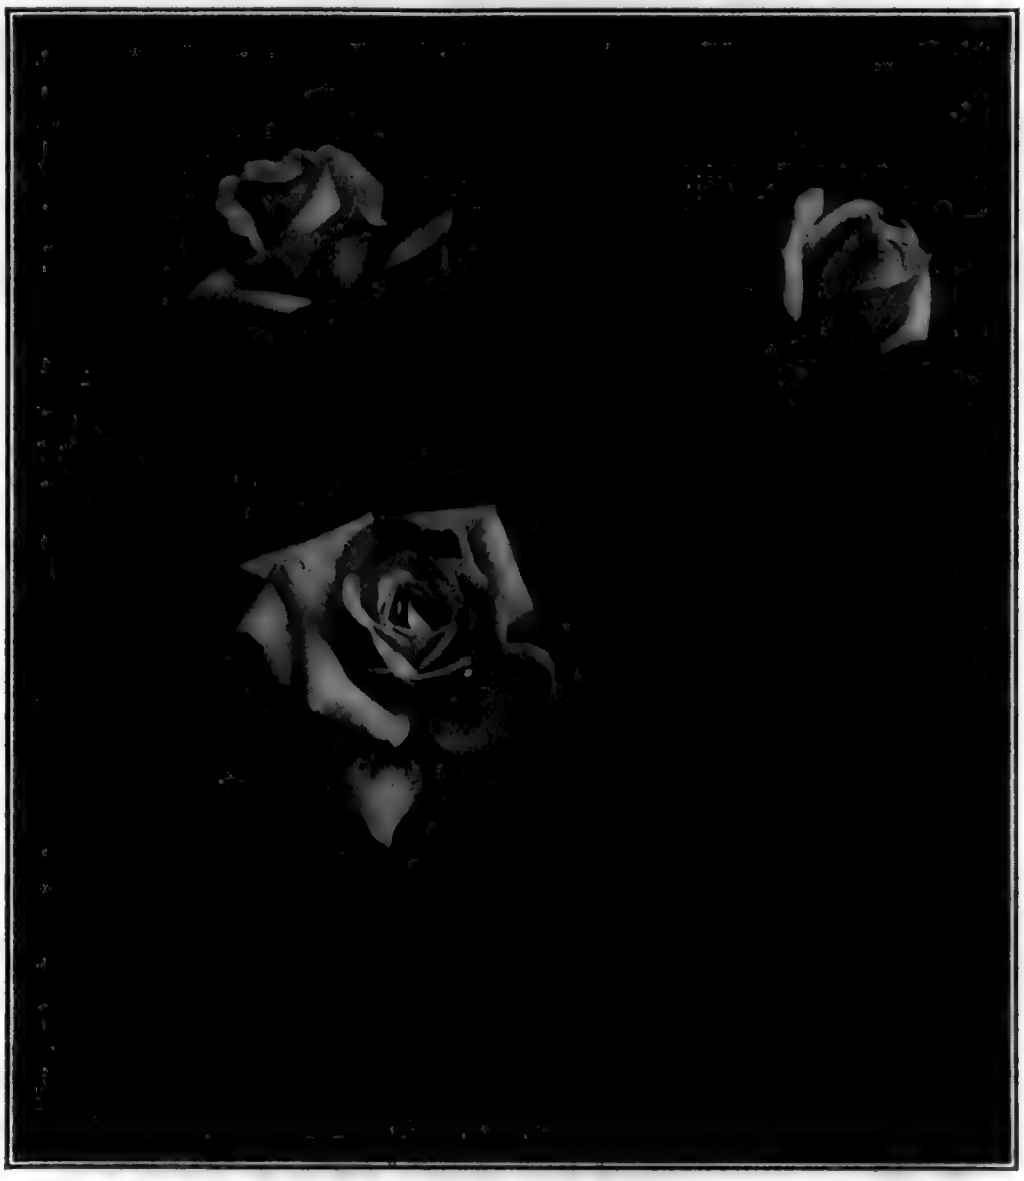
Chrysanthemums have shortened markedly. There are still plenty of big flowers to be had, provided the price don't interfere. Jeanne Nonin has reinforced Mrs. Chadwick in whites. White Jones is in the next class. Pink and yellow are harder to obtain than white. In the latter color Golden Dome leads.

Carnations have not kept pace with their rivals. The supply continues ample for all requirements and prices rule low. There was a slight advance on some fancy stock.

Violets have never been so scarce in this market just before Thanksgiving, and prices jumped to a figure that drove many of the buyers out of the market. No one seemed to have had enough for either shipping or local orders. Everyone was calling on everyone else for violets, generally without success.

Valley showed an improvement in prices realized. Easter lilies are not plentiful, but there is no special demand for them.

Bunches of Asparagus plumosus have been selling better; other greens are quiet. Bronze galax leaves have arrived.



The Demand for Palms.

The fall business in palms and decorative plants, which closed with this week, has been unusually active with the growers in this vicinity. The consensus of opinion is that the quantity of high grade plants that have been shipped from this market has been at least as large as in any previous season, when it is remembered that last season was one of the most active on record, the fall shipping business having practically ended when the financial flurry of November, 1907, occurred. Comparing the plant growing industry with the cut flower trade and with nearly all the principal industries in this locality, it will be seen at a glance that the plant growers had especial cause to give thanks on Thursday.

Should anyone ask for a cause for this encouraging condition, it is not difficult to find; the answer will simply be, quality. The quality of the Philadelphia palms and many other decorative plants appeals to the buyers all over the country. This quality explains the healthy growth in spite of times of depression. J. D. Eisele, of the Henry A. Dreer Co., Riverton, N. J., when asked regarding plant conditions, said that while he had not had time to gather exact figures since his return from Europe, he was convinced from the condition of the houses and the shipping room that the demand was fully up to the average and believed that it would far exceed the demand of last year during the next six weeks. Joseph Heacock, president of the company that bears his name, said that the demand for kentias and other palms during the last season was greater than ever before. Even now large orders are going out daily. Mr. Heacock attributed the heavy demand to the publicity he had given his product. Charles D. Ball said that the demand this season had been so good that his stock was practically exhausted in many of the medium sizes. September exceeded any month, with one exception, since Mr. Ball has been in the palm growing business.

the center of the street, looking up and down, you are at once attracted by its height and by its massive granite front. The Henry F. Michell Co., as REVIEW readers know, have purchased Tower Hall, and are rapidly remodeling it with the intention of moving a part of their business into the new building as soon as practicable. Through the courtesy of Frederick J. Michell, Jr., I am able to give those interested an idea of this new seed salesroom and warehouse. The front has been entirely remodeled, the entrance being moved from the side to the center, and a handsome show window placed on either side. These show windows may be best described by saying that they closely resemble the front of the present Michell building at 1018 Market street. Even the tiled flooring between the windows, with the word Michell worked in mosaic thereon suggests the uptown establishment.

The new building has a frontage on Market street of twenty-three feet, is 180 feet deep, stretching back to Ludlow street, where the frontage is forty-seven feet. This wider frontage on Ludlow street is produced by a sort of double store, the Market street width being doubled when halfway back to the Ludlow street entrance, making an ell-shaped floor space. Just inside the front door is a passenger elevator running from the basement up to the fifth floor. In the rear, on Ludlow street, is a freight elevator covering the same distance, and a second freight elevator, intended for lowering and raising heavy weights from the first floor to the basement and return. There is also a basement chute for sacks. The building will be lighted throughout by a combination of electricity and gas. Electricity is preferred as a better light and more economical, but in the event of any interruption in the electric current, it is deemed wise to have gas as a substitute. The basement will be devoted entirely to storing fertilizers and all heavy material. In fact, it is hardly fair to speak in the future tense, for it is already being utilized as a store room. The first floor will have counters, and open seed boxes along the left or Delaware side, and racks for samples of implements and other necessaries along the right, or Schuylkill side, pretty much as in the present store. The wider ell-shaped portion at the rear of the store will be devoted to the offices, with showroom and entrance on Ludlow street. The Delaware side of the Ludlow street entrance will be devoted to a receiving room for light merchandise. The second floor will be devoted to the order-filling department. The third floor will be largely used for storing implements and other stock. On the fourth floor the grass and clover seeds will be found.

The fifth floor is surmounted by a fine glass roof. This floor will be utilized for a seed testing department and for a conservatory, where plants can be received and kept in condition until their turn for shipment arrives. The roof will be surmounted by a wonderful sign, something on the flagpole style, thirty-five feet high and two and one-half feet wide, the word Michell running down so that it can be seen from the Delaware to the Schuylkill, with seeds below.

There is much to do in the new building, cleaning and freshening of walls, installing of counters, seed boxes, racks, office partitions and furniture, and all the endless details required to make up a modern seed house. Frederick J. Michell says that his company's seed house will be the finest of its kind in the country, and that he hopes it will be ready for occupation about December 15. It is proposed to carry on business both at 1018 Market and at 518 Market.

Various Notes.

Charles Henry Fox will address the Florists' Club in Horticultural hall, Broad street, below Locust street, on Tuesday evening, December 15. His theme will be "Salt on the Tail of an Idea." It is confidently predicted that Mr. Fox will make a success with this, his maiden speech.

Robert A. Craig is blessed with a vein of humor. When speaking of the prices cut blooms of chrysanthemums are now realizing, he said: "They are bringing more than Polly Rose brought in October."

The violet situation evokes many expressions of opinion in explanation of the shortage in flowers, late lifting, early cold and snow, the hot weather of a month ago bringing one crop in prematurely and shortening another, and so on. Edward Reid puts it briefly, thus: "Hot air."

Leo Niessen reports the arrival of bronze galax leaves.

Robert Scott & Son are sending fine, long-stemmed blooms of their new rose, White Killarney, to S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

M. Rice & Co. have beautiful new orchid and violet ribbons in the flower colors named. The latter, it is thought, will supplant violet tassels in popular favor. Steamers Palanza and Manitou have brought them additional shipments of Christmas goods.

The Highland Rose Co. is sending excellent Bride to the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co.

Freeman & Co. will offer the paraphernalia used in the founders' week banquet at public sale this week.

The shortage in My Maryland rose in the cut flower market points to heavy advance orders for young stock of this variety.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are making a specialty of metal holly wreaths of their own make.

Alfred M. Campbell is handling some nice Major Bonnaffon chrysanthemums, a variety popular in this market.

The demand for ferns, decorative and blooming plants has taken on new life the past week.

A local daily interviewed Robert Kift on his novelty:

GLOBES OF BERRIES.

Florists are now offering little globes to go over electric bulbs made of crimson partridge berries. They last exceedingly well, are not expensive, and give a charming touch to a room. They are just what one wants for the table and the room on Thanksgiving and on Christmas day.

It is all right, but a trifle mixed.

Frank McMahon, of Seabright, N. J., was in town last week.

Casher and George L. Pennock, Lansdowne, Pa., are sending fine valley to Edward Reid.

John A. Shellem is much pleased with the way his rose, William R. Smith, is doing at New Castle, Ind.

John Stephenson, of Oak Lane, continues to send superb Mrs. Jardine to W. E. McKissick & Bros.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, Ohio, was

TREND OF THE TIMES.

trend of the times is toward self-improvement along all lines of human endeavor.

The young attorney, for example, who rises from obscurity into the limelight of renown, owes his success not to blind luck or to his lucky star, but to hard and persistent work, coupled with an unconquerable desire to fit himself for the profession that he chose. The physician who is at the end of his line in the case of an emergency simply proves that he does not know his business, and just as sure as night follows day will his career reach the end of its line. One cannot possibly go through life on the assumption that success, like love, is blind, and enters one's door unbidden—that "where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise." To quote once again from Emerson, "Everyone can do his best thing easiest." Granted, then, that it is easiest to do the thing one knows best, the wonder is why so many of us possess but a mere smattering of our own business, instead of a thorough training and knowledge; why so many in the trade grope in the dark, plodding along in a haphazard sort of way, while those in other professions are forging ahead, keeping pace with the progress of the times.

Modern Problems and Requirements.

The problems that confront us today are indeed so much greater and so much more complicated than those that confronted our predecessors a generation or two ago, that unless we are well equipped to keep pace with the times, or in other words, unless we know our business, failure is sure to stare us in the face.

The trend of the times is toward improvements along all lines. Old methods, and antiquated means and ways, are no longer adequate to cope with present conditions. We have entered upon a new era of commercial and industrial life; new conditions have arisen, new problems confront us, and new methods must be employed. The successful florist of today is no longer the man who toils from early morning until late into the night, minding his own business and never caring about what his neighbor does. On the contrary, it is the man who toils less and thinks more, who, while minding his own business, and minding it well, keeps also his eye on his neighbor's progress; who is ever on the alert, ever watchful, ever eager to learn the "whys and the wherefores"—it is a man of this type, I say, that is sure to succeed.

Vigilence and Resourcefulness.

The successful grower of today is he who can adapt himself to new conditions; who can cope with new problems as they present themselves, without a tremor; who knows "what to do next." Back numbers and antiquated methods no longer count. In this age of keen competition, especially in our line of business, which the all-powerful octopus, the trust, has thus far failed to invade, constant vigilance is the only price of success. The "hit or miss" methods of our forefathers, and the "lucky stars," are no longer potent factors in the present day race for progress. "Depend upon Providence," say the Russians, "but be on the alert yourself." There is wisdom in this simple Russian saying. There is nothing like being on the alert yourself. The grower on the alert knows something about soils, and a good deal about fertilizers and their proper application. His heating, watering and ventilating systems are open books to him. He has studied the nature and requirements of each of the varieties of the plants grown on his place, and because of his knowledge and intelligent observation, he can easily trace the cause, and remedy the evil effect. If, for example, his violets or roses are on the sick list, rather than despair, depend upon it, he will "know what to do next," and by doing his "next" intelligently, consistently and persistently he will soon prove the efficacy of the remedies applied.

Toiling Less and Thinking More.

To contrast the difference between the man who "toils less and thinks more" and the one who toils hard, early and late, "minding his own business exclusively," I will cite a case that came under my personal observation. There is a man in western Pennsylvania, now out of business, who for two consecutive seasons grew excellent carnations, realizing a handsome sum from his productions. His third season, however, proved his undoing. He simply happened to hit the mark at one time and miss it at another. Why his carnations did so well at one time and so poorly at another, he could not possibly explain. The law of cause and effect was a closed book to him. He had reached the end of his line at the very outset, and did not know what to do next. This is by no means an exceptional case. We often meet men who are at their wits' end; who, at the least drawback, find themselves at sea; who are simply at the mercy of mere chance, hit or miss, as it were.

Financial Management.

There is another point that I wish to touch upon briefly, and that is the financial feature of our business. The fact that a man has mastered the art of growing flowers or plants to perfection does not by any means prove that his executive abilities in the office are commensurate with his efficiency at the propagating bench or in the greenhouse. It is one thing to be a good grower, and it is quite another thing to be an able financier or a careful business man.

The high salaried gardener of a Vanderbilt or a Rockefeller, for example, unquestionably knows how to grow flowers and plants, but does he ever give his coal bin a thought? And what matters it to Mr. Gardener if every rose gracing the table of his "lord and master" is worth its weight in gold, in so far as the cost of production is concerned? To be sure, there is a source whence a plentiful supply of money flows to foot all bills. What he cares for and what he strives to accomplish most is results, no matter at what cost. Need I tell you that there is many a man in the trade today who ought to be a private gardener instead of a commercial florist? Need I dwell upon the fact that lack of executive ability, lack of system, poor economy, and an Mastering the Details.

To become thoroughly proficient in one's business one must of necessity apply himself with all his might to the study of all details, for it is the little details, whose name is legion, that make up the sum total of one's success, or failure, as the case may be. The florist who looks far and beyond, whose ambition it is to rise beyond mediocrity, who strives to keep pace with those enlisted in the cause of progress, must first of all be an earnest thinker; second, a hard and conscientious worker; and third, he must know his business, as thoroughly as does the financial genius the condition of the stock market, or the eminent attorney the nature of the case he argues, or the world-renowned surgeon the condition of the patient upon the operating table. To know our business and to know it thoroughly—therein lies the only solution of all the problems that confront us today.

Wholesale Decorative Evergreens,

Fine Quality and Cheap

We are almost in the midst of the Southern States, and one would naturally think that a cotton producing section is a poor place for DECORATIVE EVERGREENS; that is true, but we want to say that we have a little section of country in the extreme Western part of North Carolina that is made up of rough mountains, from four to seven thousand feet high. The soil is a rich, black loam; the water is pure free-stone and plentiful. Our summers are cool and delightful, but short. Our winters are long and severe. Not one stalk of cotton has ever been seen in this section. But GALAX, both green and bronze, FANCY and DAGGER FERNS, Leucothoe sprays both GREEN and BRONZE, RHODODENDRON, etc., grow to PERFECTION. We are right on the ground, gatherers picking the goods and delivering to us the same day. We make it a point to ship nothing but FRESH stock. We sell cheap, because we can afford to; but we want to insist that you understand that the quality of our goods is not cheap.

We positively GUARANTEE SATISFACTION IN EVERY INSTANCE, and our guarantee is good too. Let us have a trial order at once; if you do not need the goods right now, let us book your order for future shipment. ANY QUANTITY.

PACIFIC COAST.

Portland, Ore.—The Portland Floral Co. has opened a retail store at 325 Morrison street.

Santa Barbara, Cal.—Ernest Sexton, who occupied part of the Ruiz drug store last winter, will have his stand in Frederick J. Smith's store, 817 State street.

Seattle, Wash.—The Interlaken Nursery & Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $5,000, by J. J. Bonnell, F. W. Stevens and F. M. Jordan.

Newberg, Ore.—The son of Thomas E. Miles has been ill for about two months, and has now been taken to Portland Sanitarium. Mr. Miles says his carnations look exceptionally well for this time of year.

George C. Roeding, of Fresno, Cal., has asked the Committee on Ways and Means, now considering tariff changes, that the present tariff of 2 cents per pound on figs be raised. He said it is "insufficient to stimulate the business, as there is only about 1 cent per pound profit at the present rate. Secretary Wilson assisted in starting the fig industry and is entitled to the credit for the 3,000 tons now grown annually. The business could be greatly built up."

Olympia, Wash.—The Capital Nursery, conducted by E. J. Berneche, comprises four acres on Capital Point, overlooking Budd's Inlet. On the west the view stretches away to the Olympics, while on the east a scene of equal beauty is presented, with Mt. Rainier in the background. The greater portion of the nursery is situated directly in front of the mansion of the governor of the state. Mr. Berneche has rapidly built up a large business from a small beginning. He makes a specialty of roses and peonies.

RIVERSIDE, CAL.

Last spring Charles Howard, formerly of the Chase Rose Co., bought five acres in the Hemet tract near Park Hill and planted it to roses. He erected a large propagating house and laid out a number of hotbeds. Another house is now going up. A car of 90,000 pots was bought. A dwelling and service buildings were erected. A large quantity of stock will be propagated this season.

Nursery stock will be grown, as well as roses. Olives for market also will be tried.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Trade has picked up wonderfully in the last few months, and especially since the result of the election became known. Confidence now seems to be completely restored. All the stores are doing a thriving business, with a liberal amount of funeral work.

Various Notes.

Edward Kirby has taken over the Redondo Gardens and Greenhouses, located at Redondo, Cal. He is installing a new boiler, etc., and putting the place in an up-to-date condition. This place was formerly owned by the Redondo Improvement Co., of the same place.

Glascock, the Pasadena florist, has opened a pretty store here. He keeps his windows quite attractive.

Jack De Ortignac, formerly of the Angelus Florist, has removed, with his family, to San Francisco, where he expects to make his future home.

Mr. Murray, of North Spring street, has sold his place and he also has removed to San Francisco.

The Florists' Club gave a stag party November 14, to which the members of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association were invited. Most of them attended, including their president, Mr. Blake. The opening address was made by Dr. A. D. Houghton, vice-president of the club, who presided in the absence of the president, who was unavoidably detained elsewhere. Others addressed the club on different subjects. Flowers were seen in profusion on and around the speakers' table. A large bunch of American Beauties, donated by Messrs. Elgert & Martin, were particularly admired. After an enjoyable evening, which closed with refreshments, the members dispersed, declaring that the next blow-out given by the club would be a ladies' night.

prices remain low. The best carnations can be bought for $2.50 per hundred, and short-stemmed stock at about half that price. Mums continue to flood the market. The quality throughout is excellent and the prices are low. The best indoor stock does not net the growers over $15 per hundred, and they move slowly even at that price. Good roses are scarce and are quickly bought up. Maidenhair fern is one of the scarcest articles. Valley has been in big demand and all the available supply has been bought up. Other green stock is moving well. Violets, with the advent of longer nights and plenty of foggy weather, are coming into market longer of stem and with better color. They cost the stores 75 cents per dozen bunches. A few narcissi have made their appearance. Paper Whites cost the retailers $1.50 per hundred. Japanese lilies, with the exception of a few longiflorum, are over for the season.

The retailers have had a goodly supply of funeral orders and a few first-class weddings have also added to the quota of trade, but what we need more than anything else is a stiff rain or two to start business going.

Various Notes.

Peter Thiesen, of Golden Gate, will shortly commence the erection of several greenhouses, to be devoted to the growing of adiantums.

C. W. Smith, of Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, is in town.

Thos. Domoto, of Domoto Bros., Elmhurst, has recovered from his recent severe illness.

Henry Prager has been appointed landscape architect for the city of Oakland.

The beds in Golden Gate park which have been devoted to carpet work during the summer have been planted to bulbs for winter and spring blooming.

About 1,000 people listened to the lecture of Luther Burbank at Berkeley November 16. Quite a few of the local florists were in the assemblage. G.

MARENGO, IA.—Rudolph Friederichsen has purchased an acre of ground adjoining his property on the south. Though he added to his greenhouse space last year, he finds that enlargement is again necessary.

MUSKMELON doesn't become any more plentiful.

THERE is now no time to be lost on the catalogues; the southern lists must go out within three weeks.

HOLLAND growers are holding mangold seed for higher prices in consequence of reports of a short crop in Germany.

AN excellent illustration of Mikado Pink, the new aster of Jas. Vick's Sons, appears on page 15 of this issue. It was described in the issue of November 19.

IT is stated that the reorganized St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis, is considering disposing of its mail-order business and that invitations for an offer have been addressed to some of the leading mail-order seed houses in the western field.

THE Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, has embarked on a campaign of education "to promote diversification of crops and larger demand for better seed in greater variety" in the southwest. H. W. Fisher, formerly with the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, and later in charge of the seed department of Montgomery Ward & Co., has been engaged to take charge of the work. A house organ in magazine form, to be called The Progressive Planter, and to be issued semi-monthly, will be the principal means employed. The first issue was dated November 16 and contained as its principal feature an illustrated sketch of the Texas Seed & Floral Co. and its president, R. Nicholson.

NEITHER of the great Chicago mail-order houses will issue seed catalogues for 1909. Sears, Roebuck & Co. dropped its seed department a year ago, after stocks were under contract for 1908, and Montgomery Ward & Co. closed its seed shop at the end of the 1908 spring season, after a fall seed and bulb book was partly in type. To the general mail-order people it looks as though the seed business would be one of the easiest lines to handle, but a little actual experience serves to demonstrate that seeds can not be successfully dealt in under the conditions surrounding the general mail-order trade when conducted on a mammoth scale. The seedsmen have nothing to fear from this competition, and it probably will be some time before any other large general mail-order house makes an incursion upon the seedsmen's field.

NOVEMBER has been a good month for the retail bulb business and stocks are well cleaned up. It has been a satisfactory season.

ARNOLD RINGIER, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, went into the northern Wisconsin green district November 21. The quality of this year's crop is excellent, and the reports agree the crop is large.

Seeds of Choice Herbaceous and Alpine Plants

We desire to extend our already large business with our Colonies and the United States, America, in the above class of seeds, our great specialty. We know that our seeds have been the means of enabling many lovers of old-fashioned hardy perennials and Alpine plants to obtain a good collection at a very small cost, whereas the expense of getting plants from England is prohibitory in most cases. Catalog, which contains descriptions of nearly 3000 kinds of flower seeds of all classes, including latest novelties, and also much educational matter, will be sent free on application. Established over 50 years.

SPIRAEAS AND LILIUMS.

Grullemans & Sons, Lisse, Holland, take exceptions to the reports that have gone out as to satisfactory supplies for fall shipments of spiræas and liliums and write as follows:

"Spiræas were never so small in clumps and few in crowns as just this season. To prove this we have (and we know our neighbors are all in the same position) no end of trouble to supply to our customers with anything like salable stuff. It fact, some sorts, as Spiræa Gladstone, are at present sold here as high as 20 shillings ($4.80) per hundred.

This shows more than double the price of the beginning of the season, while sorts like Washington, compacta and Blondin are all high in price. We only write this to let those who import spiræas know, so that their expectations may not be deceived. Further regarding liliums, the lancifolium varieties are far from what we call good; the rubrums and roseums are middling, while the albums are poor; in fact, worse than we have seen them for years, and first-class albums are not to be had at any price."

CORN CROP CONTRACTS VALID.

The courts of Nebraska have just come to the rescue of the seed growers there with a decision affirming the legality of the ordinary form of growing contract, the validity of which had been brought into question by the result of some previous litigation, greatly increasing the uncertainties of the business.

The case in question was an action in replevin brought by the J. C. Robinson Seed Co., of Waterloo, against John Hamilton, J. E. Hiveley, Citizens' State Bank, of Waterloo, and its cashier, H. B. Waldron.

The evidence showed that in 1907 John Hamilton grew a crop of Stowell's Evergreen sweet corn on land owned by Mrs. Mary T. Robinson and which she had leased to the J. C. Robinson Seed Co. Hamilton went on the farm under a contract with the seed company wherein he agreed to do all the work, harvest and deliver the crop to the seed company at Waterloo. He was to receive as compensation for his services such sum as three-fifths of the marketable crop would bring at a stipulated price per hundred pounds. The contract also provided that the title to the corn should be at all times in the seed company.

After the corn was shelled, Hamilton sold three-fifths of the same to the defendant J. E. Hiveley, and gave a chattel mortgage on the corn he sold to H. B. Waldron and the bank. The other two-fifths of the corn was delivered by Hamilton to the Robinson Seed Co.

The three-fifths of the corn sold by Hamilton was taken possession of by the Robinson Co. under the writ of replevin and at the trial the court held: That the agreement between Hamilton and the seed company constituted a cropper's contract; that the relation between the parties thereto was that of master and servant; that Hamilton had no right to sell the corn or mortgage the same, and that the purchaser and mortgagee got no title or lien on the corn. At the close of all the testimony for both sides, the court directed the jury to return a verdict in favor of the J. C. Robinson Seed Co.

This case is vitally important to the seed growers of Nebraska, for there has been an impression, owing to some former decisions, that contracts like the one involved in this suit were not enforceable.

COLD STORAGE BULBS.

Why do my cold storage longiflorums throw but one flower, or at best two to a plant, and bloom when only about twelve inches high? They were 7-9 bulbs, potted in 5-inch pots, placed under benches in a carnation house, watered carefully and given as good treatment as possible.

longifiorums, multifiorums or giganteums. If they were either of the two former varieties, this might account for their coming with one or two flowers and only growing twelve inches high. The variety giganteum is the only variety that can absolutely be relied upon for cold storage purposes. Another reason might be that the plants may not have had sufficient roots when they were started; this would also account for their coming so dwarf. As every bulb grower knows, plenty of roots are necessary for the development of stem and flower.

Vegetable Forcing.

In the Island of Guernsey mint is one of the items grown in quantity for the English market, but a serious disease has, during the last year or two, spread among the forced mint, and the trade in this, which was at one time a good paying crop, is nearly dying out. So far no one seems to have identified the disease. It is not the ordinary yellow rust of mint, but a black disease more nearly resembling the potato disease, and it works in a similar way. The stems above ground are first attacked and then the lower leaves, and the underground stems. All the usual fungicides have been tried, but so far without the least success.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.50 doz.; leaf lettuce, 30c to 40c case; radishes, 20c to 40c dozen bunches; mushrooms, 35c to 50c lb.

Boston, Nov. 23.—Tomatoes, 12c to 15c lb.; lettuce, 40c to 60c box; radishes, $1.50 to $2 box; mushrooms, 75c to $1 lb.; cucumbers, $2 to $9 box.

New York, Nov. 23.—Cucumbers are generally of rather ordinary quality and moving slowly. A little fancy lettuce brings higher prices; ordinary stock still has to sell at easy figures. Mushrooms steady for prime large. Radishes firm. Tomatoes wanted, and better prices than lately quoted could be realized for fancy quality.

NITRATE OF SODA FOR LETTUCE.

In the Review of October 15, page 32, you recommend dissolving nitrate of soda in water for use on lettuce. Do you advise watering overhead? Will overhead watering, either with ordinary water or with the nitrate solution, injure the plants? Any information on the subject will be greatly appreciated. G. G.

Nitrate of soda is a powerful fertilizer and must be used sparingly. It is applied dry sometimes, but I prefer to dissolve it in water and apply with a sprinkling can. I take a 3-inch pot of the nitrate for each barrel of water. It must be thoroughly dissolved before using, or some of the canfuls might have a much stronger solution than others. A good way is to fill the barrels with water the night before and put in the nitrate then, but it can be dissolved quickly in a small pail of warm water and then poured into the barrel, when it will be ready to use after a thorough stirring in the barrel with a long stick that will reach to the bottom. It should also be stirred a few times while using it.

If made according to the foregoing directions, there will be no danger of injuring the foliage with it. It can be applied with the rose on the can, letting it fall like rain over the plants, or the rose tip can be removed from the can and the solution poured on the soil between the rows of plants without wetting the foliage. It may be applied once each week and is very beneficial for lettuce, but is not a complete fertilizer. Manure contains other ingredients required by lettuce and all crops, but well rotted manure, which is the only kind safe to use in preparing the soil for the lettuce beds, does not contain enough nitrogen to make a properly balanced fertilizer for such leaf crops as lettuce.

As to watering overhead, most growers are careful not to get much water on the foliage after the plants get large and thick, on account of the danger from fungous diseases, which are likely to start if the plants do not dry off before night.

Referring to the nitrate of soda again, I would say that it might be used stronger than in these directions, but if made a trifle too strong it will burn the edges of the young leaves and also injure the roots. Whenever a grower tries something new to him, he should experiment on a few plants first and note the effect on them before risking his entire crop. H. G.

ONIONS FROM SEED.

I should like to know how to grow Prizetaker onions from seed, on newly cleared land. The soil is a sandy loam, in southeastern Pennsylvania. D. J. W.

If you mean to grow the onions from seed sown outdoors, Prizetaker needs the same treatment as any other ordinary variety. On newly cleared soil the ground would have to be well worked, as onions delight in soil that is well pulverized. As your soil is sandy, a liberal dressing of manure would be necessary. For this there is nothing better than the article procured from the cow yard. It is better if partially decomposed, but not too much so, and should be well worked into the soil before sowing the seed. Get the surface of the soil as smooth as possible, and sow the seed in shallow drills one foot apart, at the rate of about one ounce to 100 feet of drill. Firm the soil well over the seed by tramping with the feet. Frequent hoeing is necessary during the season, both to keep down weeds and to keep the surface of the soil open.

When the plants are well up, thin out to four inches apart in the lines, if you want extra large onions. When the bulbs are well formed, an occasional dressing of nitrate of soda or some such concentrated fertilizer will be beneficial. To lengthen the growing season and produce larger onions, the seed may be sown in a greenhouse or hotbed in February or March, and transplanted to the open ground after danger from hard frost is over. William Scott.

Atlanta, Ga.—W. A. Hollingsworth is preparing to open a flower store at 89 Peachtree street.

Milton, Mass.—E. R. Loring, who has conducted a greenhouse at Ashmont and Mill streets, Dorchester, has opened a store in the Hotel Milton block, Pierce square.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A greenhouse belonging to Thomas J. Dixon, and located on Canarsie lane, near Tilden avenue, has been destroyed by fire. The loss was estimated at $1,500. The fire was caused by an overheated furnace.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE forty-eighth annual meeting of the Indiana State Horticultural Society will be held at Indianapolis December 2 and 3. W. C. Reed, the Vincennes nurseryman, is president. There will be a large display of fruits.

PETERSON NURSERY, Chicago, is removing its city offices from the thirteenth to the tenth floor of the Stock Exchange building. In the past the business offices and the landscape department have been separated because of the impossibility of securing adjoining rooms as needed, but the present removal will mean consolidation and much larger facilities.

PROPAGATING PRIVET.

Please state when is the proper time to start California privet and the best length of cuttings to make. I shall be glad to get instructions from someone who knows how to propagate privet successfully. U. G. H.

A start can be made now in the preliminary work of the propagation of California privet. Taking everything into consideration, the rooting of cuttings of the wood made during the past season is perhaps the most satisfactory method. At any time now this wood should be cut, made into about 6-inch lengths and tied up into bundles. These should be stored away for the winter in a cool shed or cellar and covered with soil or sand, so to remain until the state of the weather in early spring will permit the planting of the cuttings in nursery rows in the open ground.

Before the work of putting in the cuttings in spring commences, it is important that the ground be well dug and afterward raked to an even surface. Then a line should be stretched and an even trench excavated with a spade. The cuttings can then be taken, by the bundle, in the hands of the planter, who will be able to lay them rapidly against the edge of the trench, putting in just enough soil to hold them in place. Another man follows and completes the filling in, also firming the soil. The cuttings may be placed about two inches apart in the rows, and the rows should be at least fifteen inches apart, in order to allow freedom of growth, as well as freedom of action in the subsequent cultivation of the soil.

In the following spring the young plants should be transplanted and placed about six inches apart, in rows a little wider apart than those from which they were removed.

I have had remarkable success in the propagation of privet from young wood taken early in July. These I put in a soil composed mainly of leaf-mold, in a shady place. I also took the precaution of further protecting them for a week or more. Cuttings put in in summer need a good watering when put in and frequent sprinkling until they are established. By the latter part of August these cuttings were thoroughly rooted and were immediately transplanted, with

We are Headquarters for the Right Stock of White Killarney

There are other white sports of Killarney, but the stock which we offer—the Waban variety—is very much superior to all others

When you buy from us

you get stock of the variety exhibited by us and the Waban Rose Conservatories this fall, which was awarded the silver cup at the National Flower Show at Chicago; silver medal, Horticultural Society, New York, and silver medal, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston. It undoubtedly is the best white rose ever introduced

Our attention was called to this rose last winter and, recognizing its great value as soon as we saw it, we purchased half the stock. We are growing it in large quantities in our Scarborough greenhouses, and will be glad to have anyone interested in it visit us and see it growing. The large growers, instantly recognizing its value, have placed orders for large quantities, so that our advance orders are very large, and the demand promises to be very heavy, judging by the number of orders already booked; but we have enough stock, either potted or rooted, to fill advance orders, so that we can still promise early delivery and first-class stock on all orders received now.

Order at once to ensure early delivery

Orders will be filled in rotation as booked, delivery beginning March 1st, 1909. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, own root, $30.00 per 100; 250 for $70.00; 500 for $125.00; 1000 for $250.00. Grafted plants, $5.00 per 100 additional.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal, with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal, closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, and holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives one good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives one grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

The Market.

The extra warm and clear days of last week had a tendency to hasten on stock in good shape. Consequently there was plenty of everything except violets; that is, those grown locally. Plenty of the New York state violets can be had, but those grown nearer by are always preferred. All in all, shipping trade was better than the week before and with plenty of advance orders for Thanksgiving, it no doubt will be still better. Prospects point to a continued good supply in all lines.

Various Notes.

The Messrs. Loeffler, of Watertown, Wis., are consigning some extra fine sweet peas and violets to this market, the latter being better than in previous seasons.

M. A. McKenney Co. says that business last week was satisfactory, the bulk being for weddings.

J. M. Fox used quite a few cut flowers for several good sized weddings November 21 and 22.

Chrysanthemum Novelties

The Prize Winners as Usual

The list I have this year will contain the finest lot of novelties I have ever sent out, and that is saying much. Among them will be Yellow Miller, a yellow sport from the bronze Mrs. J. A. Miller. This is a sterling variety and is bound to make good. Pockett's Crimson, a crimson and gold beauty that I am distributing with Wells this year. Charles H. Totty, an enormous chestnut scarlet. Mrs. O. H. Kahn, a bronze that will depose any bronze we now have. These are already certificated for me.

Other grand ones will be Clara Wells, a lovely incurved yellow; Mrs. G. F. Coster, a deeper yellow than Donnellan; Rose Pockett; Geo. Mileham, 1908; Pockett's Surprise, and many other fine seedlings.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Last week showed a marked improvement over any preceding one, as stock of all kinds has been cleaned up better than heretofore. Carnations, which have been going begging, were cleaned up readily and on Saturday there were not enough to supply the demand. Roses have also moved better than usual. Violets have had an unusual run, being cleaned up early each day. Mums are coming in well; the only ones selling slow are the poorer grades, of which there have been great quantities.

Various Notes.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is sending in a fine cut of Killarney roses from the Rocky River greenhouses.

A visit to John Kirchner found everything in its usual good shape. A house of Boston ferns is especially fine. A lot of Roman hyacinths, the first started, give promise of being extra good.

Ogden Gaul is on the road again, calling on the trade for the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. He reports business good.

Mrs. James Eadie, wife of the late James Eadie, passed away at the age of 82 years. The Eadie Co. is one of the pioneers in the business in this city.

Monday evening, November 16, the Florists' Club entertained the ladies at a most enjoyable event. All means of amusement were at the disposal of the guests. Prizes were awarded for bowling and card playing. The young folks also indulged in dancing. Those present enjoyed meeting many old friends, which all went to make the event more pleasant.

The Cleveland delegation, on the return from Chicago, report having had a most enjoyable trip.

C. A. Bramley is about to open a branch store on Superior avenue, corner of East Ninetieth street.

Robert Kegg, of West Park, is sending in a fine cut of carnations and mums.

Visitors: Henry Heepe, Akron, O.; Harry Flickinger, Barberton, O. B.

Beatrice, Neb.—The Dole Floral Co. has sold to the city a piece of ground, with a frontage of fifty feet, to be used for park purposes. The consideration was $1,700.

STORM-TIGHT and RAIN-PROOF in 30 seconds!

This is the famous "Blizzard" Front in actual use, while a furious storm is raging.
With the handy "Blizzard" in place, you can drive in comfort, regardless of snow, rain, wind or cold.
It will keep out every drop of rain and no matter if it is zero weather, the heat of your body will keep the inside of the buggy as comfortable as your "den" at home. No foot-warmers or extra robes necessary. Notice the large window, it is 12x20 inches and made of tough, transparent celluloid, and a side light on each side.
The line pocket is 14 inches wide, and so strongly reinforced with metal that it cannot tear out or sag. Allows you perfect control of the horse.
You can quickly open the "Blizzard" at either side and get in or out with ease.
THE "BLIZZARD" FRONT
equalizes the strain on the buggy top and prevents it from rattling. It is made of Blizzard Cloth and will last as long as the top.
Why risk the dangers of exposure—Rheumatism, Colds, Pneumonia? Why not drive in comfort?
The "Blizzard" Front sells for $3.50. If your dealer cannot supply you, we will ship you one on receipt of price. Your money refunded if not exactly as represented. Write for attractive "Blizzard" booklet today. We send it free.

The new crested Scottii Fern Nephrolepis Scholzeli

This crested sport of Scottii will hold the same position to all the crested forms of Nephrolepis that Scottii now holds to the Boston. It is entirely distinct from all others and will become even more popular than its parent, with which it is identical in every way except that the pinnæ are subdivided, giving it a beautiful crested appearance.

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI

We have shown the plant at the Exhibitions noted below and have been awarded the following honors:

SHAW GOLD MEDAL. St. Louis Horticultural Society, November 3rd, 1908. For "Best plant, of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce."

SILVER MEDAL. Offered by the Society of American Florists, through the St. Louis Horticultural Society, November 3rd, 1908, for "The most meritorious plant, or flower of American origin." Certificate of Merit, of the Horticultural Society of St. Louis, November 3rd, 1908.

SILVER MEDAL. Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, November 3rd, 1908, for the best new plant.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT. Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, November 6th, 1908.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT. Dutchess County Horticultural Society, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., October 30th, 1908.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT. Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, Madison, N. J., October 30th, 1908.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

Trade has been picking up finely since the election. Some had to pay election bets with a corsage of violets, or a large bunch of chrysanthemums or Beauty roses. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful at present. Carnations are not as fine as they will be later in the season. Mums are putting all other flowers in the shade; they are seen anywhere and everywhere.

Various Notes.

Henry Lambach, of L. Baumann & Co., Chicago, and Harry Kessler, of the Scranton Florists' Supply Co., were in the city this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schaal are rejoicing over the arrival of a little florist, born November 10.

R. I. Creelman, of the Georgetown Floral Co., Ontario, Canada, is visiting friends in Erie.

A. J. Baur has returned from a western trip, which included a visit to the national flower show at Chicago.

B. P.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—Frank Hill is erecting two more greenhouses, 28x140, in West End.

BE SURE TO GET A GOOD LOT OF OUR PRIMROSES

IMPROVED CHINESE. Finest grown, all varieties mixed, very extra strong and fine, 2-inch, $1.50 per 100; 3-inch, $3.00 per 100. A rare bargain. Sure to please. No finer plants ever offered.

CYCLAMEN GIGANTEUM. Extra fine, 3-inch, in bud, $5.00 per 100.

CASH. Liberal extra count. Seeds as in recent advertisements.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Club Meeting.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting November 17, at Columbia hall, St. Anthony Park. This was one of the most interesting meetings held in the history of the new association. There was more interest evinced than heretofore. A number of members came up with exhibits, and there is an outlook for an interesting future. J. M. Underwood, of the State Horticultural Society, spoke at length on the advisability of getting a new building at the State Fair grounds, and he urged the members of the association to take a greater interest in the exhibits there, and eventually make the fair an event with the florists.

Senator Cashman, of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, exhibited a collection of roses, carnations and violets, and received a diploma. Lakewood Greenhouse exhibited some Eaton and Bonnaffon chrysanthemums, and celestial peppers, securing 75 points. T. Wirth, on the part of the park board greenhouses, exhibited some of their fancy mums, and also received a diploma.

The securing of a different and better hall in which to hold the meetings was discussed. A. J. Smith read a paper on chrysanthemums. J. P. Jorgenson was to have given his impressions of the Chicago show, but, as he was unable to come, Mr. Wirth, Mr. Will and A. Swanson supplemented each other in discussing it. It was readily seen that if the florists in general would come forward with exhibits from all over the state, if possible, the meetings would be much more interesting, and probably more largely attended.

When Writing Advertisers

Various Notes.

O. C. Swanson had the decorating of the Auditorium for the Hostesses' ball, one of the two largest balls of the season. Palms, baytrees, boxwood and Boston ferns were used in profusion, and an immense lot of decorating was needed to cover the vast spaces. In addition to this Mr. Swanson had a number of bouquets, and altogether had a very busy day.

Miss H. B. Whitted made up a number of original baskets for the ball. The baskets were imported, tied with tulle and velvet to match the gown of the bearer, and filled with violets, orchids or roses.

Will Bros. have taken over the cut flower department at the Golden Rule Store, St. Paul, William Topel having charge of it.

R. A. Latham was busy until the last call for bouquets for the ball, those made of violets, valley and orchids having the preference.

James Souden had three good decorations last week, and had a regular holiday rush the day before the ball.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has some fine cyclamen and Primula obconica in bloom, which are going fast for Thanksgiving sales. They are starting to cut a fine house of Maud Dean mums and have another fine house coming on in time for Thanksgiving. The orchids have done well this year; the demand is growing steadily.

The outdoor planting of bulbs is about over. There never was such a demand as this year, and the parks and private places are planted to bloom out in the spring with tulips, hyacinths and daffodils.

NOW THAT ELECTION IS OVER and the uncertainties removed

PREPARE FOR CHRISTMAS

Interior view of one of our houses of Araucaria Excelsa Glauca and Robusta.

We Have Araucarias to Beat the Band

Look for Bargains Now

We protect the trade. We employ no fakers, no drummers. No department stores handle our goods. We have great faith in Uncle Sam (the mail). He is our partner.

Look at the photo! What a lively time at Aschmann's, the Araucaria King! We have it. Have what? An immense stock of the choicest Araucarias the world can produce, together with a rare selection of other salable plants in season, and everybody who sees them will be astonished and say, "No use talking, you're a cracker-jack." I am going to make things lively this fall. Five thousand Araucarias, twice as many Ferns, Palms and Azaleas and many thousands of other salable stock must go at panic prices. By Christmas all must be sold. Why? We want the room to force our extensive Easter stock.

We Lead the Country in Araucarias

Have been in the lead in the past; have it now and shall lead in the future.

We have houses full of choice Excelsa robusta compacta and Excelsa glauca; enough to supply the entire country.

Will you pay 50 per cent to 100 per cent more by buying from others who are not specialists? Hope not; the wise are on guard. We are going to sell all of them and without drummers. By jingo, we must sell them; an elephant for 40c, 50c and 60c; a jumbo for 75c to $1.00; and a holy terror in size for $1.25 to $1.50.

TAKE NOTICE!

Plants have grown considerably and are now fully 10 per cent to 20 per cent bigger than advertised below.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitmani and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in sunny houses (not whitewashed), which will produce stiff fronds; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta. Perfect shape, nothing finer grown, a houseful to sell, 3 to 4 tiers, 4 years old, 20, 25 to 28 inches, $1.25, $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, spring importation 1908, have a houseful; plants, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 4 years old, 22, 24, 26, 28 to 30 inches high, the same in width, perfect beauties, $1.25, $150, $1.75 up to $2.00; specimens, 40 inches high, $2.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Scottii Ferns, never before were as fine, 5-in., 35c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c and 60c; 7-in. pots, very fine, 75c; $1.00 to $1.25.

Piersoni, 6-in., 50c.

Whitmani, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, made up or as big as a bushel basket, only $1.00, worth $1.50; 8-in. pans, three large plants in a pan, $1.00; 9-in. pans, 3 large plants in a pan, as big as a wash tub, $1.25 to $1.50. We have a big stock of these varieties and they are pot, not bench grown. Amerpohlii, 5-in., 30c, 35c to 40c.

Wilsoni, 6-in. pans, made up, 25c to 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 to 6 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 20 inches high, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, a large one, about 40 inches high, in the center, surrounded by three smaller ones, $3.00 to $4.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 36 inches high, $2.00; specimen, 7-in., 40 to 50 inches high, $2.50 to $3.00; 6-in., 30 inches high, $1.50; 6-in., 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00; 6-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in., 50c; 4-in. pots, 35c.

Cocos Weddelliana, bushy plants, 3-in., 15c, 18c and 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, 2½-in., $4.00 per 100; 3-in., 6c. A big stock, best assortment.

Cycas Revoluta, or Sago Palm, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 5 to 20 leaves to a plant, 10c per leaf.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, three plants in a pot, ready for 5-in., 30c.

Ficus Elastica, rubbers, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus, 2½-in., $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100; 4-in., $10.00 per 100.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Remember that we also are headquarters for this much admired Christmas novelty. For the past five years we have made a careful study of this plant and under our Special Treatment we obtained such results that we are now able to offer to our patrons the Begonia Gloire de Lorraine of a highly improved type, with a rich, rosy color, which will stand well in either heated or cold rooms. They are partly in bloom now and will be in their full glory, in bloom, for Christmas and New Year's, and will keep until February and March. Will stand shipping well. The plants are all nicely staked with three green painted stakes and wrapped in tissue paper when packed for shipment. Shipped either in their original pots or in paper pots, as purchaser desires. the meetings would be much more interesting, and probably more largely attended.

Various Notes.

O. C. Swanson had the decorating of the Auditorium for the Hostesses' ball, one of the two largest balls of the season. Palms, baytrees, boxwood and Boston ferns were used in profusion, and an immense lot of decorating was needed to cover the vast spaces. In addition to this Mr. Swanson had a number of bouquets, and altogether had a very busy day.

Miss H. B. Whitted made up a number of original baskets for the ball. The baskets were imported, tied with tulle and velvet to match the gown of the bearer, and filled with violets, orchids or roses.

Will Bros. have taken over the cut flower department at the Golden Rule Store, St. Paul, William Topel having charge of it.

R. A. Latham was busy until the last call for bouquets for the ball, those made of violets, valley and orchids having the preference.

James Souden had three good decorations last week, and had a regular holiday rush the day before the ball.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has some fine cyclamen and Primula obconica in bloom, which are going fast for Thanksgiving sales. They are starting to cut a fine house of Maud Dean mums and have another fine house coming on in time for Thanksgiving. The orchids have done well this year; the demand is growing steadily.

The outdoor planting of bulbs is about over. There never was such a demand as this year, and the parks and private places are planted to bloom out in the spring with tulips, hyacinths and daffodils.

NOW THAT ELECTION IS OVER and the uncertainties removed

PREPARE FOR CHRISTMAS

Interior view of one of our houses of Araucaria Excelsa Glauca and Robusta.

We Have Araucarias to Beat the Band

Look for Bargains Now

We protect the trade. We employ no fakers, no drummers. No department stores handle our goods. We have great faith in Uncle Sam (the mail). He is our partner.

Look at the photo! What a lively time at Aschmann's, the Araucaria King! We have it. Have what? An immense stock of the choicest Araucarias the world can produce, together with a rare selection of other salable plants in season, and everybody who sees them will be astonished and say, "No use talking, you're a cracker-jack." I am going to make things lively this fall. Five thousand Araucarias, twice as many Ferns, Palms and Azaleas and many thousands of other salable stock must go at panic prices. By Christmas all must be sold. Why? We want the room to force our extensive Easter stock.

We Lead the Country in Araucarias

Have been in the lead in the past; have it now and shall lead in the future.

We have houses full of choice Excelsa robusta compacta and Excelsa glauca; enough to supply the entire country.

Will you pay 50 per cent to 100 per cent more by buying from others who are not specialists? Hope not; the wise are on guard. We are going to sell all of them and without drummers. By jingo, we must sell them; an elephant for 40c, 50c and 60c; a jumbo for 75c to $1.00; and a holy terror in size for $1.25 to $1.50.

TAKE NOTICE!

Plants have grown considerably and are now fully 10 per cent to 20 per cent bigger than advertised below.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitmani and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in sunny houses (not whitewashed), which will produce stiff fronds; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta. Perfect shape, nothing finer grown, a houseful to sell, 3 to 4 tiers, 4 years old, 20, 25 to 28 inches, $1.25, $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, spring importation 1908, have a houseful; plants, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 4 years old, 22, 24, 26, 28 to 30 inches high, the same in width, perfect beauties, $1.25, $150, $1.75 up to $2.00; specimens, 40 inches high, $2.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Scottii Ferns, never before were as fine, 5-in., 35c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c and 60c; 7-in. pots, very fine, 75c; $1.00 to $1.25.

Piersoni, 6-in., 50c.

Wilsoni, 6-in. pans, made up, 25c to 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 to 6 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 20 inches high, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, a large one, about 40 inches high, in the center, surrounded by three smaller ones, $3.00 to $4.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 36 inches high, $2.00; specimen, 7-in., 40 to 50 inches high, $2.50 to $3.00; 6-in., 30 inches high, $1.50; 6-in., 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00; 6-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in., 50c; 4-in. pots, 35c.

Cocos Weddelliana, bushy plants, 3-in., 15c, 18c and 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, 2½-in., $4.00 per 100; 3-in., 6c. A big stock, best assortment.

Cycas Revoluta, or Sago Palm, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 5 to 20 leaves to a plant, 10c per leaf.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, three plants in a pot, ready for 5-in., 30c.

Ficus Elastica, rubbers, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus, 2½-in., $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100; 4-in., $10.00 per 100.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The Schmidt & Botley Co., recently incorporated to take over the partnership business of Schmidt & Botley, has completed its organization by the election of the following officers: President, Adam Schmidt; vice-president, Robert H. Botley; secretary and treasurer, Charles W. Schmidt. The capital stock is $25,000, and the management will continue practically as heretofore, with Robert H. Botley in charge of the growing and packing and Charles W. Schmidt at the head of the office and sales departments. The company enjoys a well established mail-order business in plants, seeds and bulbs, issuing a catalogue in considerable quantities each spring and fall. Houses aggregating 90,000 square feet of glass and six acres of land are utilized in caring for the present business, but the management has in contemplation the purchase of additional land on which to grow shrubbery.

The American Rose & Plant Co., another recently incorporated concern, purchased Harry Reeser's place, consisting of 20,000 square feet of glass and four and one-half acres of land adjoining the premises of the Good & Reese Co., as well as those of Gustave Schneider, formerly known as the Agnew place. This company will do a general wholesale business in plants, such as ferns, roses, phlox, peonies, etc. Opha Jackson will have general management of the business and has usually spent a considerable portion of his time on the road, while Carl E. Glenn will have charge of the growing.

Harry Reeser will go into the brokerage business after a lifetime in the floral line, disproving the usual rule, "Once a florist, always a florist." Ge. Dale.

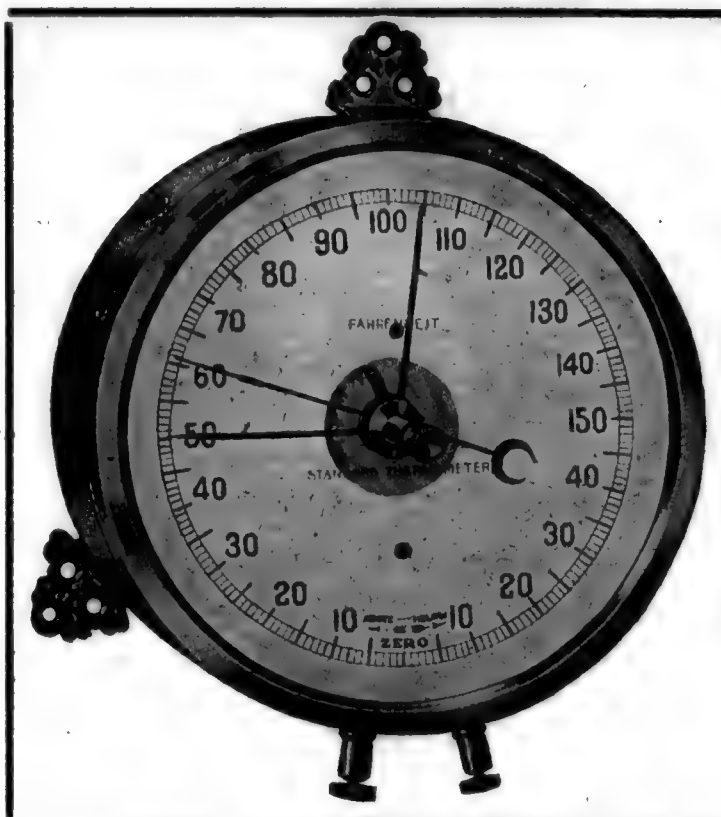
Greenhouse Heating.

BEDDING STOCK AND TOMATOES.

I wish to heat a greenhouse 17x36, three and one-half feet to the eaves and eight and one-half feet to the ridge, with glass in one end only. I wish to grow geraniums and other bedding plants, also tomato plants. What temperature would be required? The outside temperature in this part of New York state occasionally goes to 20 degrees below zero. Using either 2-inch or 1½-inch returns, how many returns would be needed, and what number and size of flows?

The bottom of the boiler pit is not more than two feet below the level of the greenhouse floor and I cannot conveniently elevate the expansion tank more than three or four feet above the system. Would the Honeywell heat generator help me out, and, in case I used one, what piping system would you recommend? Does hot water under pressure require more constant firing than the open system? A. B. R.

I judge that a good plan to follow in this case will be to carry a 2-inch flow from the boiler under the ridge to the far end of the house, and return by the use of twelve 1½-inch pipes arranged under the benches. The expansion tank should be connected with the main return near the boiler, by, say a ¾-inch pipe, and the tank itself should be placed at least six to ten feet above the highest point in the flow pipe. Place it on a trestle on top of the roof if necessary, and house it in a cupola. You will find this arrangement more efficient than the open system, and no more exacting in regard to attention. L. C. C.

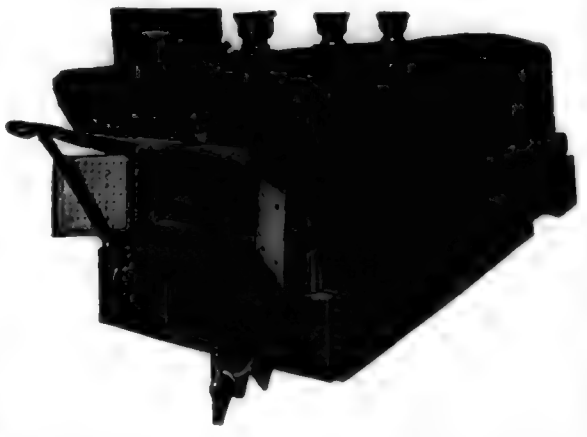


ONE FLOW SUFFICIENT.

I am going to build a greenhouse 16x30 feet, with two feet of glass in the side walls and the lower three feet double boarded, with paper between. The house will run north and south. The south end will be glass and the north end will connect to the boiler house and potting shed. There will be a raised bench six feet wide and twenty feet long in the center of the house, with a 2-foot walk all around it, and there will be a 3-foot raised bed around the sides and ends, with the exception of about three feet in the center of each end, which will be used for entrances. The house is to be heated to 45 or 50 degrees in zero weather, in this Ohio climate.

I intend to use a round Burnham or a Wilks hot water boiler, which will be placed in the northeast corner of the shed. Please state what size of boiler I would need. I intend to use an open tank system. The tank will not be over three feet above the main flow, which will be the highest pipe, and the boiler pit will not be over three feet below the ground level.

Now, I intend to run a 3-inch pipe straight up from the boiler to about the same height as the purlins and then run a 3-inch pipe across the end of the house in the potting shed, with about one inch of rise. Then from this main flow I will run two 2-inch flow pipes on the purlin supports close to the roof, to the south end, with about two inches of fall. The purlin supports are three feet on each side of the ridge, or along the edge of the center bench. The supply pipes will drop down to the bottom of the end benches and connect with two horizontal coils, one to each main. Each coil will contain four 2-inch or five 1½-inch returns, running under the end and side benches, with about three inches of fall to the boiler shed end, where they will connect to a 3-inch main return to the boiler, with about two inches of fall, and then drop straight down to the bottom of the boiler. W. Z.



A boiler rated to carry 250 feet of radiation should be ample for this house. Unless you have some reason for using Gentlemen: — Thermostat arrived and works to entire satisfaction. You are certainly to be congratulated on furnishing the trade with such a valuable and at the same time so cheap a "watchman" for the greenhouse during day and night time. A person can retire without worry; in case of any emergency the Thermostat will do its duty and prevent great pecuniary loss. I do not see how any intelligent greenhouse owner can get along without it. Yours very truly, the two 2-inch pipes in the manner suggested, which I do not think will prove satisfactory, I would suggest that one 2-inch pipe will answer quite as well, but you will find it desirable to use at least twelve 1½-inch pipes for returns. Do not connect the expansion tank with the flow; connect it with the return close to the boiler and push it up as high as possible. L. C. C.

STEAM FOR CARNATION HOUSE.

Please give me some information as to the piping of a carnation house for steam, to maintain a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees in zero weather. The house is 27x200 feet and runs east and west, with a lean-to along the north side, five feet wide. The height of the house is six feet six inches to the gutter and thirteen feet six inches to the ridge, with two feet of glass in the south wall and both gable ends glass. The walls will be double boarded, with building paper between. The boiler will be centrally located on the north side. I should like to have the main supply pipes large enough so they will take care of another house of the same size, should it be wanted later. What size of cast-iron boiler will be needed for the one house? If another house should be needed, I will get a second boiler and have the two connected so that only one need be used in mild weather. I want to place the boiler on a level with the greenhouse, and employ a steam trap. Would you advise using a reducing valve? I shall have to do all the firing alone at first. Can all valves that are necessary on the return pipes be placed through the center walk? My location is northern Indiana. C. B.

To heat the house and lean-to to a carnation temperature, 50 degrees, during cold weather, with steam, I would suggest that you use a 4-inch main riser from the boiler to the center of the house and that a cross be installed at that point, so as to allow carrying the riser on to the next house and to also provide for a 2-inch flow pipe to be carried in either direction 100 feet to the ends of the house, there to divide by three or four branches to feed as many coils, according to the position of the pipes. The coils would carry, in all, eighteen 1¼-inch return pipes, three of which should be in the lean-to portion and fifteen distributed under the benches of the main house. By the use of valves on the branches of the flow pipe leading to the heating coils, and good globe and check valves on the returns between the manifold and the main return, it will be easy to throw any coil out of service.

The Burnham and the other Good Boilers

There are other good boilers, of course, but who wants only a good boiler?

Now listen! It is not a very unusual occurrence for a few men to make the same mistake, and keep on asserting they are right (because none of us like to admit we are wrong), but it is not reasonable to think that, say, 1000 men who think alike about any one make of boiler, are as apt to be dead wrong as only 50 men who pin their faith on some other makes.

The fact that the Burnham boiler is heating the hundreds of greenhouses it is today, seems to put Burnhams in the class with the 1000 men who think alike, and who know they haven't made any mistake.

The Burnham is the only Cast Iron Sectional Boiler made especially for greenhouse work. It is the boiler that has grown up with the greenhouse business—has met its demands step by step.

It is safe to order such a boiler by mail—we can ship at once.

If you use a return steam trap, it will be necessary to carry the main return into a receiving tank or hot well, and from there carry the water back to the boiler. In this case one house should be equipped with a boiler rated to carry at least 2,000 square feet of radiation.

The Club Exhibition.

Some years ago an enterprising entertainment committee decided to stir up things a little by holding an exhibition of home-grown stock in the Florists' Club's rooms. The idea has grown and now several such displays are held each year. On the evening of November 18 an exhibition of fall stock was held in connection with the regular meeting. The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange kindly gave the members the use of its large, well equipped basement for the purpose. When you consider that no premiums were offered and that the date of the show was announced only a week before, the exhibitors surely deserve much thanks.

Three firms from out of the city responded with exhibits, the largest and most commendable of which was that of Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich. This firm showed nine seedlings and many of their this season's introductions.

Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, sent fifty of their new carnation, O. P. Bassett, which made a decided hit with the carnation growers.

Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, sent a few sprays of Baby Margaret, a white sport of the yellow pompon chrysanthemum, Baby.

Fred Pautke, of Grosse Pointe, brought down quite a collection of stock. Vases of fifty Yellow Jones, White Jones, Yellow and White Chadwick, Maud Dean, a fine vase of Enguehard, President Schmidt, Mrs. Chamberlain and others spoke highly of the grower's abilities. Three vases of pompons were also in the collection, two of these being his own seedlings. Mr. Pautke also showed fine Harlowarden carnations, several vases of a shell pink seedling carnation, some sweet peas and some very fine daisies.

J. B. Dinser had a number of well done ferns of different varieties, and begonias.

August Von Boeselager, of Mt. Clemens, sent fifty of his new seedling carnation, Clara. The color is similar to Harlowarden. Some yellow cosmos around the vase of carnations set them off.

John Breitmeyer's Sons displayed several fine cattleyas and dendrobiums, also a well grown box of valley.

Thomas Browne's Eaton towered above everything in the hall, while his Dr. Enguehard were also prize winners. Besides these was a fine vase of Golden Wedding.

The only private gardener who responded to the invitation of the committee was J. J. De Carteret, of Grosse Pointe. His Yellow Jones, Dr. Enguehard and Vinkley Smith were attractive.

Michael Bloy showed some well done cyclamens and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine; also good mums.

The best carnations were shown by Leopold Mallest, of Mount Clemens. A vase of twenty-five of Lawson as we used to see them loomed up among some fine Enchantress and Beacon.

Gus. Taepke had some good primroses and several varieties of ferns.

J. E. Smith, of Wyandotte, showed several ever-blooming geraniums. Some Wyandotte mums were also there.

Fred Miesel showed some cyclamen plants that were the talk of the evening.

C. Distelrath was the only one who showed chrysanthemum plants. He had about a dozen plants.

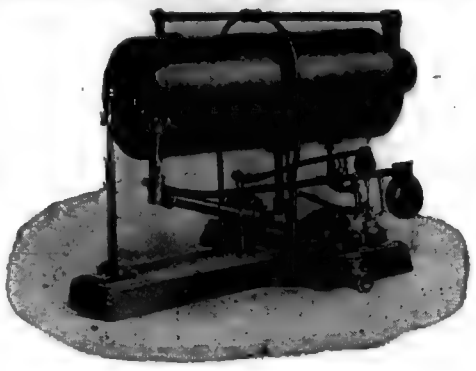
Beard Bros. were on hand with a collection of stock for ferneries and small plants of Whitmani and Boston.

Ferdinand Kolbe showed some fine chrysanthemums, among them Enguehard, Nagoya and Adalia.

James Carry was represented by Jack, Jr., with some exceptionally fine Richmond and Killarney roses, and some good White Enchantress.

Chas. Plumb showed about the first Roman hyacinths of the season, also some good plants of Whitmani and Piersoni fern. His Brides and Maids were of fine quality.

At the business meeting the name of James Carry, Jr., was received for membership. The reading of a paper entitled "The Trend of the Times," by S. S. Skidelsky, earned for him a vote of thanks and a hearty round of applause.



Elmer D. Smith was called upon for a few remarks about mums and he readily responded.

Some of the members who had been at Chicago were called upon for their idea of the national show. Albert Pochelon was well pleased with the show in general. He said that some of the visitors expected too much. He spoke of the decorations as being fine, saying that many exhibits were changed every day and that in order to appreciate the show one had to stay for some time. CAPITOL BOILERS

This Man Knows

Herbert S. Nase, Sellersville, Pa., writes:—"The Capitol Boiler I purchased of you in 1893 has given me entire satisfaction, so much so that I have purchased one more today for heating my greenhouse No. 2."

Here is a man who tested and found the Capitol Boiler all we claim for it. If you have any doubts, write him.

Mr. Florist, you know how important the boiler is in a greenhouse. You cannot afford to take chances or experiment.

In Capitol Boilers you have Divided Sections (which mean, in case of accident, repairs so promptly made as to prevent injury to plants through lowering of temperature); you have a boiler that utilizes every heat unit so that no fuel is wasted; you have a boiler that requires but little attention, and is always reliable.

It is better to be safe than sorry. Put in a Capitol Boiler.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

The weather last week was very mild for the time of the year and trade was fairly good, but nothing to brag about. Roses and carnations are still plentiful in all downtown stores. There were a few funerals and decorations and beautiful work was turned out.

Various Notes.

August Leclere was a busy man last week, installing steam in the greenhouses at the asylum on Fourth street, to take the place of hot water. He also had a decoration for Governor A. E. Wilson, at his mansion in Frankfort. Many palms, ferns and cut flowers were used.

Hillenmeyer is selling lots of trees this fall.

Honaker's windows are always attractive and he has one of the most up-to-date flower stores in the south.

R. H. Tacke, superintendent of parks, is as busy as a bee, planting trees and other nursery stock.

J. A. Keller is shipping some nice roses, carnations and mums out of town.

Lucien Leclere, who was laid up last week with tonsilitis, is able to be out again and is ready for business.

S. S. Kelley is sending out some good mums and carnations.

Rudolph Klag, who was formerly employed by J. A. Keller as rose and carnation grower, is now located in Missouri.

Fister Bros. built 20,000 feet of glass last summer for lettuce and cucumbers. There is a good demand for forced vegetables here. The plant is heated by a large Kroeschell boiler.

Mr. Nichols, superintendent of City cemetery, is busy planting trees and shrubs.

Anderson & White will have a nice lot of plants for Christmas and the holidays. Frank McMullen is in charge of the place and is busy planting bulbs in the cemetery.

Michler Bros. Co. will build another house in the near future.

Girvin's Handy Cutter

Mr. Florist, if you once get one of these cutters on your finger you will never be without it for many times the price. Just the thing for cutting your carnations, sweet peas, asters, melons, grapes, etc. Why be bothered with a knife or follow the old way of breaking your flowers when a Handy Cutter will do the work better and save you money and time? Don't continue breaking your carnations and thus ruin hundreds of young shoots daily, simply because a knife is unhandy to work with, but try a Handy Cutter. If you are not entirely satisfied with it you can return it and have your money refunded. These cutters are made of spring brass, highly nickel-plated, and contain a removable blade.

The Market.

Another week has passed which lingers pleasantly in the memory. We have had good business and have every reason to be satisfied. With Thanksgiving now upon us, the coming week will undoubtedly be a good one. In fact, from the orders already booked, it could not be otherwise.

Chrysanthemums are showing indications of the approach of the end of their season. Large, fancy stock has advanced in price during the last week and will go still higher. First-class blooms will bring $3 per dozen readily enough, and there will be many mums sold at that price this year. While one would be led to believe that mums are scarce now, this is largely due to the fact that the growers are holding them for Thanksgiving. Still, the end of the mum season is in sight, and after the vast amount of Thanksgiving stock is out of the way, only a few of the latest sorts will be left.

As to other stock, it remains much as reported last week. Roses are plentiful enough and the stock is good. Carnations are also equal to the demand. Violets remain scarce and are not equal to the demand by any means. They have advanced in price to 75 cents and $1 per hundred.

It is surprising how the green goods business has developed in this city during the last few years. Now such items as galax leaves, leucothoe sprays, fancy ferns and wild smilax are being handled here in very large quantities. This city has developed into a sort of distributing point and, with its facilities for receiving shipments from the south, it is justly so. This business, great though it is, is still in its infancy and is bound to increase day by day.

Various Notes.

H. Schmidt, of Oxford, O., will be in with a fine lot of Golden Wedding, Timothy Eaton and Yellow Eaton for Thanksgiving. They are first-class and will bring the top market price.

George Leedle, of the Leedle Rosary, Springfield, O., was a caller November 19. H. Schmidt, of Oxford, O., was also a visitor. C. J. Ohmer.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Last week was ideal as to weather, but the market was weak. It was high tide on the chrysanthemum river, and all its tributaries seemed to empty into the Baltimore market. Prices dropped below real values. In consequence, every retail store was decorated, the Exchange was full of fine stock, and the street corners were made veritable flower shows by the gentry of the pavements.

Roses are lower and of better quality, which seems an unfair condition, and one that weather alone can remedy. All varieties of flowers felt the overabundance of chrysanthemums. Carnations are plentiful and seem druggy. Some fine lilies are seen, which find ready sale. There are large quantities of greens, especially asparagus and smilax. Wild smilax has been tabooed in the large department stores by the fire underwriters, who claim that when dry it is inflammable. This embargo should be removed at once, as there is absolutely no danger from this form of decoration, at least much less than from the bunting and other light cotton goods that are constantly used for decoration and display in all the large stores.

Various Notes.

The school board has ordered plans prepared for the Agricultural High School to be built at Glencoe. This will be the first institution of the kind established in Baltimore county. Besides the ordinary branches, a thorough agricultural course will be taught.

Halliday Bros. have a house of fine poinsettias which will be about right for Christmas.

Andrew L. Black, aged 67 years, died Wednesday, November 18, of infirmities of old age at his home at Lutherville, where he had been engaged in business for many years. He formerly had a large range of glass on Chase street, but disposed of it for residence purposes, keeping a store at the old location. He is survived by a widow, one daughter and three sons, who were associated in business with him. Mr. Black was a native of Scotland.

C. C. Hoffman has some of the finest callas to be seen anywhere and is cutting large quantities of blooms. Q.

Interior Painting is a Nuisance

And right there is another U-Bar strong point, for all the interior iron parts (and that means practically every interior part but the doors) are given a coat of glistening aluminum paint—a paint that continues to glisten and is just as good years afterward—not even a speck of mildew is in sight in one of our houses painted six years ago.

But that is only one U-Bar strong point—to it, add increased lightness, unmatched productiveness, greatest endurance—these in combination go to make up the highest type of greenhouse construction—the U-Bar. Send for catalog.

The ideal construction for private estates, parks, public institutions and florists' showrooms.

At the First National Flower Show

The Cypress Greenhouse captured almost 9 out of 10 of the prizes offered. In some classes the Cypress houses took all the prizes offered. Exhibitors competed from all parts of the country and the result shows beyond all doubt that the Cypress house can produce as high grade stock as the iron-frame house, or any other kind.

Don't build another house until you investigate our construction.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

WEDDING BOUQUETS.

Valley the Most Popular Material.

The majority of the brides carry bouquets of valley; indeed, it is probable more bride's bouquets are made of valley than of all other flowers combined, although the sweet pea also is a favorite flower for this purpose. I described the construction of a shower bouquet of valley in a recent issue of the REVIEW, and anyone with a little aptitude for cut flower work can, by the aid of those directions and a little practice, become proficient. It often is said that a florist's abilities are judged by his bride's bouquets more often than by any other class of work, so it pays to pay attention to the little details of good craftsmanship.

Sweet Pea Bouquets.

Sweet peas are among the flowers which do nicely for almost any kind of work. They make up exceptionally well as wedding bouquets and, what is more, it does not require much experience to make a pretty sweet pea bouquet.

It will be necessary to wire most of the flowers into bunches of about six to nine flowers in each bunch. In wiring see that each bunch is in itself loose and airy. A good plan is to wire a spray of green in with some of the bunches.

Proceed to make the bouquet the same as you would with valley. You can obtain a fine shower effect by using some long sprays of Asparagus Sprengeri for a starter, tying only a few of the bunches of peas in with this; then as you work along use more flowers until at last you build up a bouquet of good size.

If any of the sweet pea green is available I would use some of this, but do not use this entirely, for by using some other green you will find your customer will be better pleased. Asparagus Sprengeri is one of the prettiest greens to use with sweet peas.

A bouquet of medium size will call for the use of about 150 to 250 peas. This will give you enough for use in the ribbon.

Gauze ribbon is by far the nicest to use with the peas, although satins are fashionable this year.

Violet Bouquets.

Violets are not commonly used in wedding bouquets, but once in a while they are called for; I heard of an order recently where nothing else would do. Violets find their principal use for the corsage, but if a customer wishes to carry them, she should have them, by all means, and if carefully made she will carry a very pretty bouquet at that.

First of all, secure as fresh violets as is possible and, before attempting to use them, get them thoroughly hardened by immersing the stems well in water. Tie a sheet of wax paper lightly over the flowers. This will exclude the air and help retain the odor. Never under any circumstances wet the flowers. Some florists do not believe in keeping violets in a refrigerator or cooler, but I always have followed this practice and never heard any complaint. Of course it is not advisable to keep them in too cold a place, for then they would not stand up when taken into a warm room.

After you have finished all the other bouquets the order calls for, start on the violet bouquet. As in the case of the lily of the valley, it will be necessary to wire the violets, not only some of them, but all of them. Wire them into bunches of from six to twelve. The smaller the bunches the better will be the effect.

Secure the shower effect with ribbons by tying quite a few of the flowers in with the small bows. The trouble is that as soon as the violets commence to hang their heads, which will be very soon, the whole effect will be spoiled.

Points Worth Remembering.

As in all other work, the florist should study the taste or style of his customer and, if possible, the person who is going to carry the bouquet. Some people think far more of tea roses than of orchids. Also try to find out the material of the gowns to be worn, as well as the colors. All should harmonize if a really artistic effect is desired.

It is essential that you cover the handles or stems of your bouquets with foil or some material that will not allow dampness to get through.

When arranging the small ribbon, guard against the ribbon being tied to the bouquet in one place. Fasten the ends all over in the bouquet, and not too near the end of the flowers.

If possible, find how the bouquets are to be carried. If over the arm, a one-sided bouquet should be made.

And after all these precautions see that the bouquets are packed carefully, so that they will arrive at their destination in perfect condition.

Last, but by no means least, be prompt. If you have promised delivery for a certain hour, keep your promise. If you find it will be a little later, call up your customers and advise them of this fact. Delay will not be forgotten or forgiven. HUGO SCHROETER.

ADVERTISING PAID.

C. H. Green, Fremont, Neb., says Thanksgiving business was most satisfactory, supply, demand, prices and weather all good. For the few days before the holiday he printed the following in the local daily:

A Thanksgiving Dinner Table without a few flowers is a Thanksgiving dinner table that could be made considerably more attractive.

There was no name or address, but Mr. Green says, "This little business bringer, scattered liberally over the columns of the paper, caused more comment and brought greater returns than all the rest of the advertising we did."

A MONTREAL STORE SHOW.

Retail florists who have tried giving "openings," or other forms of private exhibitions, at their stores have almost invariably found that they attracted a most gratifying amount of attention from just the class of people it is most desired to interest. It repeatedly has been proven that the women, who are the principal buyers of flowers, always are interested in demonstrations of the best ways of using flowers. At public exhibitions no feature attracts as much attention as the displays of the retailers. No matter how marvelous the perfection of finish on the 100 mammoth blooms that capture first prize, the interest of the ladies, and of the men, too, for that matter, is but momentary compared to the interest taken in the table decorations. And the public appreciation of the other cut flower work is equally keen, only funeral work, often shown at flower shows, really has no place in such exhibitions; florists never should feature funeral flowers—it isn't necessary; bring out the uses of flowers for social occasions, and the public will not fail to remember the flowers when the sad days come.

P. McKenna & Son, Montreal, enlarged and modernized their store during the last summer, so this fall they decided to give a flower show to attract the public, call attention to the fact that the improvements were complete, familiarize the public with their enlarged facilities, and demonstrate their ability as artists. All these things were accomplished, for the public never fails to respond to an invitation to such an affair; the ladies not only enjoy the flowers, but they want to see how the florist uses them—to get pointers that can be employed at some later date.

One of the special features of the McKenna affair was the decoration of the windows; it was quite out of the ordinary, and will be of interest to florists in other towns because of its novelty. Instead of filling the windows with plants and flowers, as most would do, McKenna & Son procured three of the wax figures used in dry-goods stores for the display of gowns, and decked them out in bridal flowers. Needless to say, the figures were gowned appropriately. The bride carried a bunch, made in regulation manner, of Bride roses and valley. The bridesmaid had a muff of Enchantress carnations, showered with pink roses. The flower girl had a hat of sweet peas. No one needs to be told that such a group of figures, with appropriate surroundings, attracted a vast amount of attention. Put in such a window in one of the big stores on any principal business street and you will have to arrange for an officer to prevent blockading the sidewalk.

During the three days' opening McKenna & Son had special displays of cut flowers in the store, and of plants in the conservatory, but the only feature that could compare with the bridal party in the window, when it came to holding attention, was the table decoration that occupied the central position in the store. It was changed each day.

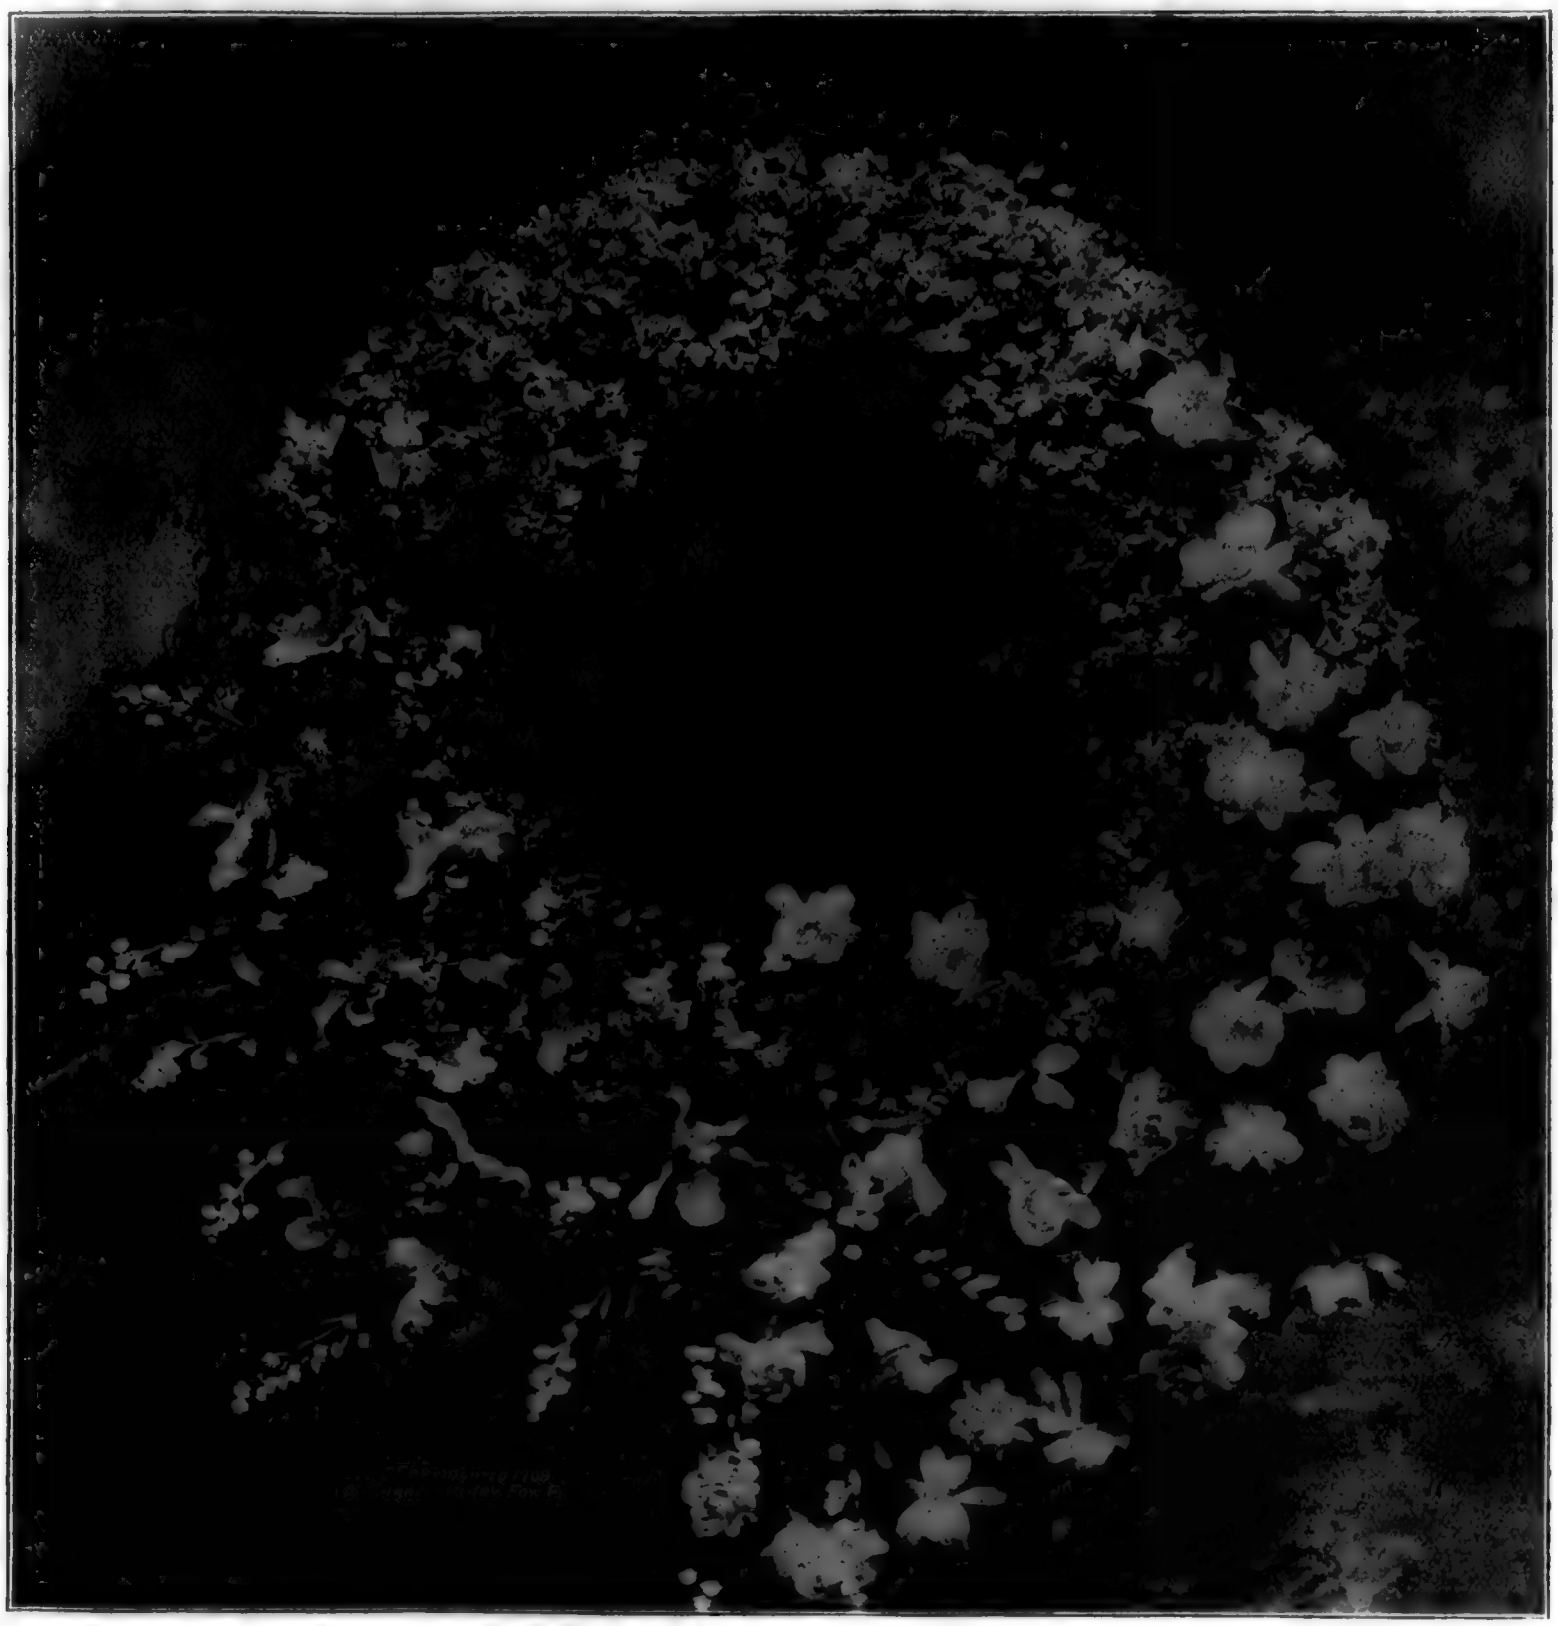
WREATH OF VIOLETS.

The wreath shown in the illustration opposite was made for funeral use at the Sign of the Rose, the unique flower store of Charles Henry Fox, Philadelphia. While it combines roses and orchids, it was made largely of violets. Smilax was the green used, violets requiring a bold background. Mr. Fox calls attention to the method used in making a wreath of this kind. The violets are first placed in position, covering the entire body of the wreath; then the light sprays of adiantum are placed in position and then the roses and cattleyas are added, with a few sprays of lily of the valley. The idea is to emphasize the graceful fern in a way that it could not be emphasized if put in afterwards. This wreath was four or five feet in diameter and was made some time ago for a member of Philadelphia's four hundred. Such a design is costly. PHIL.



SCHINDLER'S SUCCESS.

Possibly the best feature of the recent exhibition at New Orleans was the retail display. There were six classes in which the retailers could show their skill and many of the leaders in the trade there entered in one or more classes, but Mrs. Carrie Rehm, instead of exhibiting, served as one of the judges, thereby assuring expert opinion. These retail exhibits always are among the best features of a flower show; they interest the public far more than any other class of exhibits, and the New Orleans public is no exception.

J. A. Schindler & Co. made special effort for this show and were well repaid, not only by capturing four first and two second prizes, but by the interest the public took in their work. They were first for design, with a lyre on a stand; for basket, other than chrysanthemums; for hand bouquet, with chrysanthemums; for table decoration, with chrysanthemums; second for basket of chrysanthemums and for corsage bouquet. The table decoration is shown in the illustration on page 8. It was arranged with yellow chrysanthemums only. The centerpiece consisted of a plateau of yellow mums, in the center of which stood a tall, narrow vase filled with large yellow mums and sprays of Asparagus plumosus. There were six corsage bouquets and six boutonnieres of yellow mums.

The cloth was trimmed with bows of yellow ribbon and sprays of adiantums. Above the table was suspended an electric light dome, with four yellow lights, which made a beautiful effect.

DEUTZIAS AND SPIRAEAS.

What treatment shall we give Deutzia gracilis and Spiræa Anthony Waterer, Holland grown, to have them in for Easter? The deutzias are pot grown.

M. & C.

Pot up the deutzias and Spiræa Anthony Waterer as soon as you receive them. Be sure the balls are well soaked with water before potting, if dry. Keep them in a cool frame or pit until they are wanted for forcing. If they get a little frost it will not harm the shoots, but protect the pots with straw or leaves. To have Deutzia gracilis in nice bloom for Easter you should allow it from six to seven weeks. Hard forcing will then be unnecessary. Start in a temperature of 55 degrees at night. In such a house they should come in flower for Easter, 1909, if you start them about February 20. It is better to remove the plants, when expanded, to a cooler house.

Spiræa Anthony Waterer takes a little longer time than the deutzia to flower; better allow it two months. It is a less satisfactory forcing plant than the deutzia, but if your plants are pot grown they should do all right. Of course, each of these shrubs can be had in bloom in a shorter period by hard forcing. You will not then, however, have as stocky and serviceable plants as if grown cooler.

C. W.

SWEET PEAS FOR APRIL.

We have a house, 32x200, in which we wish to plant sweet peas. When should we plant so as to have the crop off by April 15? Would it be advisable to plant the seed in flats and transplant? What varieties are most in demand in the wholesale markets? How far apart should the rows be, and how close in the row should the plants be? R. B.

By running your rows lengthwise of the house you can plant five rows, allowing them six feet between the rows. You can have an additional row by reducing the width to five feet, but we would advise allowing but five rows to the house. You can either start your seeds in flats or sow directly in the rows; the former method we like best. Avoid too thick planting. If you set out the little seedlings in a single line two inches apart, they will give you far better returns than if you plant closer. Thinner planting will give you stronger haulm and much longer flower stalks. A night temperature of 46 to 50 degrees suits sweet peas, the higher figure being to their liking while in bloom.

Peas sown now will bloom longer than April 15. Get your seed in at once and restrict yourself to a few varieties. The regular forcing sweet peas are not numerous. For white use Mont Blanc or Florence Denzer; another good forcing variety is Watchung. Christmas Pink, pink and white, is the earliest of its color. Earliest of All comes in a little later. The two foregoing colors take best in the markets. Mrs. Alex. Wallace, lavender; Sunbeams, pale yellow, and Mrs.

Wm. Sim, salmon pink, are all good forcing varieties. We would advise planting two rows each of white and pink and white, and the remaining row of the other colors. C. W.

A BAD CASE OF SPOT.

I do not know that I shall have any violets this season, on account of six weeks of spot. I have had all kinds of instructions, but can do nothing with the spot on my Princess of Wales violets. I have 800 Princess and 350 Marie Louise in the same house. The latter have not been touched with spot yet, but I fear the Princess are ruined, unless they recuperate when the weather gets cooler. Outdoors, in a large coldframe, I had Marie Louise and Dorsetts side by side. In this case the spot just ruined the Marie Louise. I had to pull them up and throw them away. All the Dorsetts remained free from the disease. Now, it will take a wiser person than I to understand such freakishness in spot.

My plants, many of them, stand with bloom buds standing up, but with no leaves to mention, as I took them off as soon as I saw them limp with spot. I feel perfectly helpless in the matter.

E. A. P.

This subscriber has my heartfelt sympathy, for a good dose of spot, which they have by the description, is most discouraging and anything but desirable. As for the "all kinds of instructions," I do not doubt it in the least, and the most exasperating part of it all is that the instructions usually do not amount to anything. If it is a very light touch of spot, one can sometimes pick carefully all leaves that are at all touched and burn them. Then, by giving good treatment, you may save them, so as to get a fair crop. But when the attack is at all bad, I would pull them up, "lock, stock and gun barrel," and cremate them in the boiler. And if some of the plants were good and others diseased, I would surely pull and burn the latter, lest the disease spread to the good ones. I would then give the soil a pretty liberal dusting of lime, turn it up and dry it out, and plant some other crop that would do well in a violet house temperature, etc.

Yes, not only is spot freakish, but I might add that violets themselves are freakish, and a grower does often run up against things like this that make him feel helpless. Yet, with spot, if you will look back over your treatment, you will frequently, not always, find that you really helped it on by something that you did. Perhaps it was a little check in growth, or a few damp, cloudy days, or closing up tight with a heavy fumigation with tobacco stems. There might be all or part of these, or a combination of some of them, and lo! the next morning finds you with a house full of the disease and your hopes of profits gone in one short night. But such is occasionally our lot, and the next day sees the ever cheerful florist up and hustling and preparing the house for a crop of some other kind, hoping for the best, and determined never to be caught just that way again, if he knows it.

R. E. Shuphelt.

IN A COLD HOUSE.

For various reasons I would like to turn my violet house into a coldframe. The plants are Princess of Wales violets in solid benches. The house runs north and south and is heated by hot water. The plants apparently are perfectly healthy. The temperature so far has been 40 degrees at night. All days when over 40 degrees outside the top and side ventilators were wide open. I thought first to mulch lightly with old stable manure, then cover with marsh hay and dead leaves and leave the top ventilators open a little; in short, treat the greenhouse as though it were a coldframe, banking with fresh manure. Then I want to start a fire in time to have a large Easter crop, say in March. I have always kept my pipes full of water all summer. Will it injure the pipes to leave them empty three months? Will the plants, being now under cover, be too tender for such treatment, and would they be of any use for propagation by cuttings or division? L. D.

There is no reason why the violets will not carry all right through the winter protected as you have suggested. They have not had sufficient fire heat as yet to make them too tender, although it would have been better had none been used. It would be better to lay the dead leaves over the plants. This is nature's own covering and cannot be improved upon. Lay the marsh hay over the leaves, letting the covering be perfectly light. I do not think there is any need of the old stable manure. Of course, even when banked outside and well covered inside, quite a little frost will get to the plants. If your house is a low one, can you not arrange to use mats or burlapping for additional protection outside? Or board shutters without the mats will help considerably.

It will not hurt the pipes to have the water drawn off; no other course is open to you.

Do not remove the covering too suddenly. Let the frost thaw out of the beds before exposing the plants.

Plants grown cold are preferable for propagating purposes to those exposed to fire heat all winter. C. W.

VIOLETS ON TILE BENCHES.

The illustrations on page 10 are from photographs taken at the violet houses of J. Vonder Linden, Rhinebeck, N. Y., and one of them shows one of the first houses of violets ever planted on tile benches. It will be of special interest to the growers of violets on this account. The house is 24x150 and it will be noted that the plants are strong and healthy. The other house shows a house benched in the ordinary way, with solid beds, in which the growth also is excellent. Mr. Vonder Linden is growing 60,000 violet plants this season. He is the president of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., recently organized and opened for business in New York city.

House of Violets on Tile Benches.

STOCKS FOR BENCH CULTURE.

I have about 200 stocks in 5-inch pots, which are now in a frame outside. The plants are fine. I bought the seed last fall and the firm I bought it of must have made a mistake in the seed, for I sent for ten weeks' stock and they sent me the wrong kind. It has not yet bloomed or shown any signs of buds. It looks to me like the wallflower type. Now, I would like to ask if the plants would bloom if benched in a cool house, and if it would pay. E. M.

Undoubtedly you have received the wrong variety of stock, but if you have a cool house bench and plant them in, they will flower at a time when the flowers will prove serviceable and they will pay you well, unless the strain is unusually poor and the majority turn out to be singles. C. W.

STOCKS DAMPING OFF.

Will you please give me some information as to the cause of the damping off of my stocks? I have a small bed, 4x20 feet, into which I transplanted the stocks from the seed pans. I used fresh soil in the bed and they were fine and stocky until about half grown, when they began to show yellow leaves at the bottom, and to damp off. S. W. B.

You do not state how thickly you set out your plants; probably you have planted too closely. The best way to grow stocks is to pot off singly from the seed boxes and, when nicely established in these, plant into the benches. The plants of the ten weeks' stocks require a foot apart each way; early varieties, such as White Column, can go closer. Stocks are impatient of a high temperature; 50 degrees at night should not be exceeded, and plenty of fresh air is needed on all possible occasions. Scratch the surface over occasionally, to prevent its becoming baked.

Too much nitrogenous manure would cause damping off, especially if the manure was rather new. Soil of a sour nature would also cause the same trouble. Without knowing more of the exact conditions, we cannot tell the reason of your plants going off, but it has very likely been due to too close planting, keeping the plants and soil too moist and not giving the required fresh air. C. W.

SOUTHERN GREENS.

"There is a fine big crop of holly in this section this season, which is well berried and of luxuriant, glossy foliage," says E. A. Beaven, of Evergreen, Ala. "We expect to double our output of southern decoratives this season. The express movement of wild smilax is on now. Consignments are going to all parts of the north. The heavy carlot movement of holly, galax leaves, palm leaves, crowns, needle pines and magnolia foliage began in earnest about November 20 and will continue for about twenty days. While our express shipments are extensive, we make a specialty of packing and shipping in carlots, which has grown wonderfully during the last nine years which we have been in it."

The E. A. Beaven concern operates from several shipping stations between Montgomery and Mobile, Ala. It operates its own saw mill and box factory. The plant is now running full hand, turning out packages for this season's trade.

KEEPING DAHLIA TUBERS.

Please let me know how to keep dahlia roots over, as I have trouble every year. D. J. W.

When lifting dahlia tubers you should leave them out long enough to get a thorough drying in the sun. A root or vegetable cellar answers well as a winter storing place. A good plan is to keep them in boxes or barrels. First lay in a little dry sand, sawdust or bran, then a layer of the dahlia tubers, and then cover them with sand or sawdust. Keep adding plants and covering them until the boxes or barrels are full. In a dry cellar this packing of the roots will prevent shriveling. In a cellar such as will keep potatoes, they can be stacked on shelves quite thickly together, and will keep well if the thermometer does not go below freezing. C. W.

BUGS "BOILING" OUT.

Can you tell me the name of the bugs sent under separate cover? They just boil out of the ground in one of my greenhouses. B. B. C.

We do not know what the insects are which you sent. On being received here over a week after leaving Kansas they were a squirming mass of life, and we can well imagine that if they simply boil from the earth of your greenhouse they will be disagreeable, even if not harmful. It will be possible to apply something to the floor of the house to exterminate them, but we would suggest that you write to the state entomologist of your state, or send samples to the Kansas Agricultural College, Entomological department. They will inform you what the insects are and how to clear them out if they are of an injurious class.

Carnations

REMEDIES FOR RUST.

Would you be kind enough to give me the ammonia-copper formula for spraying carnations for rust? I had it long ago, but unfortunately have lost it, and this year I have rust making its appearance.
G. W.

The solution used for rust was made up as follows: Take one pound of sulphate of copper and dissolve it in two quarts of ammonia. When thoroughly dissolved, dilute this with thirty gallons of water and spray on the plants. You need not dilute it all at one time, unless you wish to use it all in one application, which is not likely unless you have a very large place. Keep it in a jug, well stoppered, and dilute as needed. Use about one-half pint to one gallon of water and shake well before using.

While you may find this solution of some help in fighting rust, you will not find it necessary if you will adopt up-to-date cultural methods. We find that by keeping the plants dry overhead, except when syringing about once each week, we are troubled very little with rust. Dusting the plants with dry-slaked lime, or sulphur and lime, or grape dust, are all good remedies. Keep the atmosphere buoyant and do not allow the plants to suffer any checks from irregular watering or irregular temperature. Never have the plants standing wet over night from syringing, but if you do get caught, be sure to run some fire heat, with ventilation, and a little sulphur on the steam pipe.

THRIPS ON WHITE ENCHANTRESS

I am sending herewith one carnation and two buds, and I wish some expert would tell me what is the matter with them. They are White Enchantress, grown under glass and planted into the bench about May 1. The plants look healthy and the stems of these flowers were eighteen or twenty inches long. A good many of the flowers, when open, look as if they had been handled around for a week and all battered and bruised.
E. M. H.

The specimens forwarded were badly infested with thrips. If you will pull apart a half-open bud, you will see numerous little brown insects about one-sixteenth inch long and as thick as a horse-hair. These work themselves in between the petals of the young buds and live on the juice sucked from the young petals. These tiny wounds grow as the petals grow, and by the time the bloom unfolds they are as large as pinheads and discolored. The white and light pink varieties show brown spots, while the spots on the darker colored blooms usually turn white. These spots are usually a sure sign of the presence of this most destructive insect.

This pest has been the subject of a number of inquiries this fall and in recent numbers of the Review—for instance, in the issue of October 22—you will find recommendations for treating it. Nicotine is its most effective remedy.
A. F. J. B.

SULPHUR ON STEAM PIPES.

Will you kindly let me know how much sulphur it is safe to put on the steam pipes of a carnation house, 28x200 feet? This is to be used as a fungicide and also as an aid in fighting red spider. How often is it advisable to use it?
C. W. C.

Sulphur is one of the best fungicides known when in the hands of an experienced grower, but in the hands of novices it frequently does serious damage. By keeping the atmosphere lightly charged with the fumes one can usually prevent the various spot diseases from getting a hold, and no damage need be done to the plants. But, on the other hand, if it is applied too strong it will not only dull the color in all bright-colored flowers, but in extreme cases it will cause loss of foliage and even death to the plants. A safe way to use it is to mix sulphur and dry-slaked lime with water enough to make a thick paint. Paint a strip about one to two inches wide on one of the steam pipes in each house, providing the house is not more than thirty feet wide. In a wider house you will need to paint it on two pipes. Apply it about once in a week to ten days, as it seems to be needed. Better apply it mild and frequently.

COCKCROFT'S NEW WHITE.

James D. Cockcroft challenges anyone who visits his place at Northport, L. I., to find a split calyx on Georgia, his new white carnation. There is quite a lot of it now flowering and a lot of cuttings in the sand.

No one ever undertook the dissemination of a new variety with greater confidence than Mr. Cockcroft has in Georgia. Last year he sent out two, Harvard and Faust, so that he knows just what it means in hard work, first to gain the attention and favorable consideration of any considerable proportion of the growers and, second, to root a large number of cuttings to supply the demand for early delivery. In the face of unfavorable conditions last season, for all disseminators of new varieties felt the effect of the financial upheaval, Mr. Cockcroft was satisfied with the success which attended his first efforts at sending out new varieties and, with the experience gained, expects to do much better this year, all conditions being more favorable.

Traendly & Schenck are Mr. Cockcroft's selling agents in New York and say they think he has in Georgia the best white carnation that comes to that market, just as his Harvard is the best crimson in their estimation. Both varieties are heavily fringed. Georgia is pure white, large and full, giving it excellent form. It has a good stem and Mr. Cockcroft says it is an exception to find a split calyx even in the dark days of mid-winter. He says it is easy to grow, a free and continuous bloomer. He has had it for five years and for the last three seasons has marketed the blooms in considerable quantity. This year it has been exhibited at all the fall shows and has proven its traveling qualities. At the national show at Chicago it was farther from home than any other carnation exhibit, but stood up as well as those that had not come so far.

Mr. Cockcroft is a progressive grower of the new school. He builds well, grows well and sells well. His latest houses are iron frame and everything on the place is up to date. A picture of his range appeared in the REVIEW for February 20, 1908. The place is one of the several on Long Island heated by Kroeschell boilers.

After filling my carnation benches this fall, I had some soil left. This was afterward turned over, and considerable sod, which had been piled a year ago without manure, was added to it. Will that soil be good for filling the carnation benches next fall? S. M.

The soil you have left after filling your carnation benches will do well for next season, providing you will have it turned over a few times between now and the time you will use it. In the spring, when turning it, add some good cow or stable manure to it, making about one part manure to five parts soil. This soil will also be splendid for potting your young plants this winter. ENGLISH CARNATION SOCIETY.

The next show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society (English) will be held in London December 9. In the schedule of prizes three American firms are offering special awards, namely, E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., for Afterglow; Fred Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., for Winona, and F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., for Winsor.

The society has now adopted a scheme for the registration of names of new varieties. The name of the raiser and the variety, along with a brief description, will appear in the society's annual report. A new scale of points for the judging of new varieties has been adopted as follows. It will be noted that it differs slightly from that of the American Carnation Society:

Color	20	points
Size	20	"
Fragrance	10	"
Substance	10	"
Calyx	5	"
Habit of plant	20	"
Form	15	"
Total	100	points

A variety must gain at least eighty-five points to entitle it to a first-class certificate and seventy-five points to entitle it to an award of merit. The secretary is Heyward Mathias, Lucerne, Stubbington, Fareham, England. BEE.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

The Indianapolis Convention.

Now that the great national flower show is past, with its many pleasant memories left with us, the next important point in the cycle of floricultural events is the A. C. S. convention, to be held in Indianapolis January 27 and 28, 1909. The central location of this city should, and no doubt will, bring about a record-breaking attendance, and the excellence of the stock shown at the Chicago show would indicate the greatest exhibition ever held by that society.

No member of the A. C. S. should miss this convention, and, judging from the expressions by a great number who were approached on the subject at Chicago, the trade is looking forward with eagerness to the event. I said no member of the A. C. S. should miss it, and I mean just that. I should like to see every person in attendance enrolled in this organization. If you are not a member now, join when you arrive at Indianapolis. Why not? There will be a great deal more satisfaction for you in being an active participant in the affair than in being a mere hanger-on. Try it, and you will never regret it.

The local arrangements are progressing most satisfactorily. The exhibition hall is an ideal one, with splendid daylight and ample ventilation, both of which are so frequently lacking. There is a comfortable meeting hall in the same building, and other means of entertainment as well. There are plenty of first-class hotels near-by, at reasonable rates. A list of these will appear in due time. There will be the usual banquet to members on Thursday night. Tickets to this function will be distributed free to all members of the A. C. S. outside of Indiana. Members residing in Indiana, and members of the S. F. A. of Indiana, will pay for their plates.

Preparations are being made to entertain the ladies in attendance, announcement of which will appear later.

In fact, the local management is bending every effort toward making the arrangements as complete in detail as it is possible to make them. The following are the chairmen of the various committees having the matter in charge: Chas. Knopf, on finance; H. L. Wiegand, on entertainment; A. F. J. Baur, on exhibition; F. Hukriede, on reception; H. Junge, on press. To these are added J. S. Stuart, president of the S. F. A. of Indiana. These men constitute an executive committee on arrangements, with Mr. Stuart as chairman.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Thanksgiving Reflections.

One more Thanksgiving has passed, and the extremely warm weather made it a simple matter to ship out both cut flowers and plants. It is a little unusual to have temperatures in the fifties and sixties at that date. While Thanksgiving is not a time when any heavy plant trade is done, signs are not wanting that the tendency is toward plants in preference to flowers, for many customers who formerly bought roses or carnations now prefer nicely flowered pots or cyclamens, Lorraine begonias or primroses, arguing truly enough that these will keep better than the cut blooms. On questioning several country florists, who do a good local trade in plants and flowers at the various holidays, one and all reported an increased call for blooming plants compared with previous years.

Geraniums.

Chrysanthemums being now practically done, it is possible to give a little more space to the bedding geraniums, which have been rather crowded together during the mum season. The little pots should be spread out a little, any dead leaves removed, weeds pulled out and the surface soil loosened if it has become baked. It is better to keep the plants on the dry side for some weeks yet, affording just sufficient water to keep the foliage fresh. Cuttings in flats will require looking over, and any which have damped off should be removed. Be sure to keep these and, in fact, all geraniums in a sunny, airy house and as near the glass as possible. In syringing the houses, try to keep the water off the geranium foliage, especially in dark weather.

Cattleya Trianae.

Cattleya Trianæ, the most valuable of all commercial cattleyas, by reason of its flowering at the dullest season of the year, is now coming into bloom and will continue to furnish flowers for three months or more. It is a pity that this fine variety cannot be induced to produce as many flowers per sheath as C. labiata, but it is a fact that big, plump bulbs, which a grower will expect to give three, four or five flowers, will often yield only a solitary bloom. This is especially true if the plants have been grown a considerable distance from the glass. When grown near the light, the bulbs will always flower better. While in flower, Trianæs, in common with other cattleyas, should be kept moderately dry at the root and be stood at the cooler end of the house. The drier the atmosphere, the less likelihood will there be of the flowers spotting. There is always a splendid sale for this orchid and it is not surprising that many florists, who a few years ago classed orchids as outside their sphere, are now handling batches and finding them a useful and profitable side line.

English Primroses.

English primroses meet with a good sale in the markets each season. They are easily grown, either from seed or root division, and give quantities of flowers in late winter or early spring. When blooms alone are wanted, the best plan is to grow in benches in a violet temperature. For later picking, a batch can be grown in a coldframe, where they will render a good account of themselves in March and April. As pot plants there is a good market for these primroses. The pots or pans should not exceed six inches in diameter. These will hold one good clump each. They will do better if they have been potted for some time and kept in the open until they have had sufficient frost to stop leaf growth. If a few of these plants are now placed in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees at night, they will be found useful late in January. They can be sold cheaply and never need any fussing over. They will not tolerate any forcing, however, at any time.

Chinese Primroses.

A number of the earliest Chinese primroses will have been sold for Thanksgiving. This will enable you to give the remainder a little more room. Much of the beauty of the primroses is lost if the lower foliage is gone, and to keep this in good condition the plants must not be crowded. To do them full justice, the leaves of each plant should stand clear of those on its fellows. Try to keep the foliage a dark green color. If they appear somewhat pale, try the effects of weak doses of cow manure water, to which some soot has been added. Look over your stock, and if any are shaky at the neck give them a support; otherwise they are liable to snap off while being handled. Primula obconica will take more liquid food than P. Sinensis. It sells well at Christmas and, while its poisonous properties frighten some florists from handling it, there is nothing more useful for window boxes and helping to make up mixed hampers than this easily grown primula. A night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees is ample for primulas. For the obconica section a fumigation once a week is necessary.

Lilacs.

Lilacs are not forced to any considerable extent by country florists, but there are some who find uses for both plants in flower and the cut blooms. The imported pot-grown stock of these is now to hand. If the balls are at all dry, soak them and plant outdoors or in a coldframe until wanted for forcing. It will hardly pay to attempt to get any of these in for Christmas. They sell better later in the season, when they can be produced with some foliage. If flower only is wanted, a warm, dark cellar adjacent to the heating plant will bring them along fast, if they are damped over once or twice a day and the atmosphere is kept moist. As the flowers begin to open, they should be moved into a warm house where the sun's rays cannot strike them, placing in cooler quarters when expanded. For pot plants, it is better to start in full light in brisk heat, as the plants will then have satisfactory foliage.

Schizanthus.

The earliest batch of S. Wisetonensis is now coming into flower and should prove a useful addition to our Christmas flowering plants. If the plants were staked some time ago they will need no special attention, except to be kept in a cool, light house and supplied with an abundance of water, liquid manure being added every fourth day. Late batches of this schizanthus can be pricked off and potted along before becoming matted in the flats or pots. There is still ample time to make one or two additional sowings. Seed put in now will flower for Easter.

Protecting Evergreens.

The broad-leaved evergreens, of which rhododendrons are the most important, will need some winter protection during December. The beds containing these should receive a heavy mulching of leaves, if this has not already been done. These will keep the frost away from the roots and keep moisture in, something quite necessary with these evergreens. The greatest injury is done to rhododendrons when we have long spells of severe cold without any thaws. If the plants can get an abundant water supply, it materially aids in carrying them safely through the late winter months, when drying winds, frosty nights and hot sunshine during the day do great damage to unprotected plants. In the case of hardy varieties established for a number of years, protection is less necessary than with more recently planted stock. A heavy covering is positively harmful. What is needed is a light protection of pine or spruce boughs, sufficient to keep the sun from the foliage. Windbreaks, in the form of fences tied with evergreen boughs, are also useful where the wind gets a full sweep on the plants.

Protecting Bulbs and Perennials.

Bulb beds should not be protected until the ground is well frozen. It is a mistake to put on a heavy covering. Two or three inches of leaves or meadow hay is preferable to a foot of the same material. All perennials, more especially fall planted ones, are better mulched with coarse manure, straw, meadow hay or leaves, held in position with light branches of any kind. The loss from freezing and thawing is heavy during a mild winter where no mulch is applied. In every case, a light covering is preferable to a heavy one, except it may be in the case of a few somewhat tender subjects, where the protection may be of sufficient weight to exclude frost.

WEBER AND FIELD.

Weber and Field are a famous pair in farcical comedy, but this Weber is Fred, the widely known Beauty grower, and the Field he was talking about one Saturday afternoon at E. C. Amling's is the Mrs. Field rose.

"You just bet it's a dandy for summer," said Weber, and everyone listened and nodded in agreement.

It's the habit of a good many growers for the Chicago market to run into town on Saturday afternoons—take a look around and talk things over with each other and with their commission men—so it's quite the regular thing to find three or four or half a dozen at Amling's on a Saturday afternoon. In such a company Fred Weber always is listened to respectfully. He isn't the most talkative man in the bunch—but who is a better grower? He has four big houses of Beauties—and such Beauties—always fetching a price a shade above the market. And who grows better teas than Weber used to grow before he confined himself to Beauties? So what Weber says goes.

"About that Field," said Weber, "I've watched it ever since Reinberg first had it. At the start they didn't know how to handle it, but after awhile they got next, and you bet they had it fine last summer—have it fine yet, for that matter. It's a summer rose, all right, but perhaps it's a winter rose, too, only it did so well in summer they never tried to do much with it in winter. This season they have a fine lot of it handled just for winter bloom.

"Money-maker, you say? Well, the Alderman certainly made money on it last summer. Get your plants into their second summer and a good crop fixes it so you don't need to care anything about anything from those houses in winter. Summer business is getting better every year. I'm thinking of building a couple of houses for Field and Kaiserin for summer."

Fred Weber doesn't believe in grafted roses. "Give me own root teas, handled right, and the other fellow is welcome to his grafted plants. He may beat me out a little up to December, but from Christmas on I'll get the ground shoots and make the money."

THE LEAVES TURN YELLOW.

Enclosed you will find a sample of rose leaves, which, as you will see, are affected with a fungus on the back or under side, which causes the leaves to turn yellow and drop off. What is the trouble and the remedy? We have applied the Bordeaux mixture, but it has not had time to work yet. The four leaves enclosed are at the different stages. M. F. C.

These leaves were very dry and shriveled when they reached me, but they showed signs of being affected with some kind of fungus, in all probability mildew. This, however, is not the cause of the leaves turning yellow and dropping off. The usual cause of this trouble is a sudden fall of temperature while the soil in the benches is saturated with moisture.

For mildew, use the sulphur mixture on the pipes and also dust the foliage once a week. Keep the benches rather dry and keep on ample ventilation, with a night temperature of 56 to 58 degrees and a day temperature of 65 to 85 degrees, according to sunshine. RIBES.

MILDEW ON ROSES.

I herewith send you a few rose leaves which are affected with some sort of disease. Please let me know what it is and what to do for it. The bushes are all in fine condition and are ready to give a good crop of flowers. P. J. K.

These plants are affected with mildew. The foliage indicates that the house should have more ventilation, both night and day. Dust the leaves with flowers of sulphur and paint the pipes with the following mixture, at least once a week: Flowers of sulphur, two parts; air-slaked lime, one part; mix to the consistency of paint. RIBES.

OUTDOOR ROSES.

Hybrid perpetual roses have long been great favorites of both the amateur and the private, professional gardener, and there need be but little fear that the popularity of this splendid class of roses will show any marked decline in the near future. The class of roses known as hybrid teas have during the last few years been receiving a great deal more attention than formerly, and that, no doubt, chiefly because their usefulness has become better known and their merits more appreciated.

While they are in bloom, hybrid perpetual roses are simply glorious and unsurpassed in beauty, but the short time during which the greater number of them remain in bloom only intensified the desire to have roses of some kind in bloom late in the season. Hence the increasing demand for hybrid tea roses. Some people consider there is much more trouble experienced with this class of roses, in their protection during winter, than there is with hybrid perpetuals, although, as a matter of fact, there is but little more labor required in the protection of one than the other.

All kinds of roses should, whenever it is possible, be planted in widely separated rows, in order to make both their cultivation and winter protection comparatively easy. When hybrid teas, or, for that matter, any kind of roses, are thus planted, the simplest way of protecting them from the effects of alternate freezing and thawing is to draw the soil up around the plants, so that ridges are formed. In the spring there will be no trouble in freeing the plants of soil when it becomes necessary to prune. When the plants are planted zigzag in beds, there is a little more trouble experienced in covering them with soil, as well as in uncovering them.

Some growers still lift all or most of their hybrid tea roses and keep them in coldframes, or otherwise under cover, for the winter, and there are others who cover hybrid perpetuals and hybrid teas alike with coarse stable manure or leaves, or both.

Hybrid tea roses are admirably adapted for private places, where it means a great deal to be able to cut a number of good roses outdoors up to the time when snow flies. M.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., offer for registration Chrysanthemum President Taft, Japanese incurved, pure white, height five feet, maturing October 25. Best bud August 30, but double from later ones. Size, seven and one-half inches. Parentage, Col. D. Appleton x Fidelity. Use of name authorized by President-elect Taft. Objection to the use of this name should be filed with the undersigned within twenty days, otherwise the registry will be completed.

LA CROSSE, WIS.

The florists and gardeners of La Crosse and vicinity held a meeting November 24 and organized the La Crosse Florists' and Gardeners' Association, the object to be mutual helpfulness and the advancement of the interests of the profession. Officers were elected as follows: President, J. S. Medary, who is president of Oak Grove cemetery; vice-president, C. E. Schaefer, president of the La Crosse Floral Co.; treasurer, Paul Zoelner, of Oak Grove cemetery; secretary, W. R. Ellers, of the La Crosse Floral Co. Meetings will be held at the Hotel Stoddard the second Tuesday of each month.

The florists of La Crosse held their first annual flower show in the Masonic Temple hall last week. The display of flowers and plants was large and the quality excellent, the show being a great success and sure to be repeated in succeeding years.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

At the meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club on Wednesday evening, November 18, there was a good exhibit of flowers. Prizes were awarded to Krueger Bros. Co. and E. A. Kuhnke for carnations, to Halbish and E. A. Kuhnke for chrysanthemums, and to Krueger Bros. Co. and the state hospital for roses.

The club decided to give a show during the last week of February or the first week of March, for the benefit of Toledo hospital.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was disappointing, not larger than an ordinary good Saturday. There was no great increase in the price of anything, and the accumulations were great when the day ended. Never has the pickling been more inexcusable. Roses especially were subjected to the process. Plenty of grand stock came in from the growers who never send old flowers, even when the holiday temptation is great, and the good stock brought satisfactory returns. But of the stale stuff, the less said the better; there was no sale whatever for it and a total loss in most cases resulted.

The market was in a depressed condition, after the digestion of the Thanksgiving problems, and the new week opens with clouded skies, warmer weather and even lower prices than have maintained. All stock is abundant. Roses and carnations especially feel the effect. Violets are down to the old figures again; 75 cents was the extreme top Saturday and Monday, and this figure was reached by few. Thousands were cleared out last week, all the way down to $2.50 per thousand. A good many still feel the sting of the recent flurry.

It is difficult to realize Christmas is but three weeks away. An average temperature of 60 degrees is hardly in keeping with December.

Fleischman in Bankruptcy.

Joseph Fleischman and the interests with which his name is principally associated are in bankruptcy.

It was the Fleischman Baths that precipitated the trouble. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against this concern Saturday, November 28. It was alleged, as is usual in such cases, that the corporation is insolvent and has made preferential payments, one of those cited being $400 to the Julius Roehrs Co. for plants for the luxurious establishment. Joseph Fleischman, president of the company, consented to the receivership. Attorneys for creditors said the action was preliminary to reorganization to continue the business. It is stated that the liabilities are $160,000, of which $100,000 is secured by mortgage, $30,000 is on open account and $30,000 on notes. The assets consist of the bath establishment, which represents a cost, with rents and charges, of $350,000. The corporation was organized under New York laws September 11, 1907, with capital stock of $250,000. The officers of the corporation, it is said, were Joseph Fleischman, president and treasurer; John B. Stanchfield, vice-president, and Charles T. Lark, secretary. The baths were opened February 6, 1908. A judgment was entered against the corporation November 25 for $3,568 in favor of Dennis G. Brussel.

Following the petition in bankruptcy filed against the Fleischman Baths, petitions in bankruptcy were filed Monday, November 30, against the Fleischman Floral Co., at Broadway and Twenty-fifth street, and Joseph Fleischman, individually, who was president of both companies, by James Schell & Elkus for several creditors, and Judge Hough appointed Robert C. Morris receiver of the assets in both cases. The creditors who joined in the petition against the Fleischman Floral Co. are James R. Johnston, $40; Donald H. Elder, $220, and A. J. Guttman, $500. It was alleged that the company is insolvent, and made preferential payments. The bond of the receiver was fixed at $2,500 and he was authorized to continue business for twenty days. It was stated that the liabilities are $20,000, largely owing to wholesale florists, and assets $10,000, together with the lease of the store, the value of which is unknown. Deputy Sheriff Murray received an execution November 28 against the company for $523 in favor of A. D. Barr & Co. The business was started in 1885 by Joseph Fleischman, who incorporated the company December 30, 1901, with capital stock of $300,000. In good times, it is said, the company made considerable money, but for the last year business has been affected by the general depression. The company has had from $15,000 to $35,000 outstanding accounts on the books, it is said, according to the season of the year. The company formerly had a branch at 515 Fifth avenue, corner Forty-third street, which was given up some months ago, and another branch at 71 Broadway, which it sold a few weeks ago.

The petition in bankruptcy against Joseph Fleischman individually was filed by these creditors: John I. Raynor, $2,700; Benj. Honig, $165, and Chas. W. Partridge, $100, all on notes which are past due for money loaned. It was alleged that he is insolvent, and made preferential payments to the Empire Electric Sign Company of $50; C. C. Beckman, $50, and the North River Beef Co., $185. The bond of the receiver was fixed at $500. It was stated that the liabilities are $10,000. James N. Rosenberg, of James Schell & Elkus, said that the assets are problematical, consisting of some equities in real estate. He is also a creditor of both the Fleischman Baths and the Fleischman Floral Co. In order to straighten out the affairs of those two companies and his individual affairs it was necessary to have the bankruptcy proceedings. Mr. Fleischman, it is said, was originally a street peddler of flowers, went into business in 1885 and built up one of the largest places in the city. Besides the flower business, he was also interested in real estate and leaseholds. He formerly owned the apartment hotel property at 12 to 16 East Thirty-first street, known as the Hotel Le Marquis, which he transferred in April last to the National Center Realty Co., subject to a mortgage of $400,000. The hotel business was formerly carried on by the Belgravia Hotel Co., of which Mr. Fleischman was president up to October 1 last, when the Belgravia Hotel Co. surrendered the lease. Judge Seabury, of the Supreme Court, November 30 appointed John J. Murphy receiver for the Belgravia Hotel Co. on a judgment for $56 obtained by Annie Cardani two weeks ago. The sheriff has received executions against Joseph Fleischman in favor of A. B. Barr & Co., $2,273; Chas. A. Cowen & Co., $1,021, and Barten Realty Co., $803.

Various Notes.

The Rhinebeck Violet Growers' Mutual Benefit Association, which was announced in this column two weeks ago, elected A. C. Toof president, J. C. Milroy vice-president, L. Van Vredenburgh treasurer, and E. V. Marquardt secretary. The officials anticipate a membership of 150.

The best Beauties touched 50 cents November 26. John Young was fortunate in cutting over 1,500 long stems from his big 701-foot house at Bedford.

Good carnations are now abundant, and prices are slowly advancing. F. R. Pierson, whose immense output of Winsor and his other good varieties is handled by Jos. Millang, says he has no fault to find with the average price obtained. His four houses, each 55x300, are doing a land-office business now, and the cut promises to be enormous for Christmas.

James McManus is preparing for a larger holiday orchid demand than usual. Callas, hyacinths and cypripediums are among the new arrivals, and the late mums are fine and abundant. There will be a goodly supply of these up to Christmas.

Monday, December 14, the Florists' Club holds its last session for the year.

Christmas is already giving preliminary signals. Bouquet green is arriving. Christmas trees will flood the wharves and West street before another week has passed. Holly sold well for Thanksgiving, and advance orders are larger than usual. Stumpp & Walter say they will ship over 1,000 cases. The quality will be above the average. A few days of clear, cold weather will awaken the Christmas spirit.

If one may judge by the official records of imports, the seedsmen anticipate a great year. Among those who received large consignments during the week were H. F. Darrow, the Yokohama Nursery Co., J. M. Thorburn & Co., August Rolker & Sons, F. R. Pierson, McHutchison & Co., William Elliott & Sons, A. T. Boddington, H. H. Berger & Co., Anton Schultheis and the Stumpp & Walter Co.

W. E. Marshall & Co., on West Twenty-third street, have added another store to their quarters and will now have a wide front, with two large show windows and much more room and convenience for their growing trade. A. E. Wheeler, of this firm, is away duck shooting this week in his yawl on Great South Bay.

Mr. Sullivan, of the Cut Flower Co., has recovered from a severe attack of the grippe.

A sure sign of Christmas is the announcement by Superintendent Jackson, of the Cut Flower Exchange, of the anual raffle of two twenty-pound turkeys December 22.

Saturday, December 5, there will be a special meeting of the directors of the Cut Flower Exchange in the Coogan building.

Sigmund Geller has some new wreaths for the holidays that are selling well, made of natural prepared holly leaves and berries, his own invention. He says trade is excellent and the force is already working nights and Sundays. Nearly all the supply houses report the same optimistic outlook for Christmas.

Two Brooklyn retail florists have just speeded their bookkeepers on matrimony's sea. Robert G. Wilson decorated for Miss Lillian D. Broadbent, of his staff, now Mrs. Samuel Reilly, a pretty home wedding, with the usual palm, mum and rose accompaniments. Miss Antoinette Shelly has been in charge of the office of J. V. Phillips for ten years. When she became Mrs. Hill the wedding was handsomely cared for by Mr. Phillips. Miss Phillips becomes bookkeeper for her father.

W. A. Phillips is secretary of the Brooklyn Retail Florists' Association, of which Robert G. Wilson is president. The first annual dinner and theater party of the society takes place December 10. The Fulton theater has been chosen, and the dinner will be served at one of the leading Brooklyn hotels. Mr. Phillips says the society is a success. He is also secretary of the Greater New York Florists' Association, which has now, he says, thirty-two active members.

J. V. Phillips had the big Talbot-Lorbacker wedding decoration last week, at Glen Ridge, N. J.

Bobbink & Atkins are still shipping nursery stock. Such a favorable planting season has never been known in the east, not a shadow of a frost up to date.

Anton Schultheis' big area of glass, new and old, is now complete, and the stock of Christmas blooming plants will be an eye-opener to the early buyers. Already the holiday stock is being selected and tagged for early shipments. Out-of-town retailers are coming daily.

Samuel A. Woodrow is shipping heavily to his New England customers and has a big Christmas stock of palms, ferns and the flowering output of Lehnig & Winnefeld.

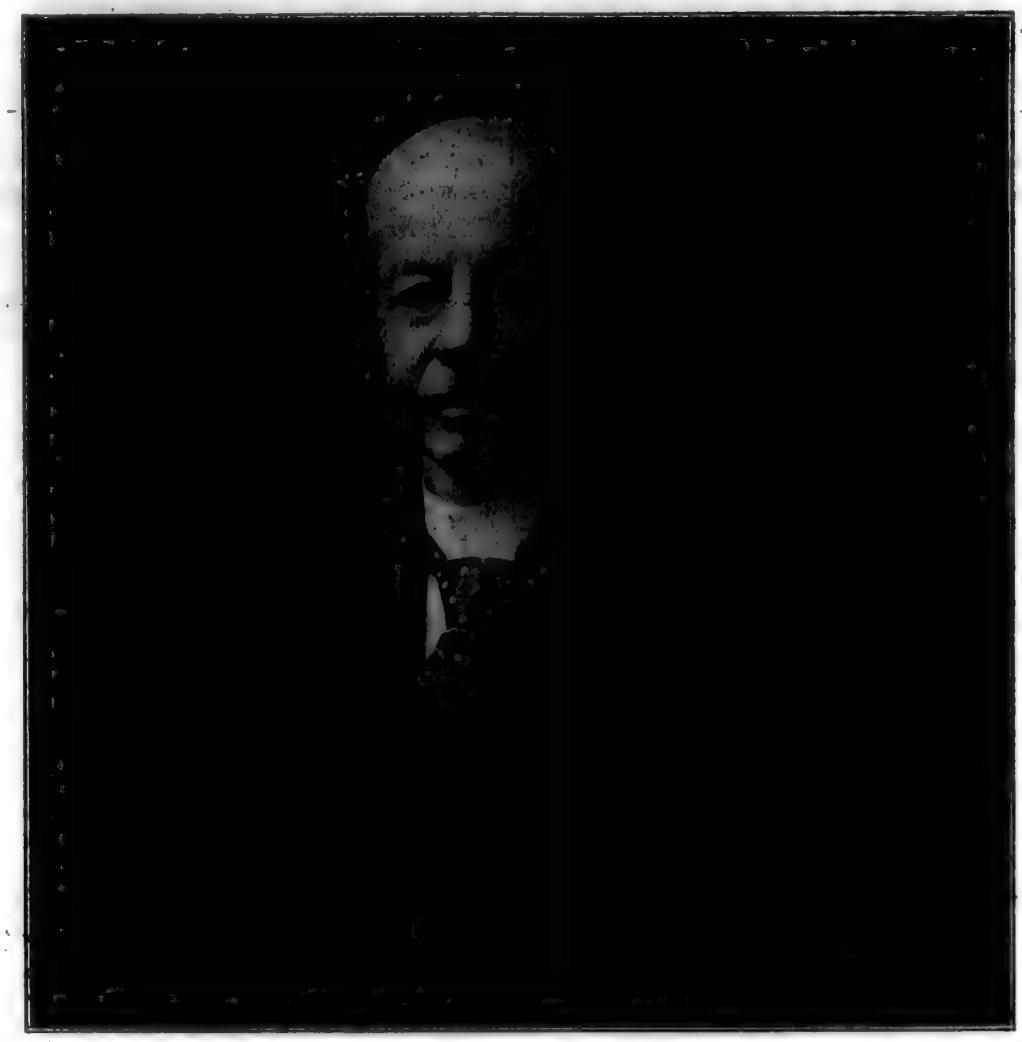
J. J. Fellouris is well pleased with prospects. His new store, at 52 West Twenty-eighth street, has been freshly decorated.

Schumacher & Kessler are handling a large stock of plants, palms and ferns at 113 West Thirtieth street, from Jersey and Long Island growers, and are fast building up a trade.

Poinsettias are in the market in plant and flower — another harbinger of Christmas. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

OBITUARY.

N. Studer.



N. Studer died at his home in Washington, D. C., November 23, at the age of 70 years. He was born in Fraubrunnen, in the canton of Bern, Switzerland. Mr. Studer was one of the pioneer florists of Washington. He started in the business in 1874. In 1876 he built what were known then as the Centennial Hothouses, which were the largest put up at that time. He used 8x10 glass and it was predicted that the hail would break much of it. He was at one time the foremost florist of the nation's capital. He had stores at various times, but for the last four years he only had the stand in the Center market. He was still growing his own stock up to the time of his death. He was unmarried. Before engaging in the flower business he was an attorney, having studied law abroad.

Louis E. Marquisee.

Sickness, due to an accident he met with more than a year ago, caused the death of Louis E. Marquisee at 11 o'clock on the night of November 24, at his residence, 622 West Onondaga street, Syracuse, N. Y.

On election night, one year ago, Mr. Marquisee was injured at the Salina street bridge over the Erie canal. He was riding his bicycle across the bridge when it started up and he fell off the end of the bridge to the pavement, a distance of four feet. Since the accident Mr. Marquisee had failed gradually, until a month ago, when he became seriously ill. After a few days he rallied and was able to be out occasionally. Two weeks before his death he had a partial stroke of paralysis, which affected his right side and speech. Heart disease developed and proved fatal.

Born at Utica, N. Y., Mr. Marquisee lived in that city until 1869, when he removed to Syracuse and became a member of the firm of Marquisee Bros. & Co., proprietors of a cloak, millinery and fancy goods store. In 1888, after a rest from his previous business, Mr. Marquisee engaged in flower growing as a more healthful occupation. In 1869 he married Miss Josephine Eaton, who with one daughter, Miss Anita Marquisee, survives.

Louis E. Marquisee.

Mr. Marquisee was widely known and universally respected; indeed, the esteem in which he was held deserves some special word—he was beloved especially by the children, for all of whom he had the greatest fondness. The funeral was largely attended and there was a wealth of floral tributes. The one from his greenhouse employees was a magnificent blanket of the new carnation, Marchioness.

Mr. Marquisee was widely known in the trade for his work with the carnation, and for several years he was one of the leading spirits in the work of the American Carnation Society. His first introduction was Marquis, light pink, sent out in 1900 and a notable thing in that day. He planned to distribute Empire State in 1904 and so good a white did it seem that he is said to have had on file orders for 50,000, when in 1903 it developed weaknesses that caused him to sacrifice all the profit in sight and throw the variety on the dump. It so enhanced his reputation that when Flamingo was ready to go out, a season or two later, the trade took all that could be propagated, and even then the demand was not satisfied. Albatross and Sunbird, the latter yellow, were less widely distributed. Each of his varieties, coming at the beginning of the improvement of the carnation, marked a step toward the present-day development of the flower.

Mr. Marquisee was at the point of sending out another new sort, Marchioness, which will be distributed this year by the estate. The business will be carried on by Mrs. Marquisee, under the management of Harry and James Bellamy, who have been with Mr. Marquisee almost from the beginning.

William J. Beatty.

William J. Beatty, one of the best known gardeners and nurserymen of western Pennsylvania, died November 24, at Pittsburg. He was 82 years of age.

Mr. Beatty was born in Belfast, Ireland, and came to this country at the age of 24, settling on the Northside, Pittsburg. He retired from active work twenty years ago. Mr. Beatty was a lifelong member of the Fifth United Presbyterian church, and was active in church and religious work. In addition to his wife, Mrs. Sarah Beatty, he is survived by ten children, thirty-nine grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

John Archer.

John Archer died at his home in Groton, Conn., November 26, of Bright's disease. Mr. Archer was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1855. He worked for the Shady Hill Nursery Co., of Boston, for about nine years. He also had charge of Mrs. Emery's place in Milton, Mass., for a long time, and he held a similar position, for a while, on George Draper's place, at Hopedale, Mass. The last five years he had been working on the Morton F. Plant estate, at Groton, Conn., where he had charge of the construction work, planting, grading, etc. He was a member of Union Lodge No. 31, F. & A. M.; also of Donald McLeod Lodge of Scottish Clans, Hyde Park, Mass. He was buried from his home Sunday, November 29, with full Masonic honors.

Mrs. J. J. Waaland.

The wife of J. J. Waaland, the well-known florist at Findlay, O., died December 1. She was 44 years of age and had suffered with cancer for a year. Previous to her illness she had assisted her husband in the business.

BOUQUET green can be sold fearlessly this season. No chance for a fall-down or the loss of profit.

YES, it is possible the dollar the housewife paid for the flowers for the Thanksgiving table looked like 30 cents by the time it reached the grower.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Treasurer Bertermann has begun to pay off the cash premiums for which the national flower show committee is liable, the total amounting to $5,379. Letters notifying the donors of special prizes as to how their prizes were awarded have been prepared by the secretary and mailed. Except in those cases where the prize has already been placed in the hands of the committee, special prizes will be delivered direct to the winners by the donors. J. H. BURDETT, Sec'y.

THANKSGIVING TRADE.

There is much variety in the reports of Thanksgiving flower business, but in nearly every instance it is commented upon that the unseasonably warm weather was a disturbing factor, and that with seasonable weather the trade would undoubtedly have been much larger than it ever was before for Thanksgiving. Take it all in all, the business was satisfactory. At wholesale there was some dissatisfaction because of oversupplies and low prices, but the volume of business at retail was good in most western cities and in the east decidedly better than a year ago. Retailers who grow their own stock had abundant supplies, and those who buy their material in the open market found no cause for complaint, except at the softness of stock, due to the unseasonable weather.

Everyone now is looking forward to a first-class, old-fashioned Christmas.

COURSE IN FLORICULTURE.

During the last few years there has been an increasing demand for educational advantages along all lines of agriculture and horticulture. This demand has been felt keenly at the Massachusetts Agricultural College and this year a short course will be offered for the first time by the department of floriculture. That no holiday season may break into the course, lectures will begin January 5, ending March 10, before the Easter rush begins.

This course is outlined with the idea of furnishing young men who have not the time to devote to a longer course with the theoretical and practical considerations which are essential for success in floriculture. The course will cover, as thoroughly as time will permit, those aspects of the work of special interest to the growers. Greenhouse construction, greenhouse details, such as ventilators, gutters, benches, etc.; greenhouse furnishings and equipment, heating, florists' crops and florists' trade are some of the topics to be considered.

In addition to the regular lecture work of the course, which is given by Professor E. A. White, it is expected that talks will be given by experts in greenhouse design and construction, greenhouse heating, in growing special crops, such as roses, carnations, violets, orchids, wholesale marketing, retail marketing, etc. The coöperation of several of the most up-to-date practical florists has been secured for these talks. This course will consist of five exercises each week.

The work given in soils and fertilizers, greenhouse insects and diseases of greenhouse crops will also be required of men electing this course. Other courses which may be elected are given in market gardening, fruits, dairying and other branches of agricultural science. Because of lack of accommodations this year the course in floriculture will be limited to fifteen.

The cost of the course will be as reasonable as possible. Tuition will be free and the cost of board and rooms in private families varies from $4 to $6 per week. Board at the college dining-room may be obtained for $3.75. A circular describing fully these courses may be obtained of Prof. J. A. Foord, Amherst, Mass.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Following Thanksgiving there came a couple of dull days, during which the surplus from Thanksgiving either was cleaned up at midsummer job lot prices or lost altogether. Saturday, however, found the market in much better shape and the hope of returning prosperity was revived. Wholesalers were busy, however, pleading lack of responsibility for the poor shipping quality of the stock sent out at Thanksgiving. Not in a long time has there been so much complaint. The long season of unprecedentedly warm, damp weather made everything soft. Quality the last two weeks has been far below what it usually is at this date. This does not help the man whose carnations were asleep and whose roses were mushy when the box was opened, but really the wholesaler was powerless. Nature, not the wholesaler or even the grower, controls quality in such cases.

Monday saw no improvement and it looked like a dull week, not much business and a great deal of poor stock, but Tuesday, December 1, brought the long hoped-for cold weather and things began to take on new life. There was a drop of 40 degrees over night. There is an abundance of everything in the market, but if the seasonable cold weather holds the quality will improve with great rapidity, receipts will be reduced and demand will increase. The local supply of chrysanthemums is passing. There will be mums for a long time yet, but not anywhere near so many as in the last month. But what will help the market most is the passing of the mums grown by those who look to this market for a part of their supplies. As soon as these local lots throughout the country are cleaned up the demands on this market will increase materially. The reduction in supplies of mums has already resulted in an increased price for the small and medium sizes. There are still hundreds of bunches of Garza. This little favorite sells well when the supply is light, but when every wholesale house has bucketfuls of it nothing much can be done with it.

Interest already is beginning to center on Christmas and advance orders are being booked. The buyers of quantities of long Beauties are getting their orders on file, and those who want the choicest roses are speaking early. The market for bouquet green and holly has been steadily weakening, which is not a situation that is liked either by those who have taken or given advance orders at a stipulated price. Cold weather doubtless will do something to steady the market.

Thanksgiving.

The condition of the wholesale market for Thanksgiving was reported in last week's REVIEW. It need only be said that about the only stock the wholesalers found in active demand was the Beauty rose and the Rhinebeck violet. At first it was impossible to meet all demands for violets, but heavy late shipments were received, some of them in not the best of condition, and the close of business on the holiday found some violets still on wholesalers' hands. It is worthy of note that retailers whose orders for violets were cut down Wednesday morning, in many cases being given only half what they asked for, were in nearly every case stuck on violets. Probably the slow sale for violets at retail was due to the weather being unfavorable for people being on the street. Except for the violets, practically everything sold well at retail. An immense quantity of stock was moved. The retailers could buy at their own prices and in nearly every case are pleased with the Thanksgiving business.

November Business.

November proved something of a disappointment. The volume of business, judged by money totals, was hardly as great as last year. Larger quantities of stock were moved, but at much lower average prices than a year ago. It is worth while remembering that last year's panic did not affect this market to any great extent until along in February, but everybody anticipated much better things this year. "If" is a word that cuts little ice in the flower business, but everyone believes that seasonable weather would have made all the difference in the world in the results for November.

The Fleischman Troubles.

The filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the Fleischman interests in New York has caused inquiry as to the connection between the New York and Chicago stores. The New York store is conducted by the Fleischman Floral Co., a New York corporation, and the Chicago store is conducted by the Fleischman Floral Co., an Illinois corporation. The two are entirely separate, though both were organized by Joseph Fleischman.

B. F. Rubel is president of the Fleischman Floral Co., of Illinois, conducting the store on Jackson boulevard and the one at North State and Division streets. He states that he purchased Mr. Fleischman's stock interest in the business in 1903, and that since that date Joseph Fleischman has had no interest in the Chicago concern.

November Weather.

The mean temperature for November was 44 degrees, the normal being 39 degrees. The warmest days were toward the close of the month. The rainfall was 2.67 inches, a little more than the average. There were nine clear days, ten partly cloudy and eleven cloudy. There were two heavy thunderstorms, November 22 and 25.

Various Notes.

It is reported that the large addition now being built by the Poehlmann Bros. Co. is only a beginning on plans which look several years into the future. If the report is correct the next addition will be even larger.

E. C. Amling had tulips for Thanksgiving.

It is stated that the old buildings on Jackson boulevard, between State and Dearborn, are to be torn down May 1 to give place to modern office buildings. Two flower stores are in the buildings to be removed, Eaton's Flower Shop and the store of Hattie Carlson.

The George Wittbold Co. reports having this week bought over 100 cases of holly on South Water street for use in decorations in the State street stores.

John Zech says that he figures the warm weather has brought in crops considerably ahead of the time they would naturally have been ready and that he expects the middle of December to see a pronounced shortage.

Wienhoeber reports a splendid November business. Decorations and table work have kept the entire force on the jump.

John Enders, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., welcomed his third son Saturday, November 28.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is receiving auratum lilies. Consignments November 27 included 3,000 Romans.

Mrs. E. L. Eaton, proprietor of the flower store at Jackson boulevard and Plymouth place, has been seriously ill for a fortnight at her home at 1710 Michigan avenue. This week her condition is reported as somewhat improved.

C. W. McKellar says the supply of orchids at present offers greater variety than usual. It includes Cattleya Trianæ, C. Skinneri, Oncidium Rogersii, O. tigrinum, Dendrobium formosum, D. Phalænopsis, cypripediums, vandas and lælias. But the cattleya is the one that is wanted. McKellar is receiving some specially good violets put up in bunches of 100.

John Evert, who this season had eight houses in mums, still has four houses to cut. Lettuce is being planted as fast as the mums go out.

The store at Drexel boulevard and Forty-third street, recently occupied by the Klunder Floral Co., is now vacant.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the demand for violets has been affected by the unanimity with which the retailers got stuck on this flower at Thanksgiving.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports a much improved market for small sizes of Bon-

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., has been away for the last few days, rounding up some stray orders for Christmas supplies.

It is reported that the Chicago American League Baseball Club has its eye on the Kidwell property adjoining the south side ball park. The Kidwell lease expires shortly and the baseball people are reported to be after the land for an addition to their facilities.

Bassett & Washburn state that they expect to have no difficulty in selling all the O. P. Bassett carnations they can cut at 20 cents and 15 cents wholesale for Christmas.

Wietor Bros. say they will not finish cutting chrysanthemums until along in January this year. Last season they cut the last for Christmas.

H. C. Blewitt, at Des Plaines, had three houses of mums this year. As fast as the mums go out sweet peas will go in, all except the space required for stock.

The Florists' Club has issued invitations for a ladies' night Thursday, December 3, at the Union restaurant at 7 p. m. Nominations for next year will be in order.

C. M. Dickinson, at E. H. Hunt's, says the practice of skimping in a package of heretofore recognized standard measurement is becoming a great abuse of the supply trade. He says it has become so that a cheap price is a cause for suspicion that the quantity is reduced in at least as great proportion as the price.

Peter Risch is the recognized authority on real estate values in Evanston.

Percy Jones says even the mums show the bad effects of the soft weather.

George Reinberg is one of the few growers for this market who have Kate Moulton rose in quantity. He says it's a winner for him.

George Walther has greatly increased the attractiveness, as well as the convenience, of his place by erecting a show house, 23x42, which extends west from his store and fronts on Sixty-third street. With this added space, he now has a frontage of sixty feet on Sixty-third street and forty feet on Eggleston avenue and has ample opportunity for the display of his stock. His residence and greenhouses are located on Lowe avenue. His sister, Miss Louise Walther, gives him expert assistance in designing and decorating.

Scheiden & Schoos have a big lot of cuttings of President Taft carnation in the sand.

Phil Schupp says the J. A. Budlong establishment is beginning to come into crop again.

Peter Reinberg hopes to duplicate his last year's Beauty crop, especially as there is an impression that Beauties will be scarce for Christmas.

F. F. Benthey says Killarney sold well for Thanksgiving when Bride and Maid were hard to move at cheap prices.

Kruchten & Co. are receiving long Maid and Bride.

The four Poehlman brothers, John, August, Adolph and Gustave, with their families, were at Milwaukee Thanksgiving day to attend the wedding of their sister, Bertha, and August Hoppe, of New York.

NEW ORLEANS.

Thanksgiving day in New Orleans is far from being observed as well as in the north, and the call for flowers is quite limited, compared with that in other localities. Still, every year seems to bring some change, and this year's business has been quite good. The private gardens are still full of chrysanthemums, and, as long as the present warm weather continues, the florists cannot expect much business.

F. Baker is plowing up his chrysanthemum ground to make room for his annuals, of which he will have thousands.

M. M. L.

DETROIT.

The Market.

There is every indication of a good Christmas business this year, at least as far as Detroit is concerned. Thanksgiving business seems to have far exceeded last year. Some florists report double last year's amount of general Thanksgiving business. The demand was for assortments of cut flowers, rather than for any one flower. Beauties are moving slowly. Violets were not in as much demand for Thanksgiving wear, but were sold in large quantities just previously. In fact, violet business has been very satisfactory here.

Chrysanthemums are fast becoming a thing of the past. Some good stock is still to be had, but the demand has ceased and naturally the prices have come down a notch. Good white are in demand for funeral work. With the going of the mums, trouble will again commence in making up work, as carnations are almost too expensive for use as a background.

Various Notes.

F. J. Rosser, of 270 Maybury avenue, recently purchased a piece of land on the corner of Maybury and Linden avenues. As soon as the winter's frost is out of the ground his intentions are to erect a small store and adjoining greenhouse, with the hope of building up the retail end of the business. This corner is just a few doors from his present place.

At the recent exhibition of the club, Albert Pochelon, of the Bemb Floral Co., was the only retailer to make an exhibit. In fact, to Mr. Pochelon is due much of the credit for the success of these little shows, as he is one of the most energetic workers. His display consisted of several arrangements made up with the curly cabbage, Savoy. Attached to the display was a card bearing the wording, "With the kind permission of Mr. Smith, of Cleveland." Whether the idea of these arrangements originated in Cleveland or not, Mr. Pochelon's work was nicely executed.

Norman Sullivan has also taken to curly cabbage. In his window this week can be seen a number of these pieces, well done. One in particular, representing the broad hats that are so popular just at present, attracts much attention from the ladies.

Breitmeyer's had the decorations for the ball poudre at Strassburg's hall last week.

H. S.

MARYVILLE, MO.—Alfred Engelmann says Thanksgiving trade was entirely satisfactory.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade this year was not as good as in former years. Some of our leading stores say it was as good as last year, but from general report it appears that it was not as good as last year, on the whole. There was plenty of stock at all the wholesale houses; in fact, a great deal of it was left unsold Thursday morning. The stock that came in was only fair in quality and a lot of it showed that the consignor kept it long in order to get better prices for the big day, but as more stock came in than the demand called for this pickled stock was dumped.

There was a great quantity of carnations. The fancy all started in at $5 per hundred, but soon dropped to $4 and $3. There were quite a few California violets that sold at $1 per hundred. Beauties and other roses were abundant, but owing to the flooded condition of the market the prices dropped to the every-day price. Chrysanthemums sold well, but did not bring the prices the wholesalers hoped for. Only the extra fancy Eaton and Golden Wedding brought $3 per dozen.

Paper Whites are in the market this week. Lily of the valley is down to $2 per hundred. Callas and Harrisii are coming in plentifully. A few large weddings for this week should help trade.

Henry Emunds called November 28, and reported a good Thanksgiving trade in Belleville. Mr. Emunds is cutting a fine lot of chrysanthemum blooms, including extra fine Golden Wedding.

Ostertag Bros. furnished all the flowers for the St. Louis Star Thanksgiving, which were sent to the hospitals. Several hundred boxes were used.

A. S. Halstead, Belleville, was elected vice-president of the Illinois Horticultural Society at its meeting last week. week.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, took several prizes at the chicken show last week.

Jules Burdett, on Vandeventer avenue, has a big lot of extra fine cyclamen and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine for the holiday trade. He has been supplying the local trade with fancy ferns in variety.

Andy Hoffman, George Waldbart's right-hand man, says that Thanksgiving business was fully fifty per cent better than last year. They are showing some extra fancy blooms in Eaton, Morel and Wedding, which retail at $9 per dozen.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society, through its committee, F. C. Weber, Jr., and Theo. Miller, is this week soliciting flowers from the florists for the Jewish charity fair, to be held at the Coliseum. The flower booth there will be one of its features.

G. Reising, representing L. Baumann & Co., Chicago, called on the trade last week.

The Florists' Bowling Club started its first series of bowling for prizes Monday night, November 30. One Monday night in the month will be ladies' night. Henry Ostertag and Arthur Ellison are new members. The club has now twenty members. President Connon says they will be represented at the bowling in Cincinnati next August, during the S. A. F. meeting. C. A. Kuehn, Carl Beyer and J. J. Beneke are not as yet members of the new club, having signed with other teams early in the season, but will be on hand later.

The members of the Florists' Club should not forget the last meeting of the club this year, which will take place Thursday afternoon, December 10, at 2 o'clock, in the old meeting hall, 1023 Locust street. President Young says that Chairman Henry Ostertag has a surprise in store for the members who attend this meeting.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There has been great activity in the cut flower market. Thanksgiving was scarcely over before the Army and Navy football game filled the city with visitors, and caused much entertaining and consequent demand for many flowers. It is said that Franklin Field looked like a great garden of violets, orchids and gardenias. Be this as it may, there were many of these dainty flowers worn on Saturday, and the market was buoyant.

The exceedingly warm weather that ushered in the present week accelerated production to an extent that forbade any advance in prices. Choice roses were in active demand at good prices, with the poorer grades dull and irregular. Carnations have sold better than for some time past, fancies of one or two popular varieties being especially favored. Violets are more plentiful, with indications that the shortage of the last fortnight will not be repeated during December. Sweet peas of the winter flowering varieties are becoming more plentiful; some select stock is bringing more than last week's quotations. Cattleyas are now at high water mark, with indications of an increase in supply and probably lower prices during December. Cypripediums are plentiful. Gardenias are fairly scarce and much in demand. Bunches of asparagus continue to sell better than any of the other greens.

The Thanksgiving business in cut flowers was satisfactory. Choice yellow and pink chrysanthemums realized from $3 to $4 a dozen, with white a trifle lower. In fact, white were in some quarters too plentiful, and it required the floral offerings for the funeral of the father of Israel W. Durham, a noted political leader, to carry off the surplus. Violets continued scarce and erratic, the prices on both singles and doubles ranging over an unusually wide stretch of figures. Beyond these two principal items in Thanksgiving business, only a few general comments are necessary. There seemed to be an especially active demand for the choicer flowers, gardenias, orchids and valley, and in some cases the excellent value given in carnations caused heavy buying.

While the chrysanthemum season is nearly over, there are a few varieties still in the market. Mme. J. Rosette, pink; Golden Dome, yellow, and Jeanne Nonin, white, will probably be obtainable for ten days.

Club Meeting.

Charles Henry Fox delivered an address before the Florists' Club December 1. His remarks were much enjoyed, the paper being received with hearty applause. The attendance was large, the session being followed by a smoker.

Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., sent a handsome exhibit of long-stemmed White Killarney. J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, sent his new begonia, President Taft.

Riverton.

Nearly every florist who visits the Dreer nurseries at Riverton goes there to see one or the other of the galaxy of floral lights that have aided in making the place. Some go to see George A. Strohlein, some to see James C. Clark, some to see Harry C. Sims, some to see other floral experts, but not one of them has more or warmer friends than J. D. Eisele. The reasons are plain. Mr. Eisele was identified with the place from the early days of its history; all of his great ability has been given to building up the place ever since, and, as a grower once voiced the general sentiment, "Eisele is a nice fellow." So you see a representative of the most progressive paper considered himself fortunate in finding Mr. Eisele when he visited Riverton. Mr. Clark was there, too, adding much to the pleasure of the visit.

Nephrolepis Scholzeli was the first topic. A fern that wins the unqualified approval of two such capable judges as Mr. Eisele and Mr. Clark is good indeed. Their judgment is based on the fact that N. Scholzeli appears to be identical with N. Scottii crested, and that its foliage, while ample, is not dense enough to decay at the base of the fronds when wet, from lack of air. Mr. Clark adds that a boy can water this variety. If the stream of water from the hose is too strong, knocking it down, the fronds will be up again in an hour as good as ever.

Two houses of Adiantum Farleyense in all sizes are a beautiful sight. The grace of this exquisite holiday fern appeals to everyone. Commonsense methods are especially important in growing Farleyense. Natural laws must be obeyed to do this fern successfully, despite changes in climatic conditions. It takes intelligent culture to grow good stock, mixed with unremitting care. Among the other ferns a pretty lot of Adiantum Croweanum, in medium sized pots, would have pleased our friend from Utica, could he see them.

The range of glass devoted to Cocos Weddelliana is deeply interesting. The stock is large. The plants are in excellent condition. The specimens are a rarity not to be seen elsewhere in such sizes and numbers. A house of Dreer's begonia is just coming into bloom.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade compared favorably with that of a year ago. Some report better business than in 1907, and others about the same as last year. The weather being warm and sultry militated against brisker trade. It is unusual to have a temperature of 60 degrees in the shade for Thanksgiving, and as a consequence of the heat there was an unusually heavy lot of flowers in the market. In roses, Beauty of medium length sold better than long-stemmed ones. Richmond and Killarney sold well at from $4 to $16 per hundred. Bride, Maid and Kaiserin were in heavy oversupply and sold poorly. Maryland and Jardine brought similar prices to Killarney.

While fancy carnations made from $3 to $5, there was a heavy overstock of ordinary grades, these selling down as low as $1 per hundred. Whites were the poorest sellers, bright reds and pinks selling the best. Violets were rather scarce and sold well at 75 cents to $1 per hundred. There was a fair supply of lilies and callas, with but slight advances in prices. Chrysanthemums sold well, the best bringing $3 per dozen. Bonnaffon and Eaton were mostly in evidence, but some good Nonin made top prices. Cattleyas were scarce at $5 to $6 per dozen, and gardenias at $3 to $4 per dozen. Paper Whites and Romans made $2 per hundred.

The retail stores all did a good business, equal to that of a year ago. In pot plants there was a moderate sale for Lorraines, poinsettias, azaleas, cyclamens and palms. Fern dishes also were in demand. Green goods were only in moderate demand.

Since Thanksgiving trade has been fair. The weather continues unseasonably warm, which militates against brisk trade. Chrysanthemums now are almost over, but there is an abundant supply of carnations and roses. Violets sell well. Stevia brings 25 cents per bunch. Some good sweet peas are coming in and there is now a plentiful supply of bulbous stock.

Various Notes.

Thomas H. Meade, the genial representative of Schlegel & Fottler Co., and well known to the local trade, has the sympathy of many friends in the loss of his wife, which occurred November 25. Mrs. Meade was interred November 28.

Henry R. Comley, for twenty-three years with C. P. Grimmer, on West street, opened a thoroughly up-to-date flower store at 6 Park street, December 1. Mr. Comley is well known and highly respected in the trade and should do a good business at his new stand.

The employees of A. Leuthy & Co., of Roslindale, journeyed in a body to Mr. Leuthy's home, on Perkins street, November 24 and presented him with a superb eight-day clock. The recipient was surprised but delighted, and gracefully voiced his thanks for the gift, after which all hands spent a pleasant evening.

Thomas Clark, late of the firm of Houghton & Clark, will open a store on his own account, on Boylston street, during the present week.

The first poinsettias of the season arrived at the Park Street market November 24 from F. J. Dolansky, being handled by Thomas Pegler.

Welch Bros. state that Thanksgiving trade compared favorably with that of a year ago. In mums they had best call for Eaton, Enguehard and Bonnaffon. Among roses they had a fine lot of Mrs. Jardine and My Maryland. Carnations were too abundant, cattleyas and gardenias scarce, also violets. But for the warm weather they think they would have had a decided advance in trade.

Andrew O'Leary, formerly with Zinn, of Boston, and now with J. H. Small & Sons, New York, spent Thanksgiving here with his parents.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club's landscape classes resumed last week and are well attended. Interest in the election of officers at the club meeting December 15, increases and a record attendance seems probable on that occasion.

The sympathy of a large number of friends goes out to David Weir, the esteemed superintendent on the Brandegee estate, Brookline, in the death of his wife. Mrs. Weir was a native of Scotland and 63 years of age.

John Barr, of South Natick, is handling an unusually fine lot of carnations at his stall in the Music Hall market. Mr. Barr, as usual, has also a grand lot of cyclamens.

William Nicholson and S. J. Goddard were among those who had a fine lot of crimson mums for the Harvard supporters in the great ball game of November 21.

William Sim's sweet peas are already a feature at the better class stores, being up to their usual high quality.

The New England Nurseries are building five houses, 100 feet long each, for propagating purposes and are anticipating a heavy trade in spring. Fall business has been good, but dry weather affected it somewhat.

William S. Grassie, one of the leading track winners at the late picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, won the New England Athletic Association's ten-mile championship November 25, beating all the fleetest New England long distance runners. Mr. Grassie is employed at the Harvard Botanic Gardens.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Trade Conditions.

The warm, unseasonable weather has caused havoc among the stock and made a bad slump in prices of roses, carnations and mums. Owing to the unusually low prices that have ranged on the latter, bunches of the queen of autumn were to be found in many houses at Thanksgiving that never before counted these blooms among their decorations. There also has been a general demand for palms, ferns, rubbers and other decorative house plants, the mild weather making it easy for delivery.

Various Notes.

O'Connor had the decorations for the Scott fortieth wedding anniversary last week.

Fred A. Geisler, of Bristol, has the sympathy of the trade in the death of his wife November 22 in the sixty-eighth year of her age.

W. G. Postings, gardener for Winthrop Chanler, who has been at Geneseo, N. Y., supervising work at Mr. Chanler's estate there, has returned to his home in Newport.

James B. Canning has received the contract for the decorations for the annual ball of the Providence Police Association at Infantry hall December 15.

It is understood that the store of the late Thomas J. Johnston is to be disposed of in order to settle the estate. An option is said to have been given to Edward Brook, who has been manager of the business since Mr. Johnston's death.

John F. Wood, who went west in July, has returned and is looking at a number of florists' stores with a view of buying out some established business.

The greenhouse, 35x60 feet, with good heating plant attached, on the estate of John Jencks, in Barrington, is to be sold at auction sale. W. H. M.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

The weather has continued fine and warm, regular Indian summer, until today, when the prolonged drought has been broken by a fine, drizzling rain, which acts as if it had come to stay.

Business has been quiet. There are plenty of flowers, owing to the exceptionally fine weather we have been having. Mums are pretty nearly cut off, but are sufficient for all demands, roses being particularly plentiful and of good quality.

The demand for carnations seems to run to white and light pink shades. Enchantress is the favorite, although Melody and Winsor are kept well cleaned up, while Pink Lawson is the one to take a back seat. Aristocrat, with its longer stem, sells best. We venture to predict that Afterglow and Winona will force the Lawson family out of the market. If Winsor had a longer stem it would be hard to beat; its color is exquisite.

Violets are doing nicely, but not blooming as freely as usual at this season of the year, presumably on account of the continued warm weather.

Paper Whites have made their appearance.

Various Notes.

Chas. Chadwick has moved his store off Monroe street to 23 South Division street.

W. W. Mulick has opened a store at 706 Wealthy avenue. This is the first experiment in locating a store away from the center of the business district.

Frank Strong, in the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., is seriously ill with consumption. G. F. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Trade was excellent for Thanksgiving, with mums in the lead, as usual. There was a good supply and they were cleaned up nicely. Some few are to come in yet, but they will be scattering compared with the numbers that came in up to Thanksgiving. Roses and carnations moved rather slowly and prices were not so high as was expected, as there was a good supply. Violets moved well and at good figures; they were hard to find by noon Thanksgiving. Plants of all kinds moved rather slowly, but, taking it all around, we have no complaint to make, and some firms say they did more business than last year.

Roses are on the increase and the quality is fine. Carnations are good and becoming more plentiful. Stevia and Paper Whites have made their appearance, which helps to make more of a variety of stock.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held no meeting November 24, as everyone was too busy with Thanksgiving. The dance given by the club November 18 was a great success. There was a fine attendance

THE bean situation in most cases shows enough stock in sight to meet the demands, but not in any overabundance in any case.

LAST year's prices will be about right for the coming year's retail catalogues, judging from the prices in the books already out.

THE business so long conducted at Santa Clara, Cal., by J. M. Kimberlin & Co. is now being carried on by C. R. Kimberlin and L. M. Kimberlin, under the name of the Kimberlin Seed Co.

REPORTS have it that there is no shortage of the newer varieties of muskmelon seed. Such varieties as Burrell's Gem, Hoodoo and others of the salmon fleshed novelties seem more plentiful than the old-fashioned, standard sorts.

THE California seed growers are eastward bound. L. W. Wheeler, of Braslan Seed Growers' Co., Santa Clara, was at Chicago December 2 and L. C. Routzahn, of Arroyo Grande, was reported at Philadelphia accompanied by Mrs. Routzahn. Others are en route.

THERE seems to be some indecision in the minds of seedsmen and others who have what is called set onion seed, as to the actual value of this commodity and how much of a price they can get for it. In some cases reports have it that seed is being offered at less than cost.

THE varieties of onion seed that are sown for a market crop seem to be more plentiful than usual, but the varieties that are sown for sets are scarcer than for some years past; this refers to dependable stock, of course, for there seems to be quite a lot of mongrel seed in evidence.

ONION SETS are reported to be keeping well. There is little movement of this article at present. Fall shipments are over with and it will be well into January before the stock needed for regular planting at the south moves out. It is expected that when the stock reserved for this purpose moves and is disposed of finally by being planted, there will be a sharp advance in the price and that then the supposed shortage will make itself felt.

THE first general seed catalogue for 1909 to reach the REVIEW is that of D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa., the one hundred-twenty-fifth annual issue.

THE Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, last year got out a first edition of 175,000 catalogues, but subsequent editions and an emergency catalogue ran the total number of books distributed up to 305,000. This year they are starting with 200,000 as a first edition of the complete book and 100,000 of a condensed edition.

ONE HUNDRED pounds sterling was the prize offered by Messrs. Rogers & Co., a progressive firm of seed merchants, at Leamington, England, for the best onion of the Leamington Giant variety, introduced by the firm. No fewer than 1,700 onions were placed before the judge and the prize was awarded to a shapely, well finished bulb which weighed three pounds, grown by A. R. Searle, gardener, Castle Ashby Gardens, Northampton. In addition, sixty prizes were awarded to other bulbs of excellent culture.

IT is thought that the coming year's prices for contract pro rata orders for peas will be quite a bit higher than those of last year. Many causes for this are given. One is that the farmer will want more per bushel to grow them. High value of the seed that has to be reserved for planting is another cause for the advance, and many other things enter into the business of producing peas for future orders. The grower, unless he can get enough to make the risks worth while, feels he would be as well off out of it.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladiolus are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

Gladiolus, Colvillei and Nanus (type).

Plant some of these among your carnations; they will come in handy at any time.

Blushing Bride. Flowers are large, pure white, with delicate pink spot. Useful for early forcing. 85c per 100; $7.00 per 1000.

The Bride (Colvillei alba). This lovely white miniature Gladiolus makes a useful cut flower for early Spring use; will stand forcing. 75c per 100; $6.50 per 1000.

Peach Blossom. The most beautiful of all the Colvillei type of Gladiolus; the color is a lovely soft pink, on the order of the Killarney rose. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.

Ackermanii. Salmon-orange, with white blotches, edged scarlet; very pretty. 85c per 100; $7.50 per 1000

SURE, ANYONE CAN.

E. J. Deal calls attention to the following paragraphs in the 1908 novelty list of W. W. Johnson & Son, Boston, England:

"We have frequently heard it said, 'Anyone can grow seeds,' and we are inclined to agree with the statement. We have known cases where the cobbler has left his last, the carpenter his bench, and the painter his pots in order to dabble in seed growing. It is certain that neither cobblers' wax, sawdust nor red ocher are essentials to growing seeds successfully. Real seed growing does not consist merely in saving seeds. This is, figuratively speaking, only the apex of a structure which requires solid foundations at its base. These foundations consist of a practical knowledge of varieties, the art of selection and discrimination, and last, but by no means least, a love for the work.

"Fortunately the seed trade proper is not without men possessing these qualities; men who are not deterred by continued failures in striving to improve upon already existing strains, whether it be of peas, potatoes or mangels. So long as this condition of things lasts the retailer need not fear to obtain his supplies from houses which have been built up on these principles; houses which are known to spend big sums of money every year in improving existing varieties and selecting new ones, either by cross-breeding or otherwise.''

Mr. Deal's firm, as usual, has a long list of novelties this year.

BERMUDA ONION SEED.

The REVIEW has received from one of the principal exporters the following statement as to the outlook for the Teneriffe-grown Bermuda onion seeds for 1909:

It will interest all seedsmen and dealers in seeds to know that the future crop, as regards quantity, is from the outset against an abundant year.

All the onions warehoused in the last month of July, for planting in September and October ultimo, have suffered considerably and it is estimated on all sides that from 40 per cent to 50 per cent turned out quite rotten or unfit for raising seeds with them. This means that the production of seeds in July, 1909, will be curtailed to the same extent. Apart from this, there are always the

Hardy Roses and Ramblers

FOR FORCING

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well-ripened. Roses potted up in the Fall or late Winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard or force at your leisure. We recommend the American-grown "Ramblers." Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are failures.

HARDY PERPETUAL ROSES

We offer extra strong forcing two-year-old dormant, low budded stock, in the following varieties, true to name:

CRIMSON RAMBLER

American grown. The only stock for forcing.

Large, heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10.

	10	100
2 to 3 feet	$1.25	$12.00
3 to 5 feet	1.75	15.00
4 to 6 feet	2.00	18.00

DOROTHY PERKINS

Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink, holding a long time without fading. $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

PHILADELPHIA RAMBLER

Extra fine, American-grown stock.

	10	100
3 to 4 feet	$1.75	$15.00
4 to 5 feet	2.00	18.00
5 to 6 feet	2.25	20.00

TAUSENDSCHON

The new Rambler Rose. The name translated means a "thousand beauties." Color beautiful rose, shading to pink. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

LADY GAY

A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown. $2.00 for 10, $18.00 per 100; extra strong, $5.50 for 10, $50.00 per 100.

THE BABY RAMBLER

(Mme. Norbert Levavasseur)

Strong field-grown plants, $1.50 for 10, $12.00 per 100,

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER

Grown as a Standard.

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free-blooming qualities, etc. 35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100.

Two New Baby Rambler Roses

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

BABY DOROTHY. The Pink Baby Rambler, and bound to find favor where the Baby Ramblers are popular. Same color as Dorothy Perkins, $2.75 for 10, $25.00 per 100.

many contingencies to which the onions already in the ground may be subjected.

It would not be surprising if Teneriffe exporters could not deliver the quantities required by American buyers, and those who have not already contracted for certain quantities at stated prices may find that they will have to pay higher prices for any stock not engaged.

Outside growers are fast disappearing and the trade is carried now on better grounds, so that American buyers will not have any more complaints. In fact, this business is taking a different aspect, more satisfactory to the principal Teneriffe exporters and to everybody concerned in the United States. The stocks are also being improved more and more every year.

The weather is much against us. Not one drop of rain has fallen yet (November 11), and if the rainy season sets in all of a sudden after the warm weather we are experiencing, the lands would be too much soaked and the onions would suffer accordingly.

The Market.

Business last week was better than for some time. Stock of all kinds is shortening up, which is quite a relief after what we have been having. Carnations have taken a jump in price. Roses are scarce at present. Violets have been unusually good sellers so far this season.

Various Notes.

E. H. Ruestow, who has been working on a remedy for red spider for some time, claims he has found a means of ridding his houses of this pest. What the nature of the remedy is he will not disclose at present. A visit by the writer and others to his place found the stock in excellent condition. No spraying of any kind whatever had been done since planting in the houses, and the plants were comparatively free from spider. The Florists' Association has taken the matter up for discussion and further information will be forthcoming.

ASTER SEEDS

CROP OF 1908

A New Aster—Smith's Peerless

This new variety originated with us three years ago. In offering this new Aster to the trade, we have fully considered the varieties now in commerce, having grown the branching varieties, known as Semple's, Vick's, Henderson's Invincible and Carlson's. Smith's Peerless surpasses them all in high-grade blooms. Color, pure white, with high rounded flowers and so double that it is a very shy seeder. We have only limited quantity, which will be sold in sealed packets only, as follows: Retail packets (about 40 seeds), 25c; trade packets (about 250 seeds), $1.00.

EARLY

Early Wonder—$2.00 per oz.
Queen of Market—Lavender, rose, light pink, purple and white, 15c per ¼ oz.
Snowdrift—$5.00 per oz.; $1.50 per ¼ oz.

MID-SEASON

Daybreak—$1.50 per oz.; 50c per ¼ oz.
Lavender Gem—$1.50 per oz.; 50c per ¼ oz.
Purity—$1.50 per oz.; 50c per ¼ oz.
Sunset—$5.00 per oz.; $1.50 per ¼ oz.

LATE

Carlson's—Lavender, pink and white. $1.00 per oz.; $40c per ¼ oz.
Conway's White—Trade pkt., $1.00.
Crego's Shell-pink and Deep Pink. Trade pkt., $1 00.
Henderson's Invincible—Rose-pink, blue, white and crimson, $2 50 per oz.; $1.00, ¼ oz.
Vick's Cardinal—$5.00 per oz.; $1.50 per ¼ oz.
Royal Purple—$2.50 per oz.; $1.00 per ¼ oz.
Semple's Pink—$1.50 per oz.; 40c per ¼ oz.
Violet King—$1.50 per oz.; 50c per ¼ oz.
Vick's Branching—Rose, pink, purple, white and lavender. $1.00 per oz.; 40c, ¼ oz.

Seed Jobbers requiring larger quantities will be quoted on application.

large decoration here. Mr. Hart has something entirely new in a violet cord, which he is putting on the market.

The last monthly meeting of the Florists' Association was the best in attendance and the most thoroughly enjoyed that we have had. Many of the local growers sent in exhibits of chrysanthemums, plants, etc. A very instructive paper was read by Mr. Ogsten, gardener for Mr. S. Kimball, on "Exhibition Blooms," a few of which he brought along and they were fine. It was decided to make a change in the constitution and by-laws, so as to allow any one connected with the business to become a member of the association.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was as good as usual this year. Everything in the line of flowers sold well. Many blooming plants were sold. There was a scarcity of Beauty roses, as they are off crop here at present. However, orchids, lily of the valley and violets helped out nicely. There was an unusual rush for good stock.

Various Notes.

The Baur Floral Co. held its annual chrysanthemum exhibit Thanksgiving week. Much interest was manifested in several new varieties shown.

CYANIDE FOR GREEN FLY.

We are in trouble and want some help. We have a greenhouse, 50x100 feet, in which we grow lettuce and geraniums. The side walls are only about one foot high, so there are between 35,000 and 40,000 cubic feet of air space. The green louse is destroying our lettuce. We have used cyanide of potash according to your instructions in the Review of October 24, 1907, using it the first time November 7 with eight jars, then November 9, 16 and 21 with nine jars, and again November 25 with twelve jars, but the lice are just as plentiful as they ever were. If we can not get help in a few days the whole crop will be ruined. If we can not save the crop, please tell us how to rid the house of the pest. They seem to multiply faster than the multiplication table. S. C.

I think you did not secure the right kind of cyanide. The kind most druggists keep in stock is not what you require for fumigating. There are several different grades for different purposes. The kind needed for greenhouse use is cyanide of potassium (98 per cent), granular. If your druggist does not have this grade in stock, let him send for it and take no other. The granular is powdered and decomposes much quicker and is more satisfactory than the common lumpy kind, and grades of a lower per cent are not what you want at all.

I think you have made an error in figuring the cubic feet to fumigate. The average height of your greenhouse is found by taking the height of the gutter or eave plate from the ground, and to this adding one-half the height from this gutter level to the peak. This average height multiplied by the width and then by the length of the house gives the cubic contents. Getting the average height is where most growers make their errors in using cyanide.

I think that the number of jars you used first was a great plenty if the house is dry and comparatively tight and the right kind of cyanide is used.

In using cyanide for fumigating it is important that the plants be dry to protect them, instead of wetting as is common practice in using tobacco products. The acid and water should be mixed about thirty minutes to an hour before wanted for fumigating; if cooled off too much it is too slow and if just prepared it is almost boiling hot and too quick, dissolving the cyanide almost instantly.

Green fly is not a hard insect to get rid of and may be exterminated by using tobacco stems or any of the prepared nicotine fumigating products advertised in the Review. It is far better to use any fumigating material too weak and increase until the right amount is found to kill the insects without injury to the plants, rather than to make it too strong at first and ruin a crop. H. G.

INSECTS IN MUSHROOM HOUSE.

I have a mushroom house 30x50 and ten feet high. I am having a great deal of trouble with insects, to such an extent as to make the present crop a failure. What is the best and surest destroyer, and the quantity needed for my house?

Under separate cover I send a glass tube containing some of the insects. Please name them. S. S.

The insects sent are very common enemies of the mushroom and are hard to eradicate. We have found that a poison, such as Paris green, mixed with bran and laid where they have free access to it, will destroy them in considerable number. Traps made from potatoes may also be employed. Cut the potatoes in half, hollow out part of the inside and lay them with the flat side down, in such a position that the insects can crawl under. Look the traps over every morning and destroy the insects found, and they will soon be reduced in number to an appreciable extent.

In the summer time, when you are not using your house to grow mushrooms in, a good deal could be done in the way of cleaning the insects out by giving the walls a good washing with lime and dusting the floors with air-slaked lime.

One of the insects is the common wood louse. The other I cannot name, but I have often had trouble with it. I have got rid of both by the means above described. William Scott.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Lincoln I. Neff, who was adjudged bankrupt last April and subsequently surrendered his property according to the requirements of the law, has now presented his formal petition for discharge, and a notice to that effect has been sent to his creditors. December 7 has been fixed as the date for consideration of the petition.

Somersworth, N. H.—A fire at the greenhouses of G. S. Ramsburg, November 11, wiped out a large and valuable stock of plants, on which his winter's business depended. He figures the loss of business at between $6,000 and $7,000. The three greenhouses were partly consumed, and his barn, containing hay and greenhouse supplies, was totally destroyed. The insurance on the burned buildings was only $2,000, the remainder of his insurance being on his house, which was undamaged.

PACIFIC COAST.

COLVILLE, WASH.—H. C. Smith has built a large greenhouse on his home property, a mile east of town. This is the first enterprise of this kind started in Colville.

ON account of his advancing years, H. E. Middlekauff has retired from the management of the San Fernando Nursery Co., of San Fernando, Cal., and W. J. Mann, the secretary of the company, has also assumed the duties of manager.

FRUITVALE, CAL.—Four boys, all pupils of the Dewey school, were arrested November 13 for stealing flowers from the greenhouses of Fukusumi Bros., on East Fourteenth street, near Tevis street. It was stated that the school boys had been bothering these florists for some time by breaking off pickets at the rear of the greenhouses, removing glass from the houses and stealing carnations and other flowers.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The few days of rain have been followed by colder weather, with frosty nights and warm days. Consequently flowers are not quite so plentiful as they were a week ago. Violets are much scarcer and the price has been advanced 25 cents a dozen bunches by the growers. Mums are also showing the effects of the last season and the continued cold weather, and the number sent into town has been greatly reduced, as well as the quality of the flowers themselves. The price of the best outside stock has advanced fully 100 per cent within the last three days.

Carnations continue plentiful enough, with a slight advance in price. The best fancy stock costs the retailers about $4 per hundred and from that price down to about $2 per hundred. Roses are scarce. There was but a short supply for Thanksgiving and, taken as a whole, they were of rather poor quality throughout. But little fancy stock was seen and, had it not been for a few crops of Maids, there would have been a poor showing.

Valley is more plentiful now than it has been at any time for the last month and, from indications, there will be no shortage of it for some time to come. Maidenhair fern is well toward the end of its natural growing season and the retailers are complaining that they are having difficulty in getting enough to use with cut flowers, but the wild variety will soon make its appearance and will help considerably. Smilax is also beginning to be plentiful and this makes it easier for the florists and decorators. Other kinds of green stuff are plentiful.

The business for Thanksgiving was, according to reports from several retailers, about twenty per cent less than that of last year, with the heaviest sales for the cheaper kinds of stock. There has been a large funeral trade in town for the last week, so that, independent of Thanksgiving business, the retailers have had all they could handle.

Various Notes.

Peter Schleutz has gone to Los Angeles, with the intention of remaining there permanently.

Charles Leopold has associated himself with Pelicano, Rossi & Co. He was formerly with the Thorsted Co., of Oakland.

Schwerin Bros. have subdivided and are selling much of their ground formerly devoted to the nursery trade at Ingleside.

The Mann Co. has opened a new establishment on Sutler street, between Larkin and Polk streets.

We are Headquarters for the Right Stock of White Killarney

There are other white sports of Killarney, but the stock which we offer—the Waban variety—is very much superior to all others

When you buy from us

you get stock of the variety exhibited by us and the Waban Rose Conservatories this fall, which was awarded the silver cup at the National Flower Show at Chicago; silver medal, Horticultural Society, New York, and silver medal, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston. It undoubtedly is the best white rose ever introduced

Our attention was called to this rose last winter and, recognizing its great value as soon as we saw it, we purchased half the stock. We are growing it in large quantities in our Scarborough greenhouses, and will be glad to have anyone interested in it visit us and see it growing. The large growers, instantly recognizing its value, have placed orders for large quantities, so that our advance orders are very large, and the demand promises to be very heavy, judging by the number of orders already booked; but we have enough stock, either potted or rooted, to fill advance orders, so that we can still promise early delivery and first-class stock on all orders received now.

Order at once to ensure early delivery

Orders will be filled in rotation as booked, delivery beginning March 1st, 1909. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, own root, $30.00 per 100; 250 for $70.00; 500 for $125.00; 1000 for $250.00. Grafted plants, $5.00 per 100 additional.

ST CLOUD, MINN.—The first annual flower show of the Kindler Floral Co., which is said, also, to be the first show of the kind to be held in this town, was a gratifying success from every point of view. The show continued from November 21 to November 25, inclusive, and gave excellent results in sales for Thanksgiving, as hundreds of people visited the store. Thanksgiving business was the best in the firm's experience.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE Kansas State Horticultural Society will hold its forty-second annual meeting at Topeka December 29 to 31. A. H. Griesa, the Lawrence nurseryman, will talk on "Originating New Fruits for Kansas."

A JUDGMENT for $2,616.27 has been given Dr. J. I. Triplett, of Virginia, against the Knoxville Nursery Co., of Knoxville, Tenn., in the United States circuit court. This is the famous "peach tree" suit, in which Congressman N. W. Hale, who is president of the company, is interested.

THE members of the Texas Nurserymen's Association take an active part in the affairs of the Texas State Horticultural Society and the Texas Nut Growers' Association. The three societies will hold joint meetings at Brownsville, January 13 and 14. Will B. Munson is president of the Texas State Horticultural Society and many Texas nurserymen are on its committees.

STOCK FOR WESTERN APPLES.

W. M. Bomberger, Harlan, Ia., says that the crab-apple used in that locality for top-working apples on is not the common Virginia crab, but a western form in Iowa nurseries that is a fine, strong grower. It starts in nursery rows with a short piece of seedling root grafted on scions, and it will root from scions like willow, almost be on own roots, and independent of the seedling root if grafted right and handled right. Mr. Bomberger says this crab root is fine to stand severe western climatic conditions and is a success up to St. Paul and north. In Iowa Jonathan, York Imperial, Winesap, Ben Davis, Gano and Grimes all do well on it. The exceeding vigor of growth and roots seems to help the tops of the apple to develop better fruit. The stronger growing power of the roots gets more and better use of the soil food for trees.

In the winter Mr. Bomberger cuts bud sticks from healthy bearing trees of the kinds of apples he wants to top-work, and puts the sticks in a buried box of moist leaves, to remain until May 15, and then buds the tops of the crab trees and cuts back to buds. This he finds easier than grafting and its attendant troubles where there are high winds. Then budding is simpler, and so easy, and he can bud 200 trees a day, setting buds in limbs six to twelve inches from the forks in trees.

Description of Our New White Carnation

GEORGIA

The color of Georgia is a pure white with large and beautifully fringed flowers measuring as large as four inches, with a very full center, which gives it a good form.

The stem holds the flower up at all times, giving long stems early in the season, as we have a house in bloom where the stems at the present time, September 15, average 24 inches in length.

The growth is ideal, having the dark green cast that all growers like.

The plants are quick to recover after planting from the field and produce as many or more flowers than Enchantress.

It has stood the necessary test as to its shipping and keeping qualities and has been satisfactory in every case, although we have shipped it as far west as Missouri and as far south as Florida. It has been called by all who have seen it the finest white yet put on the market, as it is as wonderful in quantity as it is in quality.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Condition of Business.

In Toledo the season so far has shown great improvement over last year. Every florist has about all he can attend to, and not only have the decorations been heavier, but the counter sales are larger than those of a year ago. Sweet peas, violets and chrysanthemums are in great demand, and the best sellers, although many of the florists depending on foreign violets have been inconvenienced by poor service. The Thanksgiving shipments, which arrived late for the trade, were not in the best condition.

Various Notes.

The florists donated liberally for the opening of the beautiful Y. W. C. A. building. Miss Helen Patten was chairman of the decorating committee.

The Youngstown Floral Co. has dissolved partnership. Mr. Spanner is now the owner, Will Feniger having gone to Chicago.

Mrs. E. Suder reports an exceptional business. She had the decorations of the Transportation Club banquet, the Knights of Columbus, the Chamber of Commerce, and will have the Elks' Memorial.

Howard Anderson, of the city greenhouse, is recovering from a severe case of erysipelas.

Flower growers in Toledo have established the custom of displaying their products during each meeting of their association, the best variety to receive a prize. At the last meeting, held at the salesroom of S. N. Peck, E. A. Kuhnke carried off first honors for having the best yellow chrysanthemum, while Krueger Bros. carried off the honors for displaying the best white carnation. This display will be the feature of each meeting, the next one of which will be held at the home of H. A. Mills.

Miss Rogers has severed her connection with the Zenobia Floral Co.

Charles Carr, an assistant at Miss Patten's, suffered a severe injury by a palm leaf cutting his eyeball. H. L. S.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal, with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal, closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, and holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives one good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivesy begins with December.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100. $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Bill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives one grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5 50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

The Market.

Trade last week was good. The weather was changeable the first part of the week, but on Thanksgiving day the thermometer registered 60 degrees outside, and the sun was shining brightly all day. The business done was satisfactory in every way. There were thousands of out-of-town people here to see the football games. Quantities of mums are sold here for the ball games every year at good prices.

Roses are plentiful, with the exception of Richmond. Several of the florists will discard this variety and put Rhea Reid in its place next year.

Carnations are producing abundantly. The quality and demand are both good. Some lily of the valley and lilies are coming in and are mostly used in funeral work. Green goods are in good demand. Violets are rather scarce yet.

Various Notes.

The Hillenmeyer boys were in town and called on J. F. Keller at the greenhouses.

Miss Fannie White, of Anderson & White, says business is good with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fister have the good wishes and congratulations of many friends for their little son, who was born Friday, November 20, at their home on the Maysville road.

It is reported that Mr. Tiplady, the gardener at Elmendorf Farm, on the Maysville road, grows the best carnations in this section.

William Gerlock, the carnation grower for Honaker, has been sending some good stuff to the downtown store.

Lucien Leclere was busy last week cleaning up the lawns at the I. & C. park, and now has the place in tiptop shape.

J. A. Keller has planted, in the courthouse yard and other places, several thousand bulbs. A recent visit to his greenhouses found everything in good shape. The roses and carnations are producing abundantly, and a nice house of violets was noted. J. Ferdinand Keller, the manager of the greenhouses, deserves much credit for such a neat place and good stuff.

The Market.

The trade in general was somewhat better last week. The improvement was due, undoubtedly, to Thanksgiving day and a number of social functions. Thanksgiving business was good, all retailers doing well, as there was plenty of stock of all kinds. Carnations, perhaps, were the most abundant. The quality of stock was mostly first-class and the prices were not high, carnations retailing for 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 per dozen.

Chrysanthemums were plentiful and sold well. The prices were not advanced, the medium priced ones being the most called for. The demand for big specimen flowers was less than usual, the moderate sized ones having the call. It cannot be said that any of the growers got rich this season growing mums, as there were large numbers grown and prices ruled low.

Plants sold well; that is, the medium sized ones, ranging from 50 cents to $2 per pot.

American Beauties were in better demand, and the supply was good in all grades. The medium-stemmed ones sold better than any others. Other roses, such as Brides, Maids, Richmonds and Chatenays, were in good supply and sold fairly well, the quality being first-class. There are plenty of good carnations in the market, with prices about the same. Enchantress, White Perfection, Victory and Lawson are good sellers.

Violets are selling better. There is no great quantity of first-class ones coming in. There was probably more call for them for the football game than there was for chrysanthemums.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine has returned from Chicago.

R. S. Mahan is making a trip through the states for Elitch's Gardens, before leaving for California.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business last week was on a par with the previous week. There was plenty of good stock to go around. There was an unusually heavy demand for Beauties. Mums still hang on. Violets are not overplentiful.

Various Notes.

The Gude Bros. Co. is cutting some extra fine Jeanne Nonin, which wholesale at $25 per hundred, and some good White Jones bring $12.50 per hundred.

The farmers are bringing in holly and, from the first seen, it looks as if it will be good this year. It has fine color and is well berried.

The Washington Florists' Co. has a golden calla labeled Mrs. Roosevelt on exhibition in the window.

All the stores showed the usual Thanksgiving windows, with pumpkins, fruit, vegetables and corn stalks.

George Cooke reports an unusually busy dinner week.

The last meeting of the club was held December 1, at the Eagles' hall, Sixth and E streets, N.W.

Fred Wolf, formerly with the Washington Florists' Co., and James Smith, from Paterson, N. J., have taken positions with Z. D. Blackistone. O. O.

FRANKLIN, MASS.—M. J. Van Leeuwen, of the Continental Nurseries, has been extending the dimensions of Dr. T. L. Martin's lawn, setting out 200 shrubs and preparing for a large display of evergreens and rhododendrons in the spring.

The Storrs & Harrison Co., PAINESVILLE, OHIO

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Reports on Thanksgiving business vary greatly. Some of the retailers claim that trade was better than a year ago, but others say it was the poorest they ever had. At any rate, all were not satisfied. There were quantities of cut flowers of any kind, and about the only article to clean up was mums. Carnations that were the finest ever seen here on Thanksgiving day went at prices far below expectation. In fact, one might say that prices remained as they had been, with practically no advance in any line except violets, which sold well. Roses were a drug, there being hardly any demand for any kind except Richmonds and Beauties. Lilies, valley, narcissi and all other kinds of stock suffered in the slump.

The warm weather preceding Thanksgiving put held-back stock in a condition fit for nothing but the street faker, who was in his glory, with fine weather and loads of stock.

Various Notes.

C. A. Bramley, of Superior avenue, reports good trade at both stores for Thanksgiving. The showing at the new store was especially gratifying.

Knoble Bros. report Thanksgiving trade as better than a year ago. The demand for good mums at their place was exceptional.

Peter Nichols, of the Arcade, had quantities of fine mums, and reports Thanksgiving trade as good—better than last year.

The J. M. Gasser Co. reports better Thanksgiving trade in its retail store than in the wholesale department.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. had a finer lot of mums than ever for Thanksgiving, and sold Jerome Jones and Pres. Graham by the thousands. B.

WINSTED, CONN.—Mrs. W. L. Smith, formerly of Seymour, Conn., has purchased a large farm here and will erect a range of greenhouses in the spring.

NOW THAT ELECTION IS OVER and the uncertainties removed

PREPARE FOR CHRISTMAS

Interior view of one of our houses of Araucaria Excelsa Glauca and Robusta.

We Have Araucarias to Beat the Band

Look for Bargains Now

We protect the trade. We employ no fakers, no drummers. No department stores handle our goods. We have great faith in Uncle Sam (the mail). He is our partner.

Look at the photo! What a lively time at Aschmann's, the Araucaria King! We have it. Have what? An immense stock of the choicest Araucarias the world can produce, together with a rare selection of other salable plants in season, and everybody who sees them will be astonished and say, "No use talking, you're a cracker-jack." I am going to make things lively this fall. Five thousand Araucarias, twice as many Ferns, Palms and Azaleas and many thousands of other salable stock must go at panic prices. By Christmas all must be sold. Why? We want the room to force our extensive Easter stock.

We Lead the Country in Araucarias

Have been in the lead in the past; have it now and shall lead in the future.

We have houses full of choice Excelsa robusta compac a and Excelsa glauca; enough to supply the entire country.

Will you pay 50 per cent to 100 per cent more by buying from others who are not specialists? Hope not; the wise are on guard. We are going to sell all of them and without drummers. By jingo, we must sell them; an elephant for 40c, 50c and 60c; a jumbo for 75c to $1.00; and a holy terror in size for $1.25 to $1.50.

TAKE NOTICE!

Plants have grown considerably and are now fully 10 per cent to 20 per cent bigger than advertised below.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitmani and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in sunny houses (not whitewashed), which will produce stiff fronds; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta. Perfect shape, nothing finer grown, a houseful to sell, 3 to 4 tiers, 4 years old, 20, 25 to 28 inches, $1.25, $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Remember that we also are headquarters for this much admired Christmas novelty. For the past five years we have made a careful study of this plant and under our Special Treatment we obtained such results that we are now able to offer to our patrons the Begonia Gloire de Lorraine of a highly improved type, with a rich, rosy color, which will stand well in either heated or cold rooms. They are partly in bloom now and will be in their full glory, in bloom, for Christmas and New Year's, and will keep until February and March. Will stand shipping well. The plants are all nicely staked with three green painted stakes and wrapped in tissue paper when packed for shipment. Shipped either in their original pots or in paper pots, as purchaser desires. Please advise. Prices 5½-in., bushy, 50c; 6 to 6½-in., very large and bushy, 75c to $1.00 each; 7-in., $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Begonia Rex, 5-in., 25c each. Only one, but best variety.

Primula Chinensis. Everybody looks for a Chinese Primrose at Christmas. We have a middle bench full of them and in better condition than ever before. In bud and bloom, just right for now and the holidays. John F. Rupp's best Improved Strain. Prices for 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, $2.50 to $3.00 per doz. Primula Obconica, in bloom, 4-in. 15c; (without bloom, 10c; will bloom later); 6-in. pots, full of buds and flowers, 35c, 40c and 50c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown. Remember, only pot-grown. Can successfully be forced for Easter blooming, nicely branched, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c to 50c.

Azalea Indica have just arrived, raised under contract, from our regular Azalea grower in Ghent, Belgium. Have an immense stock of the choicest, full of buds, with all their foliage, etc.

Azalea Indica in Bloom for Christmas.

Remember we have to select for Christmas forcing the strongest and healthiest plants. Small, weak plants will not force successfully for Christmas. We have Mme. Petrick, which is a new variety and very difficult to obtain in Belgium. Best and earliest of all the pinks and is a free bloomer. Have only large plants, 14, 16, 18 to 20 inches, $1.25, $1.50 $2.00 to $2.50 each.

Vervaeneana (large variegated double rose), Deutsche Perle (double white), Simon Mardner (large double pink), Apollo (red), 75 cents, $1.00, $1 25, $1.50 to $2 00 each.

Christmas varieties can also be kept for Easter. Azaleas for Easter Forcing. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Empress of India, Professeur Wolters, Apollo, De Schryveriana, Niobe, Andre alba, Dr Moore, John Llewelyn, Helene Thelemann, Memoire de L. Van Houtte, Empereur du Bresil, and others, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 $1.50, $2.00.

All our Christmas Aza'eas are placed in cold houses as soon as they show color to harden off for shipment, and are in fine condition for Christmas.

Cineraria Hybrida, H. F. Michell's improved strain, 2¼-in. pots, $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

We had every reason to predict that the Thanksgiving business this year would be the best we had ever known, but a couple of days of almost summer weather changed all this. Thousands of roses were on hand that had seen better days, and carnations were not much better. The salvation of the business was the fact that there were plenty of fresh mums. These sold out clean at prices which were satisfactory. But there were plenty of salted mums that had to be sold at job lot prices if sold at all. The market was stocked with thousands of fine lilies, but there was no demand for them.

As can be seen from the above, great quantities of stock had been salted in anticipation of a large demand. We looked for good business and were not disappointed. But there are two sides to the story. There is the growers' side. Business was certainly bad for the growers. The retailers, on the other hand, were able to pick up enough really good stock to take care of their trade, and the general report from them is that business was fine. The wholesaler, being between the two, has both sides of the story impressed upon him.

Business since Thanksgiving has been quiet. Mums are selling out clean and at good prices. Violets also are in good demand. Roses sell slowly. Carnations do a little better. With colder weather in view, we can expect satisfactory business from now till the holidays.

Various Notes.

J. Chas. McCullough has moved his offices and cleaning department from Second and Walnut streets to Fifth and Lock streets and Eggleston avenue, where he occupies an immense seven-story building which has been remodeled for his use. The building is located on the railroad and this makes the shipping facilities of the best.

Miss Tillie Garges has been on the sick list, but is much improved and will soon be about the same as ever.

C. J. Ohmer.

Findlay, O.—J. J. Waaland has completed the new boiler house at his greenhouses on East Front street and has installed a new forty horse-power boiler.

This is The Florists' Manual

By William Scott

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual." —J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

Current Comment.

Thanksgiving week was a profitable one for the florists here, notwithstanding the bad weather preceding, and on the day itself—cold, dark and rainy. The people did not get out in such numbers as they would if the weather had been more agreeable, and there was a consequent falling off in sales. Stock was plentiful, except in carnations, which showed a little shortage. Violets are coming in more plentifully, and roses are good everywhere.

James Souden went away above his last year's sales, and pronounces himself well satisfied with the first holiday of the season.

R. A. Latham had his usual good business, and sold a large quantity of chrysanthemums.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. sold out all its stock Thanksgiving eve, not having enough to fill late orders. This firm has a good crop of mums coming in before Christmas.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE REVIEW is glad to answer in this department any inquiry with regard to greenhouse heating. Give all the details of your problem, not only as a guide to an intelligent answer, but so that others similarly situated may derive a benefit.

THE USE OF 2-INCH PIPE.

We have two houses, 14x50 and 20x100, which we wish to heat with hot water, maintaining a temperature of 56 degrees. In this part of Texas the outside temperature is seldom lower than 15 degrees above zero, but it has gone as low as zero. We have a small boiler, with 2-inch connections, which we think sufficient to heat both houses. We also have a lot of 2-inch pipe which we wish to use. Can the 2-inch size be used?

W. C. H.

There is no reason why the 2-inch pipe should not be used. In fact, I prefer it for hot water to smaller sizes. The objection to it is that it is a little harder to install than 1½-inch or 1¼-inch pipe.

L. C. C.

SCARCELY ENOUGH RADIATION.

I am located in eastern Iowa and have a greenhouse 25x70, sixteen feet to the ridge and eight feet to the gutter, which I wish to heat with hot water. Can I heat it with fourteen 2-inch pipes, sixty-five feet long, using a 2-inch flow to feed the coils? I have a boiler with a capacity of 2,500 feet. J. G. C.

You may be able to heat the house to 45 degrees in severe weather with this installation. A temperature of 50 degrees requires the installation of sixteen 2-inch pipes, and unless you will feel safe with a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees during cold weather, you had better add two more lines of 2-inch pipe.

L. C. C.

TO ESTIMATE RADIATION.

What is the accepted rule for computing the number of lineal feet of pipe and feet of radiation to a given glass area? Practical constructors have a rule for estimating the necessary number of running feet of 1¼-inch pipe, with other sizes, in relation to the glass exposure. Please make this problem plain.

SUBSCRIBER.

After careful tests under varying conditions, engineers have decided upon certain constants as representing the safe piping for houses. These constants vary for different boiler temperatures and for the normal temperature desired in the house. To illustrate: To maintain a temperature of 70 degrees in a house with hot water, when the boiler temperature is 160 degrees, will require one square foot of radiation for every 3.2 square feet of exposure. If the water is 180 degrees, then one square foot of radiation will carry four feet; at 200 degrees, 4.5 feet. If 1¼-inch pipe is used, it requires 2.301 lineal feet of pipe to make one square foot of radiation.

Now, given a house 20x100, with 3,360 square feet of exposure: To heat this house to 70 degrees, with water at 180 degrees, will require as many square feet of radiation as 4 is contained times in 3,360, or 840. To heat this house with 1¼-inch pipe will require 2.301 times 840, or 1,932 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe. But it is not economical to use a 1¼-inch pipe as a flow pipe, and we must use a larger one. We find that a 3-inch pipe is capable of carrying 900 square feet of radiation. This will then be ample for the plant requiring 840 square feet. We also find that 100 lineal feet of 3-inch pipe is equivalent to 91.6 square feet of radiation; so, instead of using 1,932 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe, we require 840 less 91.6, or 748.4 square feet of radiation in 1¼-inch pipe, or 748 times 2.301, or 1,721 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe in returns and 100 lineal feet of 3-inch pipe for a riser, to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees in a house 20x100 in severe weather, in the latitude of Chicago. So you see it is not a simple, empirical problem, to be figured by rule of thumb. L. C. C.

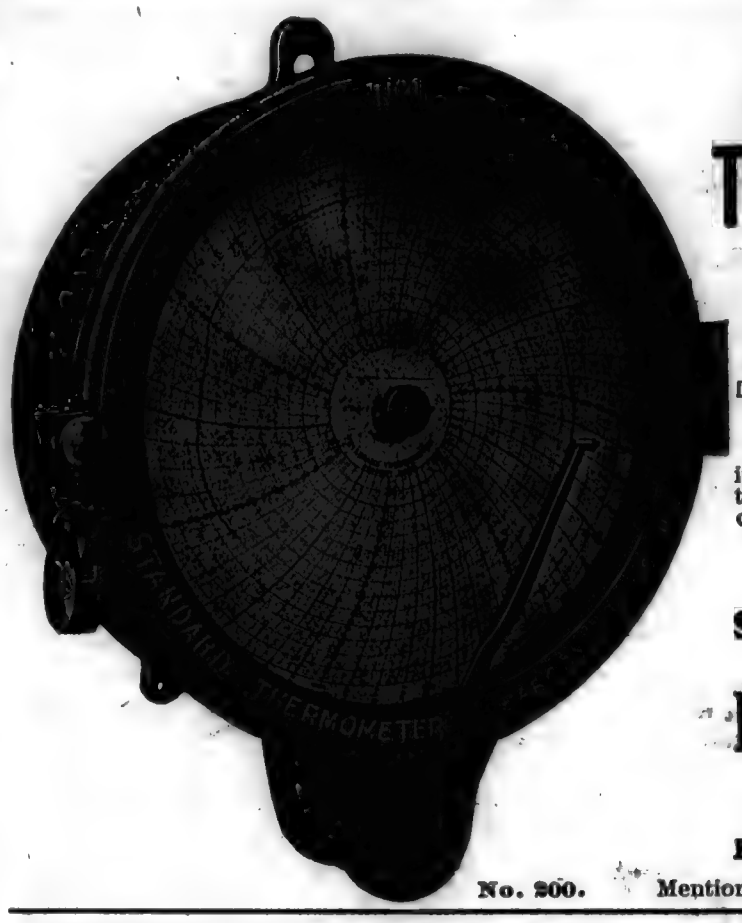
NOT AN EXPERT PLUMBER.

I have just completed a new house, 21x100 feet, but am having trouble with my heating plant. I could get no skilled plumber, so I suppose that is where the trouble lies.



I have a Wilks hot water heater, with two 3-inch taps, and from one of these taps two 2-inch feeding pipes are taken, each connecting with four 1½-inch pipes, running under the benches. From the other 3-inch boiler tap a 2-inch feeding pipe runs, and is similarly connected to four 1½-inch pipes under a third bench. The pipes under each bench are connected at each end. The four pipes are all on the same level and have a rise of about eighteen inches from the boiler to the opposite end of the greenhouse. The plumber's theory seemed to be that of a single-pipe system, with the hot water running up and returning in the same pipe. It does not work at all. The hot water runs up one pipe and then returns in the other three. The circulation is very slow and I can get no results in heat. Another trouble is that the hot water seems to run from the 2-inch feeder back through the 2-inch return without running up through the radiating pipes, forming a sort of short circuit.

The expansion tank is connected to one of the 2-inch return pipes near the boiler.

One florist has suggested to me the following plan: Run two 3-inch pipes from the boiler taps, about five feet straight up above the boiler; then run these two 3-inch pipes through the greenhouse to the opposite end on a gradual downward slant, and, on reaching the other end, tap the 3-inch pipes and drop down to the return pipes under the benches. These returns also would run on a downward slant. Would this plan work? If so, how should the expansion tank be connected?

I am afraid the twelve 1½-inch return pipes will not make sufficient radiating surface. How would it do to run one or two 1½-inch or 2-inch pipes along the sides of the house? I want most of the house for carnations, but one end will have roses. There is a partition and I can easily make it hotter by running more pipes in that end. It is the end next to the boiler. I am located in Iowa. F. M.

The plan of piping last suggested is a good one, but you will find it still better to carry the 3-inch feed pipes on a gradual slope upward, so as to have the highest point in the system at the far end of the feed pipe. To heat this house with hot water, using 1½-inch pipe for returns, will require thirteen pipes arranged under the benches and along the side walls. The two 3-inch flow pipes will be sufficient to feed all the returns; in fact, one 3-inch flow will be sufficient. The expansion tank should not be connected with the flow pipe, but with the main return close to the boiler, and the tank should be six to ten feet above the high point in the main flow. Put air valves on the high points in the flow pipes. L. C. C.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Thanksgiving day, with the thermometer in the seventies nearly all the week and dandelions in bloom outdoors, did not seem exactly the right thing. As someone expressed it, "It felt like selling Thanksgiving flowers on Decoration day." But, just the same, trade was away beyond the expectations of anyone and the general report was that the volume of business was greater than last year. There were some peculiarities about the business, however, that are hard to explain. Carnations, which are usually one of the most important flowers for this time of the year, were not in demand. Beauties were another of the flowers that did not go well at fancy prices, and there was some cutting in prices before they began to move. Chrysanthemums, which the growers had declared all the season would not last until Thanksgiving, were here in quantities, and these, with roses and violets, were most in demand. There were plenty, however, for all, and then some, but, taking it as a whole, there was just cause for thanksgiving among the trade. While it is true that the volume of business was greater than ever before, stock never sold cheaper for a holiday, but the commission men were all satisfied.

The retailers, almost without exception, were more than pleased with their trade and felt greatly encouraged in looking forward toward Christmas. They all attest, however, that fancy prices were out of the question, but they were able to buy stock at such prices as would enable them to sell at reasonable prices to their trade, and this made possible the volume of business which they report. In their opinion, the effect of this will be better for business the balance of the season and help the Christmas trade. There were more sales at $1.50 to $3 than ever before, the high priced stock suffering most.

Various Notes.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. were strong on fine chrysanthemums.

The McCallum Co. went through its first holiday and reports sales as very satisfactory.

The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange had a fine lot of Beauties and carnations.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. was right in it with Beauties, Richmonds, violets and an unlimited supply of chrysanthemums and lilies.

James Moore and Arthur Langhans made a trip last week across the "hot sands" with the Shriners.

Mrs. E. A. Williams furnished the decorations for the reception given by the Scottish Rites at the Exposition music hall, one of the largest affairs of the season.

H. C. Bucheler, of Sewickley, is offering his Sewickley business for sale, as he is about to accept the management of the South View Floral Co.

LINCOLN, ILL., January 8, 1906.

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY, Chicago, Ill.

GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two, purchased of you last year. We would not have them out for double their cost, and find them as sensitive as a watch. We will be in Chicago soon to take up the vacuum system with you.

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Thanksgiving trade among our Dayton florists was about the same as last year. Some of our tradesmen report an increase in their sales, while others report a slight decrease. But, taking it on the whole, it was nothing to boast of. Orders for table decorations were not as numerous as last season, and in most cases the people did their own decorating, if not with flowers. It was evident, however, that the "big bird" was present and all that accompanies it; in this respect our florists all report a big day. We feel that florists have no great reason to complain of their individual business, as almost all lines of trade report dull times. The crops were heavy, much heavier than last year, due to the bright, warm weather which has prevailed for several months. Therefore, as far as the supply of stock was concerned, our tradesmen could have withstood a heavy demand. These conditions also affected the prices, and but little, if any, could be made. Stock of every kind is exceptionally fine, both in color and size, and only a limited quantity is kept on the move, for which only moderate returns are realized. Consequently the ash barrel is not slighted to any great degree.

Chrysanthemums were, for some of our florists, the best selling flower. Carnations and roses, red especially, did almost as well, while callas, valley, narcissi and longiflorums came in for funeral designing.

Trade throughout the month was the cause of a great deal of complaining. Some days would be busy ones, but others very quiet. So, on the whole, we have no glowing report to give of November business in Dayton, although we are of the opinion that it was about as good as last year.

Various Notes.

The Dayton Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting December 7, at the establishment of J. F. Young, on East Fifth street. At this meeting the subject of a banquet for the January meeting will be discussed.

Edward B. Weston, vice-president of the Miami Floral Co., has received a personal invitation from President Roosevelt to accompany him on his hunting trip to Africa next spring. Owing to business relations, Mr. Weston has been obliged to decline the invitation.

The Dayton Floral Co. has a large decoration for December 6, at the Victoria theater, where the Elks will hold their memorial services.

H. H. Ritter reports that he is cutting some fine stock from his greenhouses. He states that Thanksgiving trade this year was not as good with him as it was last year, but says that December has started in finely for him, as he already has decorating orders booked for every day in this coming week.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs reports that business in her section of town has been fair.

M. Anderson furnished 1,500 carnations for the opening of a new confectionery in town.

Mrs. Wm. F. Ritter left November 30 for Chicago, where she will enjoy a ten days' visit with friends.

Several of our florists have been spending a few days out of the city on hunting trips. Among them was Julius Hendrichs, who returned with a good supply of game and reports a good time. R. A. B.

CAPITOL BOILERS

Capitol Boilers meet the desire as well as the demand of the Florist for a safe, economical Boiler, which can be quickly repaired in case of accident.

Divided Sections allow for quick repairs; construction assures against waste in fuel; simple in operation, means but little attention; all told—safety, economy, satisfaction.

When you examine the Capitol Boiler you will quickly see its superior merit, and realize how practical and especially adapted it is for the Florist.

Beard Bros., 1248 W. Fort St., Detroit, Mich., testify: "Speaking from experience, we are very much pleased with the Capitol Boiler. One night last winter the temperature dropped to 16 degrees below zero, and the house was as warm as at freezing point. It is very easily operated. No trouble to clean out. Can wipe out in two minutes. We use soft coal most of the time, and it is as satisfactory as hard coal."

To get the best results from your investment, Mr. Florist, you want the best Boiler. It is better to be safe than sorry. Put in a Capitol Boiler. Full information from any of our Branches or Sales Agencies, or by writing us direct.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

In summing up the volume of business done for the past year, the florists of Milwaukee and vicinity had every reason to be thankful on Thanksgiving day, for, compared with those in most other lines of business, the florists did not feel the recent financial disturbance as much as they might. While the average prices straight through were a little less, the volume of business done did not decrease, so there was always something doing.

As was expected, the local market was well supplied in all lines except double violets. The demand for these has been good, and, owing to the limited supply of good locally grown stock, they have been kept cleaned up right along.

Both roses and carnations were plentiful and good. The heavy supply in all lines made it hard to hold the price up. Generally at this time of the year mums are on the wane, but last week found them in all kinds and sizes, selling at from 50 cents to $3 a dozen, partially causing the decline in price of other cut flowers. Valley and sweet peas sold well.

Friday being shipping day, the market was well cleaned up by Saturday night. Business has been fine since.

On the whole, it can safely be said that mums so far sold for 25 cents to 40 cents less than last season.

Various Notes.

Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, was fortunate to be right in on Victory and Beacon carnations for the Thanksgiving trade.

Holton & Hunkel Co. reports that last Tuesday was a banner day for them in the shipping trade.

C. C. Pollworth Co., in speaking of the stock for last week, says that for once there was no pickled stock. This firm has just received a carload of Christmas holly, to be used for far distant shipments and local window trimming.

The football game November 26, between Notre Dame, of Indiana, and the local Marquette team, caused a rushing business in yellow mums.

In the prettily decorated parlors of the Republican House, on Thanksgiving afternoon at 5, the marriage of Miss Bertha Poehlmann, of Milwaukee, and August Hoppe, of New York, took place. August Poehlmann, of Morton Grove, was best man. He, together with his brothers, Adolph, John and Gustave, came up from Chicago for the occasion. E. O.

Mr. Florist, if you once get one of these cutters on your finger you will never be without it for many times the price. Just the thing for cutting your carnations, sweet peas, asters, melons, grapes, etc. Why be bothered with a knife or follow the old way of breaking your flowers when a Handy Cutter will do the work better and save you money and time? Don't continue breaking your carnations and thus ruin hundreds of young shoots daily, simply because a knife is unhandy to work with, but try a Handy Cutter. If you are not entirely satisfied with it you can return it and have your money refunded. These cutters are made of spring brass, highly nickel-plated, and contain a removable blade.

The Market.

Last week saw everybody very busy, all branches of the trade being taxed, at times, to the utmost. The leaders in the market were American Beauty roses and carnations, all grades of these flowers being in great demand. There seemed to be enough business, however, to use up about everything salable at prices from twenty-five to thirty per cent over those of the week previous. For Thanksgiving, chrysanthemums made their last splurge and are now almost entirely cut out. A few of the late varieties, such as Nonin, Frick and Jones, are seen. Dorothy Faust is seen in its perfection now and should be grown by everyone as a late variety. Carnations are fast getting into the swim and prices are on the up grade. Mignonette is beginning to come in and finds ready sale. Roses are in fine form and are in better demand than has been the case so far this fall. Swainsona is seen in large quantities this year.

Various Notes.

Halliday Bros. have a good thing in the way of a fern sport from Whitmani, which is compact and which surpasses Whitmani in every respect. It is of such fine texture and seems to stand all kinds of treatment. It is called Thomasoni. They have about 200 plants, and several large specimens.

Chas. Klutz, of Govanstown, has started a pottery and is to make rustic terra cotta, both pots and boxes. He has had a fine display at the Florists' Exchange.

The Maryland State Horticultural Society opened its show of flowers, fruit and grain at the Fifth Regiment armory December 1. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club offered prizes for cut blooms and potted plants.

The Washington bowling team was invited to Baltimore December 2 for a bowling match with the local team.

WIZARD BRAND MANURES

(TRADE MARK)

Dried, screened and packed in bags of 100 lbs. each.

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE
PURE - UNIFORM - RELIABLE

A strong and quick acting manure, highly recommended for carnations and chrysanthemums.

SHREDDED CATTLE MANURE
Easy to Handle and Apply

Stronger and better in every way than rough manure. Lasts much longer on the benches. Unequaled for mulching and feeding roses, liquid manuring and mixing with bench and potting soil. Used by all the largest growers.

Ask your supply man or write us for circulars and prices.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

MR. S. HUTH, Cuyahoga Falls, O.

Dear Sir:—We are interested in your Classified advertisement (3 lines, costing 30c per week), offering a single lot of bulbs at $500.00. It seems to us that a sale for $500.00 would justify a half-page advt., set in big type that couldn't be overlooked. Half a page costs only $15.00. Hoping to be favored with your order, we are,

FLORISTS' REVIEW, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs:—I note what you say in your letter of Oct. 22. It may interest you to know that the first insertion of the 30-cent Classified adv. brought inquiries from Iowa and Missouri, and several other points nearer. I am sure I will do business with some of them. This will not be the first large quantity of bulbs I have sold through small Classified advertisements. I am pleased to say that all the Classified advertisements I have had in the Review have brought results that were satisfactory.

Very truly yours, S. HUTH.

MR. S. HUTH, Cuyahoga Falls, O.

Dear Sir:—We note your advertisement offering 200,000 gladiolus bulbs for $500.00 has not been renewed. We should very much like to know if you succeeded in selling $500.00 worth of stock as a result of three insertions of a 30-cent adv. in the Review.

FLORISTS' REVIEW, Chicago.

Dear Sirs:—Answering yours of the 13th, we did not sell quite all of the 200,000 lot, but sold enough of other grades to those who answered the adv. to more than balance up. We also have promise of several nice orders for spring, and inquiries are still coming. What we wanted was to move a lot of bulbs this fall, as we did not have room to store them. Toward spring we will advertise again. Good stock, reasonable prices, fair treatment and the Review are a combination that does business.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

CHRISTMAS PREPARATIONS.

Good Stock Required.

Christmas is one of the two most important days of the year with the retail florists. Easter is the only other date on the floral calendar which can compare with December 25 in the volume of business it brings to the florist. But there is one marked difference between Christmas and Easter. For the latter event purchases are nearly always for the customer's own use, while at Christmas the purchases are almost invariably intended as gifts. The result is that Christmas calls for only the best class of stock and the sales average of larger value. A person who will spend $1 for a plant for his own use will invest $2 when the purchase is intended as a gift. And he will wax exceeding wroth if you send out poor stock on his order.

Last Christmas a Record-breaker.

It is worth while remembering that Christmas of 1907 was a record-breaker for florists. A fortnight before the holiday the majority of florists were on the anxious seat. The financial stringency of the last year was then at its height and there was widespread fear that the holiday business would fail to clean out the stocks provided. This fear was realized in certain lines of merchandise, but the florists seem to have profited by the general business depression; the man who had been accustomed to buying expensive jewelry, furs and other articles of large value, contented himself last year with buying flowers. To a man who usually spent $200 for his wife's Christmas present, the most expensive article in the flower store looked cheap by comparison.

The result was that florists almost everywhere did a splendid business for Christmas, far better than they had expected, and in most cases ahead of the best previous records. Practically everything presented in an attractive form was cleaned out at good prices.

The same spirit of economy that was credited with last year's good business has become a habit through a year's practice, and retail florists anticipate that this year will bring a volume of business at least equal to that of last season. In many lines of merchandise Christmas preparations are not on as liberal a scale as last year, but florists are nearly all making a greater preparation than they did a year ago. Included in the plans for the Christmas trade of most retailers is a little judicious advertising. It pays to tell the people what satisfactory holiday gifts may be found in the flower store.

Good Cut Stock Always Sells.

The experience of recent years has shown that there never is a surplus of cut flowers for Christmas. This, of course, refers to the good stock. Christmas calls for the best. No buyer will send a gift of poor quality, and no retailer will sell flowers that are not up to the standard. Growers gradually are finding out that of all suicidal practices, that of storing up flowers for Christmas is the most foolish. They gradually are discovering that pickled flowers cannot be sold at any price. The result is that the Christmas supply is not multiplied as was the case when pickling was the fashion. Consequently the cut flowers offered at Christmas are of better average quality each year and therefore command a better price.

Christmas buyers will pay what is asked for good flowers attractively put up and delivered in style. No old shoebox does for the Christmas violets.

Advantages of Plant Arrangements.

Nowadays practically every retailer makes a feature of plant arrangements for the holiday trade. Aside from the fact that he is sure he can sell all his good cut stock, plants have a number of advantages. In the first place, they afford a pleasing variety, but it is no small consideration that they can be worked up earlier than the cut flowers. Cut stock can only be put up an hour or two before delivery, while plant arrangements will not suffer greatly if made up a day or two in advance. Many retailers make it a practice to fill their stores with sample arrangements, either selling the samples or making up duplicates as orders are taken. By this method the pressure at delivery time is greatly lightened.

Another feature of the plant arrangement is that if by any chance business does not turn out to be all that is expected, the stock is not a loss. Neither baskets nor ribbons spoil. Blooming plants nearly always sell well between Christmas and New Year's, when cut stock is likely to be scarce. Also, the bloom on a good many plants may be cut and worked up in funeral designs and realize a good price.

Two Low Priced Plant Arrangements that were Good Sellers Last Christmas.

Buy Supplies in Variety.

The leading supply houses have done a great deal to add to the variety of the retail florists' holiday stock. There is an infinite variety in baskets, ribbons, pot covers and the thousand and one novelties now offered. It pays to buy a considerable number of styles, rather than to buy a good many of a few designs. Occasionally it turns out that one basket or jardiniere may sell much better than anything else, but when these are gone the buyers will be none the wiser if shown something else, and more general satisfaction will be given if not too many purchasers are sold the same thing. If several of your customers send gifts to the same person and each one chooses the same receptacle you are likely to hear of it a few days after Christmas.

Arrangements of Moderate Price.

In the average flower store the Christmas plant arrangements should be moderate in price. Possibly $5 will prove the popular price in the average first-class store. Anything above that will be sold in smaller numbers, and arrangements much cheaper do not pay if the store is located in a large city, where delivery expenses at a time like this are an important item.

It is, of course, necessary to have a variety of arrangements which can be sold at $2.50 to $3 and these may be easily provided by the use of cyclamens, primulas and other stock of that character.

In one of the accompanying illustrations two baskets are shown. The one on the left was intended to sell at $5. It contained two cyclamens and a couple of poinsettias, with several Asparagus plumosus from small pots and a plant of the Whitmani fern. The handle was wrapped with pale green chiffon and on each side there was a large red bow of slightly wider ribbon than the one around the basket.

The basket on the right in the same picture sold at only $3.75. It was filled with primroses and adiantum and with the addition of a little chiffon in light green it made a tasteful thing and a good seller. These were shown in a leading Chicago store last Christmas and several hundreds were sold.

Ferns in Dishes.

A good many buyers will pick out arrangements of ferns and small palms because they will last longer than arrangements of blooming stock. Four good sellers are shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. On the left is a square birch bark fern dish. A cocos is in the center, with some small Bostons and cyrtomiums. There is a good profit in this at $2.50. In the center is a Russian brass receptacle with a Whitmani fern. Nothing else was needed for this and it looked to be well worth the $5 asked. On the left was a fernery of light green pottery. The filling was cocos, Whitmani fern and small ferns from 2½-inch pots. This sold for $3.75 and it would have given a good profit at considerably less in a store where the cost of handling holiday business was less.

The partridge-berry bowl also shows in this illustration. It is a good seller, but there is an improved style out this year. Instead of a cover going over a globe, a globe is made to fit over a base on which the partridge berries stand.

Show Some Big Baskets.

It is necessary to have a few arrangements at higher prices. They are a splendid advertisement for the store, even if not many are sold, and then there is the wide range between, where the decorator's ingenuity can contrive any number of attractive arrangements.

The illustration on this page is reproduced from a photograph made at the store of W. J. Smyth, Chicago, last Christmas. The large wicker basket was of white enamel and it contained both white and pink azaleas, with primroses and cyclamens, asparagus, cyrtomium and selaginella. The ribbon used was white, with a rose pattern embroidered in it in deep pink. This basket sold for $15.

The larger basket, illustrated on page 19, also was made up to sell for $15. The wicker basket was about eighteen inches square and it stood three feet high. The basket was in shades of green and yellow, the plants green and red—a red azalea and some small poinsettias, asparagus, Boston ferns and cyrtomium were used for filling. On the handle there was pale green chiffon, the bow at one side being attached with a spray of artificial holly, from which depended a small immortelle Christmas bell, with another in the center of the handle. On the farther side of the handle was a large bow of red satin ribbon.

A Christmas Plant Arrangement.

SHOP TALK.

The Need of Neatness.

Much has been said on the why, how and wherefore of making up different designs, on church and house decorating, window decorating, advertising, etc., and no doubt much good has come therefrom, but one most important feature of our business has been dealt with but lightly.

After you have succeeded in bringing a customer into your store, through an attractive window display, has the general appearance of the interior made a favorable impression? Or, let us go back one step farther. After a well directed advertisement, or a decoration seen at some friend's house, has brought a new prospect as far as your threshold, would the outside appearance of the place appeal or repel?

I will take it for granted that you exercise every care in sending out fresh flowers; that you have nice, neat boxes and stationery; that you are as prompt as is possible in making deliveries. After all these features and precautions it is absolutely necessary that you keep your store and surroundings neat and attractive. It makes no difference whether you are catering to the bon-ton or the middle or poorer classes; always keep things clean.

Cleanliness Inspires Confidence.

Now, do not misunderstand me. Plate glass mirrors, tile flooring, gold leaf decorations, and rubber tired wagons, although nice to have, are not essential, unless perhaps if you are after the business of the elite only. If you intend doing a general business and cater to the middle classes, as well as the rich, too much style is apt to drive away the less wealthy buyers.

Before considering the interior, let us just take a look at the exterior of the store. Let us look at it through the eyes of a customer. One does not know that you meant to have the windows washed, but had no time, or forgot, but the prospective buyer knows that they are dirty, and that a good sweeping would in no way injure the sidewalk.

Before reading any farther just step outside and reconnoiter. You say it is raining, or that it has been snowing? Well, has the snow been cleaned off the walk? Or maybe there are some old pieces of water-soaked paper lying around. Pick them up. Instruct the men about your place to make a practice of doing this.

Watch the Little Things.

Be your store ever so humble, if you wish to favorably impress your patrons you must keep it not only clean, but orderly.

The floor should be kept carefully swept, the counters clean and, if you have a small writing-table for the convenience of your patrons, see that it always has a clean blotter and ink-well, and at least one pen that will write. Attend to all these details at least once a day, in the morning. See that it is some one's business to attend to each duty.

Of course we all know that there are times when the whole working force, be this yourself and "the Mrs." or a dozen or more clerks, is too busy looking after customers and getting out orders to stop to sweep floors and clean counters. That is just what you want, and why I am writing these few lines. Still, in the stormiest times there are always some lulls and that is your chance to tidy up a bit.

It is not the temporarily upside-down appearance of a place that I am finding fault with; it is the cobwebs and dust on the shelves that hurt, the perpetual air of neglect.

Good Housekeeping.

Better a little cleaning at every opportunity than an annual house-cleaning and then a year of neglect. Have you ever noticed how a good housekeeper manages? She goes over the furniture lightly every day and you can never catch her napping. In other words, the house always looks as though it had just received its annual cleaning, and that is just how a prosperous flower store and show house should look.

When you once acquire the habit, you will soon see the results in dollars and cents. Your jardinieres and baskets will commence to sell, customers will make their appointments at your store and naturally fill your coffers, even your help will be better natured, and the beauty of all this is that you have to go to no extra expense to bring about these results.

H. S.

CATCHING AN IDEA.

[A paper by Charles Henry Fox, read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, December 1, 1908.]

Gentlemen, with your permission I am going to tell you tonight how I put "Salt on the Tail of an Idea."

We all know success is the result of hard work—no luck in it—simply getting right down to it and hammering away at it; not only hard work, but energy directed in the proper channels, focused in one direction, concentrated until it crystallizes into success.

So it is with ideas. First, you see or hear; then you think; then you remember; then you imagine. If you drop either of the four after you have seen or heard, you will never have an idea. Ideas are crystallized thoughts, and you will not have ideas unless you see or hear. Lots of people see things, but do not really see.

To get ideas we must first cultivate our power of observation. For instance: I want to get a new wagon. I do not know what I want, but I do know I want something smart and different from anything about town.

I start the observation car agoing, and every fine wagon that goes by me, I notice. I see wagons everywhere, partly unconsciously. Then I start the "thinkery" agoing, and I think about what I have seen. I remember through thinking about them. Then, after thinking and remembering what I have seen, I start the imagination factory agoing. Yes, I will get all kinds of crazy wagons in my head, but gradually I will have to sift them out, one by one, and finally settle on one shape or style, but the idea is not yet clear. Now I have to work harder; I have to get a little "salt." I drop a little on the tail of that last thought or idea, and it becomes a little clearer.

Now I throw out a few more fantastic ideas, and in a few more days I have to add a little more salt, and gradually I come to something entirely different, and yet practical. You can get this result on any subject if you simply hang on to it, and keep adding "salt."

Atmosphere for Ideas.

Now, to create ideas in any specific line, it is necessary to surround yourself with the proper environment—the right sort of atmosphere.

You will not get sporting ideas in a church; neither will you get moral or religious ideas in a saloon.

If your hobby is baseball, and you are a very enthusiastic score card man, you will not see anything else in the newspaper, or on the street, but score cards.

If automobiles are in your mind, you will see every new automobile on the road, know all about transmission and gear, and the resiliency of the tires.

So I am trying to show you how very necessary it is to have the proper environs and atmosphere about you to make a success in any given line.

You can draw from it continually; you have something before you to see, to think about, to remember, to exercise your imagination upon when you rest at night.

Ah! gentlemen, this is, I think, the great secret of ideas: Your outer office, the eyes, and receptive brain are busy all day seeing things and taking them in, storing them up until you rest. Then your inside office, the subjective brain, takes it up, and works it out, molds your thought, your imagination, your enthusiasm into the crystallized product—ideas.

Right here is another important factor I almost forgot to mention—enthusiasm. It is nigh impossible to take the initiative, to originate anything, to get an idea, without enthusiasm. You must believe in yourself, in your goods, and in the appreciation of the general public.

I do not care who you are; you are bound to get credit for any really good work or thought you create.

The Surprise Box.

Right here I want to tell you about my surprise box. [It recently was illustrated in the Review.—Ed.] The idea was the result of observing and taking up a remark.

A gentleman, a good spender, came into my store. Nothing was too good for him; in fact, he was always looking for something better. One evening, after buying a corsage bunch of violets and orchids worth $20, while I was arranging it in what I thought a very good-looking violet box, he leaned over the counter and said: "Why don't some of the florists get up something new in the way of a fine box, that would present the flowers to the best advantage as soon as it was opened?"

My ears caught it; I thought about it; I don't believe I would have seen a five-dollar note on the floor of the car that night; I saw nothing but boxes, boxes, all kinds of boxes.

It took fully a year, thinking, remembering, imagining, to produce the practical box. While I was experimenting with it, the box maker first of all said that I was crazy: "Another one of those fan-dangled ideas of yours." But I said, "Never mind; you make it this way." "But it will never work," he replied. "Make it," I said; "I will pay for it."

I had confidence in my goods, in myself, in the man who wanted something to present the flowers to their best advantage.

I first used paper. It would not work, as the dampness of the flowers made it soft and limber. Then I used regular doilies, and they were too stiff; so I bought lace and had them made our own style, and it worked perfectly. I sent the first ones to a few prominent people, and they have been friends and customers ever since. I had confidence in the public; I was enthusiastic about it, and told them so, and they became enthusiastic, too, and bought them.

Speaking of Boxes.

Speaking of boxes, I have just brought a few with me to demonstrate the evolution of the florists' boxes. When I first began my experience in the business, every now and again my boss would say, "Charlie, run up to the shoe store and see if they have any boxes for us. If they haven't any, go across the street to McCreary's and get some collar and shirt boxes." I can yet well remember what acrobats those carnations and roses were; they had to bend the crab, and do every other stunt, squeezed in tight, like a coffin. Then, after I got a lot of boxes, I had a steady job pasting on our labels over the shoe merchant's.

Arrangements of Cocos and Ferns Sell Well at Christmas.

Then, after this, we had boxes made with nice green paper, and gold trimming. Once in a while we would change to yellow with white labels.

Then the ever-handy, cheap folding boxes came into use. When the board got wet the string would cut through and hold the flowers to the lid. At last, we had boxes made of different sizes to suit our business—all but American Beauties. You can today see fine Beauties coming out of fine shops with the tail cut out of the box, and the stems sticking out of the end, as long as the box itself.

What right has a florist to send roses out in this style? Would a dry goods merchant do it? Can you think of any other line that would?

It is the first impression that counts, every time, and especially in our business. You can't command a price if you, yourself, do not value the goods worth a decent box.

Necessity the Mother.

Ideas are always created through a desire for something. Think! Remember! Imagine!

First, you think about what is wanted. You see things suggestive. You remember them. You build on them. You imagine. Put on a little more "salt" and you create.

We had a lot of one-sided begonias. Then the thought, "What can I do to enhance the value of these plants, to sell them at a good profit?" Mats were old, heavy, unsuited to the plant. They needed some kind of a crazy basket to hide the defects. I walked through the supply houses, but couldn't find anything to suit. Must make it myself! I am not a basket maker, but here she goes. Got a basket maker to make a skeleton, and we did the rest. Here is your plant, worth four times the price in the basket, and something new in the bargain. But it took enthusiasm, thought, confidence in the goods, in ourselves, in the public, to create it.

In creating ideas you will get lots that are not practical, and that may be ridiculous or fantastic. But they are divided into two distinct classes, easily defined, and I have always found this a good rule to observe.

An idea is only a genuine idea when it conveys your thought, and your thought should come from some useful want or desire. There must be an excuse for doing it, or twisting a shape in a certain way. It must express that thought to your customer without any explanation from you—then you have a genuine idea, worth having.

The Misuse of Ribbon.

I believe the use of ribbon with flowers has a great field, and enhances the beauty and value of them. Remember that last suggestion: Value. A bunch or basket, with an appropriate bow, artistically placed, is worth half as much again, if you are not simply selling merchandise. But put the ribbon where it belongs; where the eye suggests the need of something being tied. To put a red necktie on an araucaria is as bad taste as chiffoning an azalea, with a lot of fussy stuff, puffing out here and there. It does not do the azalea any good, and wastes the ribbon.

You can use some receptacle with the plant that offers an excuse to tie on a bow of ribbon, and you at once have the satisfying effect for the eye.

Lots of people will notice these defects, but not really know what it is that does not appeal to them. They may even buy them, but it will not have that satisfying effect on them which something would have that correctly conveys and carries out the thought.

A Variation of the Christmas Wreath.

The Matter of Plant Decorations.

I remember how plant decorations impressed me, when a boy starting in the business.

The word "decoration" carried with it the thought of a half day's hustle and bustle, the tearing out of the well-arranged greenhouse, breaking of pots, and freezing of plants, and then the next day everything repeated, bringing them home. And all this for as much as a tailor would charge for a good suit of clothes.

The reason for this is that we sell our brains by the load! So much a load—plants, brains, and work thrown in—and get them all back again, you know, next day.

This idea of getting them back again is so impressed on the public that you will not get a good price for your flowers and work, because you sell them by the load, and get them all back. Sell them something they will keep—you do not want them back—and your customer will be satisfied to pay your price.

It is the mental law of sale: Something they will get for their money, belongs to them, the desire to possess. Do not take it away the next day—by the load.

Talk up cut flowers. Use them everywhere; they can be used to good advantage in vases, clusters and garlands.

Now, I do not wish to be misconstrued. We do not want to eliminate plants altogether—we always want to use plants—but let them be specimens, plants that you can set anywhere on their merits.

Has it ever occurred to you how incongruous and bad taste it is to fill a house with a lot of stuff you would not otherwise dare to show a customer, individually, using pot covers and pedestals that are anything but ornamental in a finely appointed house? Removing all the objects of art and bric-a-brac and building in place banks of plants! Fill vases with cut flowers, arrange them on the mantel, and you will get a better price, and will not have to take them back next day.

Ideas Again.

You cannot get ideas, or produce new things, if your surroundings are out of harmony with your soul.

You must first get in line with your inner self and nature; then you must radiate that feeling, that sincerity, that enthusiasm, to those about you. Create the atmosphere of happiness; advance good cheer around your assistants; elevate their thoughts, their standing, make them respect themselves, their business and you. Pay them well, so they can say, with pride, "I am a florist."

Then charge well for your goods and brains. That is the only way to evolve ideas. You, your assistants, your store, must be in harmony with the most beautiful things of nature—flowers.

CHRISTMAS WREATHS.

Make the Better Kinds.

Leave the simple, single holly wreath to the corner grocer; perhaps he can make some money on it at 15 cents, or two for a quarter. The florist should get out of the grocers' class by offering something better—something that is worth more money and that pays a better profit.

Of course a good many florists who are located where the corner grocery flourishes will have to supply the grade of wreaths their trade calls for, but even these can better compete by offering a finer article at a slightly higher price than by trying to meet the grocer's prices. There are many kinds of wreaths—even of holly wreaths—and the people who buy flowers generally will know and appreciate the difference. Make good wreaths and ask fair prices. Show some of the 15-cent kind just to demonstrate the difference, but keep the cheapest ones in the background if you expect to do a high-class trade. It pays florists, as other merchants, to work steadily toward a higher class of business, not by asking higher prices for the same old article, but by offering goods of better quality. Don't force your trade—or try to—to buy beyond their means, but look up, not down. The man with his eyes on the ground may occasionally pick up a penny, but he misses the fairest sights of this world.

Some Different Wreaths.

A well made but conventional holly wreath is shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. It is a difficult thing to show in a picture, but this was made of good holly, dark, rich green and well berried. You can't make that kind of wreath of the holly you buy from the vegetable commission houses at half regular rates—that kind may have been well berried when it left the southern speculator who shipped it, but if it was the chances are two to one the berries will mostly be in the bottom of the case when you come to start your wreaths. Of all expensive things, poor holly at any price is the dearest. The best article always is cheapest in the end.

A Well Made Holly Wreath.

The wreath illustrated not only was made of good holly, and did not have to be pieced out with winter berries, but plenty of material was used and these wreaths sold in good numbers while the grocer just around the corner was having his fling with the 15-centers. The ribbon used by the florist added considerably to the cost of the wreath as well as to its appearance.

Boxwood, Holly and Heather.

Boxwood makes a handsome wreath and, combined with the red winter berries, it sells well at Christmas. Boxwood also may be made up into a ball and, with red berries or red ribbon, makes a pleasing variation. To make the ball, have your wire-worker make up some little square wire frames and stuff them with sphagnum; then put in the boxwood good and thick.

Boxwood is the basis for the wreaths illustrated in this issue, which are the work of Charles Henry Fox at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. The effect of the scarlet berries on the selected sprays of holly, added over the boxwood, is enhanced by the silvery white of the Scotch heather, and it makes a beautiful combination. The wreaths may be varied greatly by simply changing the proportion of heather, holly and boxwood.

The Immortelle Wreath.

The immortelle wreath in scarlet is an old favorite Christmas feature. It is sold by thousands every Christmas. The conventional wreath may be varied by the simple addition of a red ribbon, and an immortelle Christmas bell also may be hung in the center of the wreath, but the way Mr. Fox varies the design as shown in the illustration is especially effective. One fine selected branch of holly is thrown across the wreath, attached at the lower end with a bow of wide red ribbon.

Display a few of these exceptional wreaths in your Christmas stock and you will not fail to find appreciative people.

SYLVESTER'S SUCCESS.

A Story Told His Home Paper.

J. H. Sylvester, of Oconto, Wis., was interviewed by a reporter for the Republican, his home paper, October 29. What he said will interest all florists, and to some it will point a moral. The interview was as follows, under the caption:

BUILDING LARGE TRADE.

EXPRESSED FOURTEEN TONS.

"There are probably few people in Oconto who realize what an enormous wholesale floral business is being carried on at J. Sylvester's greenhouses. The writer called upon Mr. Sylvester and obtained some facts which astonished him and which will, no doubt, be of interest to every person interested in the growth of business in Oconto.

"Coming here fourteen years ago, Mr. Sylvester built his first greenhouse. He catered strictly to the home trade, which was sufficient to demand another greenhouse, which he built five years later. But as retailing was not of sufficient amount to satisfy him, he decided to see what he could do at wholesaling and began to specialize. Pelargoniums, primroses, cinerarias and calceolarias were taken as specialties and a small advertisement inserted in the Florists' Review. This ad created such a demand that orders were filled with difficulty. Cyclamen was added to the specialties and proved such a success that he made that and pelargoniums his leaders.

"Not being content with his varieties, but always looking for something better, he commenced to improve his cyclamens, by selection and hybridizing, which is crossing two varieties to get one between them, and as a result about two months ago he sowed over fifty varieties of this one plant of seed of his own raising. He put in about 20,000 seeds, which, he says, will yield 10,000 good, healthy plants, and is now sowing another 20,000 and still later will sow another lot, making a total of 60,000 seeds and about 30,000 plants of cyclamen which he will have to ship in their season.

"Of his other leader, pelargoniums, commonly called Lady Washington geraniums, he has seventy varieties, and 8,000 plants ready for sale now and expects to sell 20,000 by next April.

"Of primroses, obconica is the great seller, several thousands of these being sold yearly, and cinerarias and calceolarias in smaller quantities.

"Pansies afford another chance for specializing and as a result of sowing heavily he has over 8,000 pansy plants to carry through the winter, besides thousands of plants he carries in stock the year around, including 10,000 to 12,000 pelargoniums, 3,000 to 4,000 primroses and 4,000 to 5,000 cyclamens, which are not included in the seedlings mentioned above. Mr. Sylvester is one of three growers in the United States to any extent of some of the above.

"Shipments every year are immense, the express shipments alone last year amounting to over fourteen tons, and so far this fall he has shipped more than five tons of express, besides the freight shipments.

"When Mr. Sylvester was asked what he thought was the reason for the great increase in his business, he replied, 'Advertising.' He handed the writer a copy of the FLORISTS' REVIEW, which contained the following article:

WHY LIMIT YOURSELF?

Are you content with a business among your neighbors? Do they buy all the stock you raise, or could raise? Do they buy steadily, all the year around, or do you find yourself pushed for cash to meet your bills except, perhaps, in the spring? Do your local customers pay cash, or expect you to wait a year, more or less, for your money?

Why don't you grow stock that other florists buy—advertise—and branch out? Others in small towns have done it—why not you?

See what this wholesale florist writes from a retail town:

"Please discontinue my adiantum, dracaena, cyclamen and primrose advertisements in the Classified Department of the Review and insert the inclosed until further notice. Stocks are getting badly broken. Sales have been first-class. J. Sylvester.
"Oconto, Wis., Sept. 21, 1908."

Cash comes with the order to the known advertisers in the Review. Why not branch out?

"As a result of his advertising, Mr. Sylvester had to erect another greenhouse, making three in all, which are literally packed with plants of all descriptions, and some kinds, as pansies, are kept outdoors all the time in frames.

"This part of the United States is not generally thought of as being an extra good place to raise flowers, the year around, but when we think that Oconto flowers go to every state in the Union and to our neighboring countries, Canada and Mexico, we have to think there is something really good in them after all. These flowers and plants are not all shipped during our short summer and fall, but all the year around, going from the frozen country to a warm, tropical one.

"This shows what can be done in Oconto by proper enterprise. Why can we not have other industries built up here as Mr. Sylvester has his?"

Immortelle Wreath with Holly Spray.

SOME GOOD SINGLE MUMS.

The increased interest being taken in these beautiful chrysanthemums is being attested at the various fall shows, where they are being shown more extensively than ever before. At the late Boston exhibition there were as many plants of singles as of all other varieties combined, and it was especially noted that the ladies paid special attention to them.

All the singles are of easy culture and, with a few exceptions, make excellent bush plants, some requiring no stakes and others very few, compared with the heavier weight doubles. Cuttings rooted in March and April will make excellent plants in 8-inch pots for fall. Of course, larger sized specimens may be had by starting them earlier, but we find the 8-inch size a useful decorative one. The plants can be grown outdoors from June till September, although they will hold their lower foliage a little better if kept under glass all the time.

For cuttings the singles can be grown in boxes or benches. Cuttings rooted in May will produce splendid sprays. For table decorations these are far preferable to the doubles, being so much lighter and airier, points too often forgotten by floral artists, whose efforts would seem to be to pile as many flowers as possible on the tables, frequently building them up so that it is an utter impossibility for the guests to see one another across the table.

The following singles have proved themselves to be good for pot culture: Ladysmith, early pink; Miss Irene Craig, pure white; Miss E. Partridge, deep pink; Emily Wells, clear pink, makes a fine bush plant, one of the best; Mrs. E. Roberts, delicate pink, very fine; Mary Richardson, reddish salmon; Miss Mary Anderson, blush white, early; Mrs. S. Untermyer, pink, a dwarf grower, makes a splendid pot plant; Bessie Kennedy, blush, very good; Mrs. E. A. Isaacs, blush; Mrs. Baillie, chestnut bronze; Pretoria, deep yellow, strong grower, needs pinching until the end of August; Edith Pagram, pink, white ring around disk. Several of the foregoing are American raised varieties and are equal to the best imported ones.

Some varieties have a weedy habit and are unsuited for pot culture. The following come in this class: Golden Star, Wyndham, J. T. Angus, Winnie Sherring, Lily Beer, Gretchen, Lorna Dando, Kate Covell, Gertrude and Harold Bishop, among the English varieties. Among American sorts Helen Totty has a fine dwarf habit, but the flowers can hardly be termed single and they have a droopy appearance. Julius Roehrs, a taller grower, of chestnut color, and Mrs. W. Turner, light pink with large flowers, are not equal to such sorts as Mrs. S. Untermyer and Bessie Kennedy for pot culture. Some of the foregoing are useful for sprays, but too many sorts are now being put upon the market and it is necessary to prune the list severely.

Quite a number of the newer introductions are really semi-doubles. The most beautiful and taking kinds are those with a single, or at most a double row of petals. The nearer they approach the single marguerites in form, the more popular they will be. If florists will restrict themselves to two or three of the best sorts and grow them so that the foliage is retained well down to the pots, they will find these singles excellent market plants, and small batches grown for sprays will sell at stores which are up-to-date. Try a decoration with them and it will make a first-class advertisement.

THE BEST FIFTY.

Every year I have carefully compiled a list of the best kinds for the exhibition grower to handle, judged in the light of the most recent shows. Every two or three years the face of our show varieties changes and, while one or two of the standards stick, most of them pass to that particular stage of existence reserved for mums after they have departed this life.

Anyone can compile such a list as this if he will take the record of the different shows, jot down the kinds shown, strike an average on the winning lots and then make a comparison with the novelties as shown. My list this year is as follows:

White—Mrs. Norman Davis, Beatrice May, Merza, W. M. Moir, Nellie Pockett, Clay Frick, Mrs. J. Makant, May Seddon, Lynnwood Hall, Pres. Fallieres, T. Eaton, Mrs. F. F. Thompson.

Yellow—Col. Appleton, F. S. Vallis, Mary Donnellan, Yellow Miller, S. A. Naceur-Bey, Mrs. L. Thorne, Mrs. J. C. Neill, Gen. Hutton, Mrs. Geo. Hunt, Cheltoni, C. Montigny, Yellow Eaton.

Pink—Miriam Hankey, Lady Hopetoun, W. Duckham, Loiseau-Rousseau, Morton F. Plant, Frank Payne, O. H. Broomhead, Grace Whitney, Mrs. C. H. Totty.

Bronze—Mrs. O. H. Kahn, Rose Pockett, Ongawa, Mary Mason, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Glenview, G. W. Pook.

Crimson—Pockett's Crimson, Pockett's Surprise, Leslie Morrison, C. H. Totty, Mrs. H. Partridge.

Odd Colors—Mrs. J. Dunne, Splendor, Bessie Evans, Pres. Viger, Mrs. J. Sinnott.

In looking over this list, we note that whites and yellows are not much changed. Mrs. Norman Davis, while a shade early, was uniformly good all over the country. Beatrice May suffered more than usual from the heat and did not finish so well. Moir produced some enormous flowers and many poor ones. It wants a long season of growth and an early bud and then it is all right. So many growers have yet to learn the lesson that it is impossible to get something out of nothing, and after planting out in July they wonder why they cannot get good flowers from their stock.

Single Chrysanthemum Mrs. Untermyer, Light Pink.

Single Chrysanthemum Emily Wells, Bright Pink.

The rest of the whites are placed about as they go in the order of merit. Mrs. J. Makant is a novelty, much on the order of Moir, but with less neck. Mrs. F. F. Thompson, with its curling petal, is the most beautiful of the lot as a flower, but its neck puts it out of the running in any but the short-stem class.

In the yellows, Appleton is not yet deposed from his perch, though eventually he will meet his Waterloo. F. S. Vallis everyone knows and everyone grows for his largest flower. Mary Donnellan has been well received, and if it only had the Appleton foliage it would depose the latter. Two novelties are in the yellow class—Yellow Miller sport and Mrs. L. Thorne. Neither one is deep in color, though in their class as light yellow they are fine. Yellow Miller is having a heavy sale on its parents' record. S. A. Naceur-Bey is one of last year's French kinds that has made its way to the front. It is tinted with bronze occasionally, but otherwise is a handsome thing. The rest are all well known. Yellow Eaton is about ready to step off the list. Neither of the Eatons is as good as it was and their race is about run.

In pinks, no variety has loomed up like Hankey this year. A year ago my kind friends, the knockers, decided that this variety was overrated and that my judgment, like the flower, did not amount to much. Hankey was head and shoulders above any pink at Chicago and New York this year and has vindicated itself. Frank Payne and Mrs. C. H. Totty are both good as novelties in this class, though I could wish they were deeper in color. Duckham is losing its grip, and though some eastern growers still get it fine, it is not so good as it was. Loiseau-Rousseau is a wretched color, but a magnificent flower, and, so long as size counts thirty-five points in the scale, must be reckoned with. Lady Hopetoun, though the neck is weak, is still one of our largest blooms. Grace Whitney will be seen in much better shape another year.

In bronze, Mrs. O. H. Kahn is the winner. It is as easy to grow as a cabbage and comes on any bud. It was a favorite everywhere. Rose Pockett, while it will only figure in the short-stem class, as the neck is too long, is one of the handsomest mums ever staged. Ongawa is a grand thing in this class, but a little too early for most shows. Glenview produces some great stock, but the bud has to be just right. A little too early or too late makes a big difference with it. Mary Mason is one of the biggest mums we have and Miller is always in evidence.

The crimson class has been enriched this year by the addition of some wonderful things. It is, in fact, almost a matter for regret that we have so many at once. Chas. H. Totty is not a true crimson, shading, as it does, back to chestnut, but it is a grand mum. Lest I be misunderstood, let it be stated that C. H. Totty was not named by me personally. My bump of conceit has never swelled to the point of naming anything after myself. It was named by Wells in England, and is an Australian seedling. Pockett's Crimson is the gem of this lot. Its record is now a matter of history and another year in the hands of our expert growers will only enhance its reputation. It is all crimson and will never be classed as a bronze, as so many of our crimsons have been. Pockett's Surprise does not show such rich coloring, but it makes an even larger flower and must be classed as a special anywhere. Leslie Morrison shades off several points on color, but it is such an enormous flower that a place must be made for it in the short-vase classes at least.

In the odd colors, Splendor is the most prominent. It is a peculiarly shaded flower and an odd color. The petals, some of which are two inches wide, hang straight down and show only the bronze reverse, with an occasional glimpse of crimson showing in the upturned tip. It is a striking and novel flower and I think will be popular. Bessie Evans is a pink so light that it shades to white in the center of the flower. It makes a very large flower and is an easy variety to handle.

I consider that 1908 marks an epoch in the history of the mum. Not only were there some splendid shows, but the new kinds set up for the first time show such marked progress that we may truthfully say that the end is not yet.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

BEST LATE VARIETIES.

I would be pleased to learn the names of the best standard late varieties of chrysanthemums, in the colors white, yellow and pink. I have Eaton and Yellow Eaton and want some others as late or later than those kinds. P. H.

The standard kinds appearing in New York since Thanksgiving have been: In white, W. H. Chadwick, Jerome Jones and Jeanne Nonin; in yellow, Yellow Chadwick, Bonnaffon and Nagoya; in pink, Maud Dean, Dr. Enguehard and Helen Frick.

It has always seemed to me, in our vicinity, that after Thanksgiving there is no frantic rush to get mums any more. The public is tired of them and turns to other flowers. In the west it may be different, though I would advise P. H. not to go into very late mums too heavily till he sees how his market will take them.

He will, of course, understand that late stock is planted late (sometimes as late as August 15) and grown as cool as possible all fall and the terminal bud taken. One exception may be noted, and that is with the old Jerome Jones. The terminal bud of that variety with us used to be a light pink, and we discarded it a decade ago, though some commercial men still seem to get it in good shape. A pink variety coming out this year, called W. R. Brock, can easily be held for Christmas if desired.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

Chrysanthemum growers throughout France and England are now celebrating the centenary of the chrysanthemum. One hundred years ago a French sailor introduced the first plants from Japan into France. His portrait now occupies a place of honor at Paris, Tours and the leading French shows, and his grandchildren are feted by the enthusiastic mum growers. Many old prints, paintings, catalogues, etc., have been got together by enthusiastic collectors for the occasion, forming a most interesting collection, in which the progress of a century's work may be noted, step by step.

Unfortunately, however, the chrysanthemum itself has not risen to the occasion, for 1908 is not an ideal year for specimen blooms. The mild weather of late October and early November played havoc among the petals, and growers are disappointed at not being able to show tiptop blooms. There is a marked decline in the quality of blooms at leading English shows, such as those of London and Birmingham, and a decrease in the number of exhibits also. It is very unfortunate that Dame Nature should step in and rob the centenary of its splendor. There is no lack of new varieties, and single flowered varieties still maintain their popularity for decorative effects.

GREEN BAMBOO STICKS.

Mr. Loechner, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., has the following to say of bamboo plant stakes:

"Japanese bamboo sticks in natural condition are well known to the growers, particularly in the east, where they are delivered at reasonable prices on account of the cheap ocean freight on direct tramp steamers via Suez to New York. Most of these steamers belong to the Standard Oil Co., and they carry freight at extremely cheap rates instead of returning under ballast.

"The sticks are used in preference to the so-called American canes, as they are more durable, more slender, and do not rot at the base, so they can be used over and over again. Several trials have been made to color them for pot plants such as chrysanthemums, lilies, hyacinths, etc., but the color did not stick to the glossy surface of the sticks. But now one house has succeeded in having them colored by a special process and they are bought in the east in preference to the wooden sticks which we used before."

PINK LUPINES.

Can you give me any information on growing Rawson's new Pink Beauty lupine? Do you think it will make a good florists' flower? S. H. S.

Annual pink lupines should make good florists' flowers. They are of easy culture under glass, but so far seem to have been largely neglected commercially. If seed had been sown in small pots late in September and planted in benches in October, they could have been had in flower for Christmas. By sowing now, either in pots or thinly in a bench in a cool house, you will be able to flower them about the middle of March. These lupines, like many others of our best annuals, do better under glass than outdoors. They keep well when cut and I feel confident that any wide-awake and up-to-date flower stores would be glad to purchase them. If you have critical flower buyers, looking for something out of the beaten track, these lupines will make a welcome change. A house kept at 45 to 48 degrees at night is sufficiently warm for them.

CHICAGO'S MONTHLY SHOWS.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago recently decided to try a series of monthly lectures and exhibitions this winter and announces the first one for December 12, at the Art Institute, from 3 to 9 p. m. Christmas plants will be shown. Baskets of plants will receive premiums of $5 and $3. For each of the following classes first premiums are $5 and second $3:

Best single stem kentia, pot not to exceed twelve inches diameter.
Best made-up kentia, pot not to exceed twelve inches diameter.
Best Pandanus Veitchii, pot not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best araucaria, pot not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best pot or pan of poinsettias, stems not to exceed thirty-six inches in length, pots or pans not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best pot or pan of poinsettias, stems not to exceed nine inches in length, pot or pan not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best Otaheite orange, pot not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best Solanum capsicastrum, pot not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best decorative pepper in pot not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best any other foliage plant.
Best azalea in pot not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best rhododendron in pot not to exceed ten inches diameter.
Best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.
Best any other winter flowering begonia.
Best Lilium longiflorum (any form) in pot, single stem.
Best Lilium longiflorum (any form) in pot or pan not to exceed ten inches diameter, not more than three bulbs in pot or pan.
Best any other flowering plant.

TIME TO SOW SEEDS.

When should I sow seeds of the following varieties, here in Tennessee, to have plants ready for spring sales: Pansies, moonvines, salvias, verbenas, petunias and forget-me-nots? J. F. C.

Pansies and forget-me-nots would have been better sown late in August or the early part of September, in your latitude. It will now be better to wait until the early part of February, when they can be sown in a house not kept too warm; 55 degrees at night should not be exceeded, or weak, spindling plants will result. The moonvines will be all right if sown at the end of February. Petunias would be better sown from the middle to the end of January, but the salvia (splendens, we suppose, being the variety wanted) ought not to be sown more than eight weeks before it is wanted for sales, as it is a rapid grower. The last three varieties of seeds germinate best in a moist, warm house, 60 to 65 degrees at night being about right. The salvia must not be kept in this heat long, or it will become long and drawn. C. W.

LEAF CURL ON VIOLETS.

We are enclosing violet leaves which you will notice are curled on the edges, and then the leaves wither, also getting the green spots. We have just noticed this during the last three days. We looked through the violet book, but cannot find anything in regard to the withering and curling of the leaf.

We planted the violets in October and they were getting along nicely. We are heating with natural gas in a stove, with stove pipes, so that the fumes cannot affect the violets. Will you kindly let us know if the curling and the spots are harmful to the violets? C. H.

The leaf curl and withering you refer to are not at all uncommon with the single violets. From the foliage I should judge that your variety is Princess of Wales. The cause of this disease I do not know. The best remedy is to pick off any affected leaves as fast as they appear. Any plants badly diseased had better be pulled up. Keep the plants moist at the root. Scratch the surface soil occasionally to prevent its becoming baked. Hold the night temperature as near 40 degrees as possible and you will do about all that is possible to prevent the spread of disease. C. W.

VIOLETS UNDER BENCH.

Will violets bloom and be of any value if planted under the edge of a bench on the north side of the greenhouse, where there are pipes under the bench? I keep the house at 60 to 65 degrees. J. F. C.

Neither double nor single violets will do anything planted in such a location. Both want an abundance of light and sun, which conditions would be entirely lacking under any bench. Furthermore, the temperature, 60 to 65 degrees, is much too high for violets, which succeed best in winter in a night temperature of 40 to 42 degrees. Unless you can give your plants a light bench or bed, it would be much better to grow them in cold-frames.

BELL'S WINDOWS AT NIGHT.

The accompanying illustration is from a really exceptional picture made at night. It shows the store front of the Bell Floral Co., at Franklin, Pa., during the recent annual encampment of the Odd Fellows. The picture was made entirely with the light regularly used in the windows, one Tungsten burner of 110 candle power in each window, the exposure being about twenty minutes.

The Bell store is the only one of its kind in Franklin and was started only last summer. The light causes the signs above the awning to stand out boldly and, whatever the window decoration may be, it never fails to attract attention when illuminated. During Odd Fellows' week one window was in red, white and blue, with the well-known three links worked out in immortelles, while the other window was in purple and gold, with a large vase of yellow mums draped with purple chiffon and the Odd Fellows pin worked out in immortelles.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Various Preparations.

There are several matters which should be given attention before cold weather sets in, that there may be no delay in future operations.

First in importance is a supply of soil in which to pot the young stock when propagated. Many a batch of promising cuttings has never fulfilled expectations for want of a proper start in life. "Any old soil" will positively not do; neither can such soil be brought up to requirements by the addition of fertilizers. The mature plants will lead the strenuous life in due season, but let the youngsters follow the simple one.

Provide new soil, composed entirely of rotted sod, without the addition of any fertilizer whatever. A small quantity of air-slaked lime, however, might with advantage be added.

The Compost Pile.

Locate the pile outside, convenient to the potting shed. As soon as freezing weather forms a substantial crust over the surface, cover with straw, hay, corn stalks or other material, to prevent further freezing. Over all, place boards or whatever may be at hand that will shed water.

Brought in a week or ten days before being used, that it may become warmed to the inside temperature (this is important), such soil will be sweet, in good mechanical condition and particularly adapted to the sturdy growth so desirable in the carnation.

Some may question the advisability of leaving out the fertilizer, but would they presume to feed an infant on the ration suitable for a grown person? Why should not the same rule obtain in the case of plants?

The Propagating Sand.

This can be handled in much the same manner as recommended for the potting soil, though some growers prefer to place it in the bench early and sterilize it just previous to inserting the cuttings. From a commercial point of view, I am not an advocate of sterilization in the case of sand or soil, believing, as I do, that the advantages gained—if any—over the employment of natural methods do not warrant the average grower in incurring the increased expense.

Plowing.

If possible, plow the land for next season's plants this fall or early in the winter, whether it be in sod or open. Leave it rough, as turned by the plow, and, instead of leaving the manure in a pile to be spread in the spring, apply as soon as hauled to the field, which should, of course, be during the winter, when the ground is frozen. In this connection let me say that if you can arrange in some way, without much expense, to have it put on with a manure spreader, do so; it will prove a mighty good scheme.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Propagating.

The time is now coming when you must begin thinking of your stock for next season and there is nothing in the whole year's work which is deserving of more serious consideration. We will not consider the whole question at this time, but only the preparations which must be made for the rooting of the cuttings which are to be your next season's stock. A small percentage of growers have a special house for propagating, and in some respects these are very desirable. Perhaps the greatest advantage, in this as in other cases when a whole house is given to any one thing, is that conditions can be controlled and arranged to suit that one crop, without having to consider something else which may require different conditions. This will often save one considerable worry and loss. This does not necessarily mean, however, that you can not propagate successfully unless you have such a specially built house. The fact is, there are perhaps more cuttings rooted in houses where other plants are growing than there are in specially built propagating houses.

The Bench.

If you have a bench which you can isolate so as to control the draughts and the light, you can root your cuttings as well as you could in any propagating house. If deemed necessary, add an extra steam pipe under the bench and board up the front from the edge of the bench down to within six or eight inches of the ground. This will hold in enough heat to gently warm the sand from the bottom. This should not be overdone, however. You will find that usually two 2-inch pipes are enough under a 3-foot bench, if steam is used for heating. The north bench in an even-span house makes an ideal propagating bench. Hang a muslin curtain in front of the bench, suspended from the roof-bars and reaching down below the edge-board of the bench. This will keep off draughts when the ventilators are open, besides keeping off the sun on bright days. Later, when the sun gets up higher, another curtain must be stretched over the cuttings.

As to the bench itself, many growers prefer tile bottoms, but here, again, we can say that you need not fail if you do not have them. Clean boards, with proper drainage, make a splendid bench for this purpose. If it has been used for growing blooming stock, be sure it is cleaned off well and washed with the hose. After that, give a good coat of hot lime wash, to kill and prevent fungus.

The Sand.

Now you are ready for the sand, which should be clean and sharp. River and lake sand are usually clean and are good if you can get them sharp enough. Usually they are too fine, which prevents proper drainage when flooded with water. Pit sand is not always clean, but can be had as coarse as wanted. We have used both kinds with splendid success and find that, when handled according to their composition, no trouble need be experienced.

Spread the sand on the bench about three and one-half inches thick and water it thoroughly. Leave it until you wish to put in cuttings, when it should be packed down rather firmly, packing it as it is needed. Some growers still use a brick for doing this, but we find that a much better tool is made as follows: Find a piece of 2-inch plank, 6x12, and smooth on both sides. Saw a V-shaped piece out of another piece and nail it onto the flat piece with the point up. This makes a splendid handle, which can be gripped from either side and does not tire the hand like gripping a brick, and a much better job will result.

After providing yourself with a common table knife for cutting the furrows in the sand where the cuttings are to be inserted, you are ready for the cuttings, and your troubles are just commencing. They will be serious or light, according to your watchfulness and good judgment in caring for the cuttings.

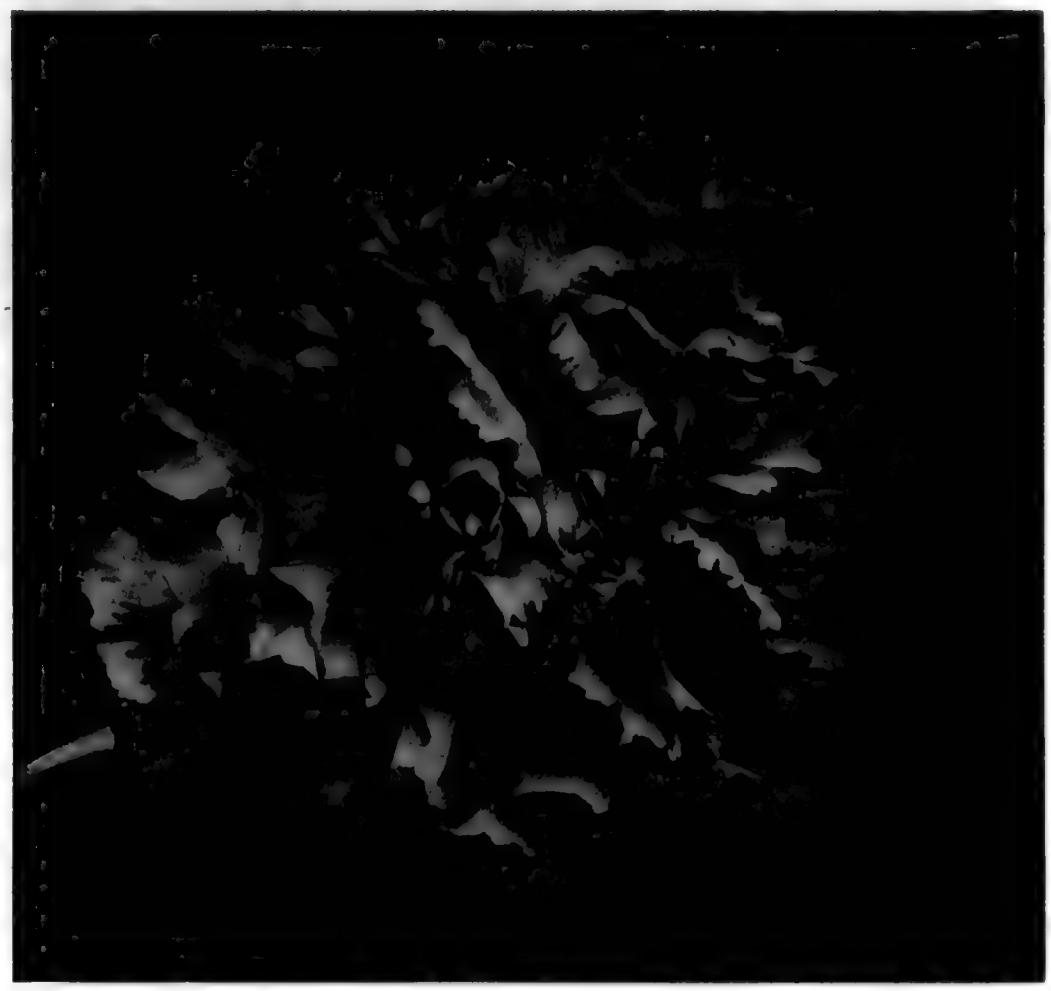
MERRITT'S SUCCESS.

H. Merritt, at Irondequoit, N. Y., has had exceptional results with his carnations thus far this season. The accompanying illustration shows a house, 30x155, from which he picked an average of 1,000 flowers a day for the whole month of October, which splendid result could not have been obtained had the weather not been specially favorable. The cut still is heavy. Enchantress occupies the bench in the foreground in the picture, with Beacon in the bench at the left, and Queen on the two side benches. The picture was made in the afternoon, and in the early morning of that day 1,200 blooms had been picked.

Mr. Merritt disposes of the bulk of his stock to H. E. Wilson, Rochester, who has taken his cut for twelve years in succession.

Last season Mr. Merritt found a sport of Queen, a shade which resembles Winsor, and of which he intends to work up stock, thinking he has a first-class thing.

During the past summer Mr. Merritt built for himself a new residence at a cost of over $5,000, which seems to indicate that carnation growing is not the least profitable of occupations in central New York.



ARRANGEMENT OF BENCHES.

Can you tell me the most practical way of dividing a house 11x85, and eight and a half feet high to the ridge, into bench room for the growing of carnations? It is an even-span house.

SUBSCRIBER.

Your house is of an awkward width for dividing in an up-to-date manner. You do not give as much data as you might have done, either, and so I must guess at what you did not furnish. I will assume that the eaves are about five and one-half feet high and the sides boarded up to them. In such case, I would build a bench two and one-half feet wide against the north wall. This will hold four plants across. Leave a 2-foot walk between it and the next bench, which will be five feet wide. This will leave room along the south wall for a walk one and one-half feet wide, which is wide enough to work in. You will do all your heavy work, like wheeling soil, in the wide center walk. Under this arrangement you will get all the light possible under the circumstances. When you build again, plan your house to be at least fifteen feet wide. That will give you two 5-foot benches with walks all around them, which is the up-to-date way of building.

Carnation Edward.

CARNATION EDWARD.

W. H. Shumway, the carnation grower at Berlin, Conn., has been experimenting for a number of years in the raising of seedlings and has a series of new varieties undergoing test which he expects will be put on the market within the next year or two. This season he is introducing a variety named Edward, which he has been growing for four years. The color is deep pink. The petals are heavily fringed and the flower is high built in the center, being more than ordinarily double. Mr. Shumway says that what particularly impressed him about this variety was its continuous blooming habit. He also claims that the percentage of good flowers is above the average, although an occasional split is found. He says it is easy to grow and comes into bloom early, but does not reach its highest development until the middle or last of November. He says, "The disseminating of new varieties will be my specialty, and I hope to produce several new carnations that will gain widespread recognition." His place is well kept and up-to-date.

RUST ON CARNATIONS.

Can you tell me what is the matter with the enclosed carnation leaves? Please give me a remedy, as the trouble is spreading fast. A. L.

The specimens forwarded were covered with the pustules of the common carnation rust. If you will look up your recent numbers of the REVIEW you will see this subject treated repeatedly. If the rust is spreading rapidly, you may be sure your cultural methods are wrong. Look up your REVIEWS and get busy cleaning the plants off, and then correct your methods according to the suggestions given. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE.

Enclosed you will find samples of carnations which seem to be affected in some way. The plants were in fine condition until two weeks ago, when the trouble was first noticed, and it seems to spread rather than to improve. We are at a loss to know what is our trouble and will appreciate any suggestion.

H. S. W.

The light spots in the leaves on the specimens forwarded are what is called stigmonose—formerly called bacteriosis. These spots are supposed to be caused by the punctures of insects, such as aphis, thrips, red spider, etc. While the growth is quite young these insects puncture the tender skin and suck the juice from the leaves, causing a breaking down in the structural cells on account of the withdrawal of this sap.

Occasionally one runs across a batch of plants thus affected, which had been kept as clean of insects as possible from the beginning, and naturally one is apt to doubt this theory. Scientists, however, tell us that seldom is a plant entirely free from insects of some kind, even though they may escape the naked eye. That these punctures are primarily the cause of this disease I have no doubt, and I think it quite possible that this poison may grow and permeate the whole plant and its offspring in the way of cuttings, regardless of punctures. We find, too, as a rule, that when a variety begins to show these spots, it marks the beginning of deterioration of that variety. Unless selection of cuttings is carried on most critically, the variety will last but a few seasons. By avoiding all plants which show these spots when taking off cuttings, one can sometimes free a variety of the trouble, but it takes several seasons, and unless a variety is of unusually strong constitution it will not outgrow it entirely. Some of the best varieties have gone in that way, which means careless growing and careless propagating.

The variety Enchantress has been showing these spots for several seasons and I have noticed that each season there are more complaints of them. This variety has usually much vitality, else it would not have withstood it this long. That it will go by this route I feel certain, but how soon it will give up the fight no one can say.

It is also noteworthy that in most of such cases one can find a grower here and there who will have a variety in fine health long after everyone else has discarded it. That proves that careful selection of cuttings, followed by careful, sane methods in growing, will keep a variety up in vigor and health. Rich food, excessive watering or any form of crowding will make matters worse, so avoid everything of that kind.

WHO GROWS BRITANNIA?

I should like to hear from carnation growers who have tried the new English carnation, Britannia, raised by A. Smith, Enfield Highway, Middlesex. Let us know if it is a good variety for American growers. We shall be glad to know what anyone with experience has to say about it.

ROSES

ROOTING ROSES OUTDOORS.

Please tell us how the California growers root roses and carnations in the open ground. At what season are they put in the soil and what sort of wood is used? Also please state the subsequent treatment. Do you know the process used in the south of France?

Southerner.

There is but one way the world over to root cuttings of roses in the open ground, and this is dependent on the nature of the cutting itself, the soil in which it is planted, the climatic conditions and their subsequent handling after planting. Taking the four mentioned conditions as a whole, it is hardly necessary to add that they must all be favorable to the growth of the cutting, for if any one of them is overlooked there is but one result, and that is—failure.

To begin with, the wood chosen for this purpose is in direct connection with the conditions; or, to be more explicit, the wood is ripe at that time of the year after we have had a touch or two of frost or after our first rains. These are usually sufficient to cause the stock plants to drop most of their foliage. Or, if there has been no check in the growth because of the non-appearance of expected cold weather or rain storms, the wood must be worked up anyhow, and trenched in bundles of a hundred or so, until a heavy rainfall gives assurance that it will be safe to plant in the open. If, by any chance, the expected dampness does not materialize in sufficient quantity to make a favorable time, recourse must be had to irrigation. This is both expensive and unsatisfactory, but occasionally it is done.

About the first of December is the proper time to make rose cuttings in the central portion of the Pacific coast region, and nothing but the hardest wood is used. Soft, pithy branches are discarded, and there are no other precautions necessary, except to trim off any leaves that may remain and see that there is an eye or two well down toward the bottom of the cutting. The cuttings are usually made about one foot in length.

The soil should be well worked up, and, as I have already stated, the planting should be preferably after a heavy rain or two, but if this does not come to pass and the cuttings have been made and heeled in temporarily for several weeks, so that there is danger of their smothering, they will have to be planted anyhow, and artificial watering given instead.

They are usually planted ten inches apart in the rows and the rows themselves are four feet apart, thereby giving plenty of room for a horse and cultivator to pass between them later. Should it become necessary to artificially water them, a drill is drawn alongside the rows and a good flooding given several times at short intervals, to assist in root forming.

This brings us to the subject of the subsequent handling of the growing cuttings. It is well, when they are planted, to draw the earth well up to them and leave not over three inches of the top exposed. The keeping of the soil loose afterward, as well as removing weeds in close proximity, is done with a hoe, but the main cultivation is by horse and cultivator in the center of the row. This is kept up every three or four weeks during the spring and summer, or until the growing season is practically over at the approach of cold weather.

I might add, under the heading of climatic conditions, that planting is never done during extremely frosty weather, or during the prevalence of dry winds, which often visit us during the planting season.

A strong growing tea or hybrid perpetual rose will usually grow from three to four feet in a season from a cutting, while a hardy climber will usually grow twice as much.

Roses are divided into three classes—varieties that are preferably grown on their own roots, varieties that make a fair growth in that way, and varieties that are difficult to root and are consequently budded instead.

To the first division belong all the wild stocks used either for budding or grafting, about fifty per cent of the noisettes and a majority of the Bengal, ramblers, banksias and briars. To the next division belong the hybrid teas and about fifty per cent of the hybrid perpetuals, teas, mosses, polyanthas and a few other classes. To the last division belong the balance of the rose family, including some from every class that are almost impossible to make into salable plants from cuttings in one season. In some cases it is because it is almost impossible to make them root at all, and in others the roots are so tender and weak that a strong plant cannot be assured until the second or third season. With all these varieties budding is resorted to, as well as with difficult rooting or weak growing kinds, belonging to the first and second divisions.

The growing of budded roses has assumed large proportions on the Pacific coast, and by its assistance many naturally weak growing kinds have been induced to bring out their best qualities and become the most popular selling sorts. Not over fifty per cent of our best roses make satisfactory plants when grown on their own roots, and it becomes necessary to bud them on a stronger growing sort before they will pay for the space they occupy in the garden.

The cuttings are dug one year after planting and are usually graded in three sizes. If the soil is rich and there has been a good amount of moisture, and if the soil has been well cultivated, there should be a heavy percentage of No. 1 plants; that is, those that are sold for first size. If conditions along the lines I have mentioned have not been favorable, the growth will be less vigorous and smaller sized plants will result.

Regarding soil for the growing of roses, it might be well to remark that cuttings can be better rooted in soil that is partially sandy, while after they have become rooted they make stronger plants in heavy adobe soil. This is practically true of all roses.

Carnations, being of such easy growth, are not rooted in the open ground in California to any extent. If the grower has not facilities for rooting in sand under glass, they are handled in cold-frames in flats. There are a few sorts that are difficult to root in this way, but the ordinary varieties are easily grown in a few weeks for forcing or garden planting. Cuttings are made from the first to the middle of December and are ready for transplanting from four to six weeks afterward. By the first of May a healthy young plant should be developed, fully able to hold its own, whether placed under glass or in the garden. G.

Geraniums

THE ROOTED CUTTING TRADE.

Kindly give us instructions regarding the commercial handling of rooted cuttings. What varieties of bedding and other plants are most in demand and what is the cost of carrying stock plants and rooting the cuttings? We note that coleus is advertised as low as 25 cents per hundred. How can they be grown so cheaply and leave any margin of profit? Suppose a grower should have 10,000 cuttings in the sand and no call for them when they were ready to come out, what then? Must soft stock be rooted with bottom heat or can they be put in flats and placed anywhere in the greenhouse? Could they be rooted in flats under the benches where there is a fair degree of light? All the information that you can give us on this subject will be gratefully received. I am located in a mild climate. H. T.

The correspondent asks a good many questions, each one of which, if dealt with in full, would require considerable time and space. I shall only attempt to answer them briefly.

I presume from his first question that he wishes to engage in the rooted cutting business for the wholesale trade. If so, I should proceed by procuring in the spring a small quantity of small plants of such varieties as I intended to grow, and plant them in the field, propagating from them during the summer months to increase the stock, so that I would have a quantity of each variety to plant in greenhouse benches to propagate from during the winter.

The number of stock plants of each variety required would depend on how extensively the grower expected to operate, and that would depend on how much he advertised.

The young plants propagated from the field stock during the summer should be planted in the greenhouse benches about September 1 and the old plants also from the field should be lifted about that time and treated the same way. They will soon become established and by November 1 should be in good growth. You can then begin propagating and offer them to the trade as soon as rooted. Of course, orders will be only limited at this time, but during January, February and March they should be coming in lively.

To the beginner, I would give a word of warning regarding taking cuttings. Do not cut the stock plants too hard early in the season. Leave enough leaves and young wood to keep up good root action. It will repay you well in the end.

I consider geraniums the most important of all bedding plants and fully two-thirds of those used are red of various shades, and in Iowa S. A. Nutt is most popular. Following is a list of the most popular bedding plants produced from cuttings, and in about their order of importance:

Flowering plants—Geraniums, crimson, scarlet, salmon, pink, white, all double; salvias, dwarf varieties, such as St. Louis, Mrs. Page and others; verbenas in variety; ageratum, blue, Stella Gurney as good as any; petunias, double, in variety; feverfew; sweet alyssum, double; lantanas in variety; marguerites, Queen Alexandra and yellow; dahlias and hardy phlox, thousands of small plants from cuttings are sold of these.

Foliage plants—Alternanthera, red and yellow; coleus in variety.

There are many more items a rooted cutting specialist should handle, a good guide to which will be a study of the advertising pages of the Review or the catalogues of a firm in the same business.

Regarding the cost of carrying stock plants and rooted cuttings, it is a question whether or not this can be definitely arrived at. There is a difference of opinion as to the value of greenhouse space. Some consider 50 cents, some 75 cents, and others $1 per square foot profitable returns. The average florist knows little about costs in detail. I wish someone well posted would discuss the subject.

The correspondent asks what he should do with 10,000 rooted cuttings in the sand and no call. When he began to propagate the cuttings, he should have begun to propagate in the mind of the prospective buyer the idea that he had cuttings to sell, and about the time the cuttings were ready the buyer would have his order in.

I cannot see how coleus or any other plants can be rooted, handled and advertising paid for, and sold profitably for 25 cents per hundred, unless they were handled by the million, which they are not. I do not believe they are profitable at less than 75 cents to $1 per hundred in the limited quantities in which they are sold.

Referring to the question, must soft stock be rooted with bottom heat or can they be put in flats and placed anywhere in the greenhouse, I will state that during the winter months all cuttings are assisted in rooting by a little gentle bottom heat, which means keeping the temperature of the sand at about 65 to 70 degrees, which is an easy matter when there are two or three 1-inch pipes under the benches.

There is one essential point to be observed in rooting cuttings and that is, shade from direct sunshine by the use of paper placed directly on top of the cuttings. This also holds the moisture around the cuttings and prevents wilting, but as soon as the strong sunlight leaves the house or the bench in which the cuttings are, then the shade should be removed or fungus may set in and sweep off the entire batch.

It is possible that with care, some success might be had in rooting cuttings under the benches where the light is fair, but personally I would be driven to the last extremity before I put it into practice. I cannot see any economy in putting cuttings in flats at all. If my houses faced south I would select the south side bench, put in four inches of clean sand, firm it down with a brick or any suitable pounder, and give a thorough watering. Then take a common lath the length of the bench width, lay firmly on the sand across the bench and cut a slit in the sand along the side of the lath with an old knife or any suitable implement. In this slit insert the cuttings about one inch apart. When the row is finished, lay the lath close to it and cut another slit, and so on until the batch of cuttings is all in. The width of the lath will determine the distance the rows are to be apart, which will be about one and one-fourth inches. When you have inserted a few rows of cuttings, give a thorough watering to settle the sand and, if the sun shines, cover with paper.

Most cuttings root in from ten to twenty-one days, when they can be potted or put in flats, unless they are to be sold from the sand. If the latter, you can carry a batch of cuttings in the sand two weeks or over a month after they are ready to sell without injury, provided they are kept moderately dry, to keep them from making too soft a growth.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lilies.

Plants of Lilium Harrisii wanted for Christmas should now have the buds all hanging down and the largest ones showing white. In a temperature of 60 degrees at night these will be in season. It is unwise to try any hard forcing. There is a fairly steady call for lilies all winter and sometimes they bring more early in January than at Christmas. It is always well to remove plants in flower to a cooler house for a few days. This adds greatly to their substance.

Longiflorums for Easter must not on any account be overlooked. The Bermuda and Formosa stock will now be several inches high and will be all right if grown along in a temperature of 50 degrees. The Japanese bulbs, which do not arrive until November, will hardly have made any growth as yet. Be careful not to allow the pots to become wet. They are much better kept on the dry side until the pots are full of roots, when more moisture is advantageous. Be sure that you do not allow aphis to get quartered in the tops of the shoots, or great damage will be done. In addition to the regular fumigation, drop some tobacco dust in the tops of the shoots and lay fresh stems among the pots once a fortnight.

Speciosums grown from cold storage bulbs, intended for Christmas, are now showing color, a few flowers being open. These are better grown a little cooler than the longiflorums. With this class it is even more essential to keep aphis at a distance, the buds being easily ruined by this pest. If the new importation of speciosums is not yet potted, they should be gotten into the soil as soon as possible. They soon lose much of their plumpness if left lying around. Pack them in sand if you cannot pot them right away. Stand the newly potted speciosums in a frame or pit where they will not be subject to fire heat. They will root better and break stronger there than in a greenhouse.

Marguerites.

Keep the marguerites potted along before they become potbound. This is especially necessary in the case of those in small pots. These are among the most useful of Easter decorative plants. The white varieties make especially good pot plants. The yellow sorts are somewhat shy in blooming and do not make quite as shapely plants. Any which were carried over the summer in pots, which should now be a network of roots, and which have been kept in a temperature of 50 degrees the last two months, should give a good Christmas crop. Feed them liberally and never allow them to become dry at the root. Some good growers let their plants root through the pots into a bed of soil and get a fine lot of midwinter flowers. Pinching may still be done to plants for Easter blooming. Marguerites are useful at Memorial day. To get nice plants at that date, there is still ample time to root and grow them along. In propagating from yellow varieties, select shoots which do not show a tendency to become blind.

Asparagus Sprengeri.

The demand for cut sprays of Sprengeri will increase now, as the cooler weather comes on, and to keep up a steady succession will require a little judgment. It is best to cut over one section of a bench at a time. After removing the ripe shoots, cut out all which are yellow and dying. Scratch over the surface soil and, if the bed is at all impoverished, apply a top-dressing of loam and rotted cow manure. It is not a good plan to cut every shoot away from a plant; it has a weakening tendency.

Azalea Mollis.

At nearly all the better class stores Azalea mollis meets with a good sale each winter. The imported plants are the best for forcing, being usually much more heavily budded than home-grown stock. Plants carrying thirty to forty buds each in 8-inch pots make a beautiful show, and while they do not last as long as the Indian azaleas, they include some enchanting shades of color not to be found in the latter class. Soak the balls well when received. Pot up at once if you can do so, and store where a little frost will reach the plants. Azalea mollis stands hard forcing with impunity; but with this, as with all other forced shrubs, the proper plan is to remove the plants to slightly cooler quarters as the flowers begin to open.

Moschosma Riparium.

Moschosma riparium, a graceful South African plant, lends itself well to decorative effect and should make a good Christmas market variety. Anyone who has seen a nicely flowered specimen in bloom will bear testimony to its grace and beauty. For cutting, this has its limitations, but as a holiday plant it is excellent. If the plants were housed in September and have been given a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees at night, they should now be coming into bloom. Give them an abundant water supply and feed liberally. Do not subject them to any forcing, in an effort to hurry them along, or the flowers will drop almost as soon as they open. To see this at its best, comparatively cool treatment is necessary.

Hydrangeas.

All hydrangeas should now be in their winter quarters and be kept drier at the root. It is not too early to start a batch if you want them for Easter. Select such as have the wood of a good nutty brown color. Give a good top-dressing, but do not repot. Start in a temperature of 50 degrees, spraying lightly once or twice a day until they are breaking freely. Probably a few of these early hydrangeas may not show many flower heads. From such, select a good supply of cuttings and place in the propagating house. These will make plants fit for 8-inch pots the following fall, if properly grown along.

Rambler Roses.

Where rambler roses have been pot grown through the summer and the canes have been thoroughly ripened, a small batch can now be started in a cool house. Pick off some of the surface soil and give a top-dressing of loam and bone meal. Cut away any dead or weak wood and bend down the canes so that they will break evenly. Keep in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees at night until the buds are well swelled, when they can be given 5 degrees more heat. Hard forcing should not be resorted to. The minimum night temperature should not exceed 55 degrees at any time, if you want first-class plants. Of course, many growers subject their plants to hard forcing, and the faded, mildewy specimens seen around many of the stores bear mute testimony to this treatment.

Genistas.

While Easter is the season when there is the best sale for genistas, bushy, well bloomed plants will sell at any time during the winter. If wanted in flower early in February, it is time to move the plants into a cool greenhouse. Grown along in a temperature which never exceeds 50 degrees at night, genistas will keep fairly well in a dwelling house. Those subjected to forcing are worthless, and the flowers will all drop off in two or three days. There are many complaints of genistas being poor house plants. If once allowed to become really dry at the root, no after care will freshen up the flowers. If kept in a room where a reasonable amount of fresh air is admitted daily, they are not bad keepers, but they should always be given as light a position as possible.

Cuttings inserted early in the fall will now be rooted and potted off. Keep them pinched after the leading shoot has attained a height of six inches. If cuttings have been overlooked, get a batch in at once and they can be grown into nice plants in 6-inch pots before another winter.

Rex Begonias.

A good bottom heat being now at command, this is a good season to increase the stock of the best selling Rex begonias. Colored leaved plants are, to many, more attractive than flowering ones, and it is always well to be ready to satisfy all tastes. There is no difficulty in rooting this begonia. By cutting up the mature leaves in pieces one to two inches square and standing these erect in porous sand, as you would any other cuttings, there will be no trouble in rooting them, especially if you can give them a steady bottom heat. If your sand is fine, add some finely broken charcoal or cinders to give it porosity. Rex begonias can be rooted under the benches in sand or moss, but to get a big batch quickly the regular propagating bed is best. Pot off as soon as little plants appear, and keep warm until established.

LILIUM CANDIDUM.

Is it necessary to reset the bulbs of Lilium candidum once in three years? Ours give us fine stalks of blooms for two years after planting, then the bulbs either die or divide, and the small bulblets give no blooms during the next two or three years. J. J. L.

As a rule, Lilium candidum does better lifted and replanted once in three years. Our experience has been that the flower stalks dwindle in size and numbers if this is not done. The work should be done not later than August 1, before the new roots are made. Discard the smallest bulbs altogether. If you care to plant them fairly thick in nursery rows, quite a few will bloom the second year. Before planting candidums dip them in a box of sulphur. This appears to assist in warding off the disease often attacking this beautiful hardy lily.

A PIONEER'S PLANT.

One of the pioneer florists of the west is A. Whitcomb, of A. Whitcomb & Son, Lawrence, Kan. Mr. Whitcomb was possibly the first florist in Kansas, having started in the business at Lawrence in 1869. It will therefore be forty years next spring that he has spent in this line at the same place. In the beginning he shipped bedding plants all over the state and there was not much doing in cut flowers. Ansell H. Whitcomb is now a member of the firm and, with his father and mother, they do practically all the work on the place, hiring the rough work by the day. There is about 3,000 feet of glass in the houses shown in the accompanying illustration, and the work has been much lightened since natural gas was available. They make a specialty of bedding plants and do considerable shipping of cut flowers.

Mr. Whitcomb was one of the charter members of the S. A. F. and has been a regular reader of the REVIEW since the day it issued its first number.

Ferns

SCALE ON FERNS.

Will you kindly tell me if there is a remedy for scale on Boston and Whitmani ferns? A. B.

There is no sure remedy for scale on Boston ferns, from the fact that any insecticide that is strong enough to kill all the scale is almost sure to injure the foliage of the ferns. If the worst fronds are cut off and destroyed, and the plants are sprayed weekly with a solution of tobacco extract, there will not be so much trouble from the scale.

The solution referred to is composed of one part Rose Leaf Extract of tobacco to fifty parts of water. W. H. T.

YELLOW FRONDS ON FERNS.

Some of the fronds of my potted ferns have turned yellow. Can you give me a remedy for this? I have been told that soot is good for this. If so, will you please tell me how to apply it? W. B.

As a fertilizer for ferns that are starved, try dried blood, used in liquid form. A safe proportion to use for this purpose is a 2-inch pot of the dried blood to three gallons of water, the plants to be watered with this solution twice a week. Some ferns will stand a stronger solution than the above, but it is safer practice to err on the side of weakness, for this is a strong fertilizer. W. H. T.

AN ASPIDIUM.

What is the name of the enclosed fern? Young ferns grow on the leaf, similar to an asplenium. M. E. G.

The fern in question is Aspidium angulare proliferum, a cool house or half-hardy species, and one of the many varities of this fern. W. H. T.

NAME OF FERN.

The enclosed fragments are all that is left of a fern which we were asked to replace. Can you tell us the variety which we are to look for? F. & F.

The pieces of dead fern root forwarded with this query are not easily identified, but seem to be from one of the davallias, possibly Davallia Fijiensis. But without a frond, or portion of a frond, one cannot be positive as to the species in question. W. H. T.

TROUBLE WITH SPIRAEAS.

I would like to know if Spiræa Gladstone and others are particularly cranky about hard water? Both last year and the year before we had fine looking plants until about the time the buds were well formed; in fact, some were beginning to show color. Then the trouble began. I would first note that the foliage had suddenly the appearance of being scalded; it was not just wilted a little, but looked completely cooked. Then a branch of the blossom stalk would be affected and the plant would be a total loss. The trouble would show all over the lot in individual plants here and there, but new ones would be affected soon, until the entire lot was a loss. We burned no tobacco at all in those houses where this stock was grown, so it was not heavy fumigation, and I could not believe it was for lack of water. The city water here is rather hard and I have thought that possibly the reason lay there. W. H. C.

We do not believe that the hardness of the water would make any difference in your case. We have seen these spiræas watered with about every kind and never noticed any injury. Tobacco smoke is injurious, but, as you say you did not use any, we can see no other possible cause but dryness at the root. Spiræas are thirsty subjects when in full growth and can hardly be overwatered. Some growers use a saucer under each plant after the spikes are pushing, to assist in keeping the soil moist. We can suggest no other cause for your trouble than dryness at the root. Another season, to make more certain that your plants do not dry out too much, use saucers under them, and if tobacco smoke is kept away we fail to see how your plants can be otherwise than healthy. C. W.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business since Thanksgiving has been fairly good. Some few mums are still to be had and are bringing good prices. Roses and carnations are improving daily. Roses are rather plentiful and are selling at $2.50 to $5 per hundred. Carnations are $2 to $4 per hundred. Violets are rather scarce. Stevia is coming in and is selling well. Paper Whites are rather scarce, but there will be a nice lot in for Christmas. Romans will be rather scarce, as some of the growers have quit handling them. There will be enough blooming plants to go around.

Various Notes.

Nick Pontrich has his roses and carnations in nice shape and will have a fine crop for Christmas.

Henry Lurding has secured a five year contract to take care of the St. Stephen's cemetery and will repair the greenhouses and grow cut flowers and spring stock.

Louis Kirch has his carnations in good shape.

Henry Fuchs' place is looking well. He had a good border of late mums.

Frank Gottwald is cutting some good carnations.

Geo. Schulz has rebuilt some of his greenhouses on Goss avenue.

J. F. Link, the Germantown florist, has a nice bench of Enchantress carnations.

J. V. Bohrman has a lot of poinsettias in pans which will be right for Christmas. He also has a good bench of callas.

Wm. Walker's place is in fine shape. His carnations and roses are good and he has a splendid lot of cyclamens in 7-inch pots that will be right for Christmas. He also has some mums he will hold until Christmas, J. Nonin being the variety.

Adam Heitz has an excellent house of carnations and a bench of stevia in 6-inch pots.

Jacob Schulz reports business good at the store.

Mike Pontrich, who is with the Geo. Wittbold Co., is in town after a trip through the south and reports business good. He is stopping with his father, Nick Pontrich.

The Florists' Bowling Club meets at Haager's alleys Monday nights. Capt. Doerr's team won two out of three from Capt. Schulz's men last session. Capt. Doerr was high, with 185. K. R.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Trade Conditions.

The weather conditions certainly had the greenhouse men and florists of this vicinity by the ears last week, when on Tuesday at 1 o'clock in the afternoon the temperature went up to 66 degrees, officially breaking all records for seventy-eight years, and in thirty-six hours had dropped to 18 degrees. This sudden change caused considerable damage. The maximum temperature was the climax of several days of unseasonably warm weather. As the result of this, chrysanthemums have practically disappeared from this market. Carnations, however, are coming better and in larger numbers, while roses, narcissi, valley and violets are also more abundant.

Various Notes.

The last meeting of the Rhode Island Florists' and Gardeners' Club was attended by the largest gathering in more than two years, fully two-thirds of the members being present. Considerable routine business was transacted and reports were rendered by the various officers and committees, after which the officers for the ensuing year were elected, as follows: President, Charles S. Macnair; vice-president, Robert Johnston; secretary, William E. Chappell; treasurer, William Hill; librarian, Eugene A. Appleton. Following the election there was a general discussion of topics of interest, in which much enthusiasm was manifested. A collation was served by the entertainment committee. At the next meeting a committee will be appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the annual banquet in January.

At the public opening of the new Federal building, on Exchange place, nearly every official was pleasantly remembered with numerous floral pieces. In the large array nearly every one of the leading florists in this vicinity was represented.

Marciano Antonio Matarazzo, of Boston, a florist born in Italy, and Alice Ethel Amey, of Boston, came to this city last Monday and, securing a marriage license, were married here.

John F. Wood, who recently returned from a several months' visit to the west, has taken a store at 167 Westminster street, which he is having fitted up in an attractive manner and will open as a retail store about December 15.

Edward Brook, of T. J. Johnston's, had the decorations for the Ray-Pearce wedding at the Church of the Mediator, on Tuesday evening. Palms were banked around the chancel, with large clusters of pink chrysanthemums in the foreground.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. O'Connor are enjoying a pleasure visit to New York.

Frank L. Budlong, of J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., of Cranston, is on a trip through the south. He will stay several weeks at Fort Myers, Lee county, Fla.

The assignee of T. F. Keller, 147 Mathewson street, has sold the place to O. H. Williams & Sons Co. Mr. Keller proposes to start in business again on Weybosset street in a short time.

William B. Hazard is making extensive improvements and alterations in the interior of his store at 112 Westminster street.

J. Kopelman & Co. have exceeded their expectations since opening their retail department at 21 Washington street, opposite the city hall. This is the first retail florist's store on this street. The firm started about three years ago, opening the first wholesale florist's store, with stock, fixtures, furnishings and supplies, in Providence.

Edward Brook and Alex. Macrea have purchased from the estate of T. J. Johnston the florist's business at 167 Weybosset street. W. H. M.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week was irregular and prices went up and down, but toward the close of the week stock of all kinds was plentiful and the wholesalers were compelled to sell at low prices in order to dispose of their consignments. There were plenty of extra fine carnations, which brought about $2 per hundred in small lots. White Perfection, Rose-pink Enchantress and Nelson Fisher are among the best. In roses we have an abundance of Bride and Maid, also Richmond and Killarney. American Beauty, too, is quite numerous in all grades, with the demand only fair. A fine lot of California violets come in each morning and are in demand. Romans and Paper Whites are coming in, but not plentifully. Valley sells fairly well, also Harrisii and callas.

Wild smilax had a good run last week. Some of the downtown stores are being decorated with wreathing and holly and good trade in this line is expected this year.

Some of the leading retailers in the west end had a run of weddings, receptions, dinners and other decorations for the high-up social world. They also say that the demand for orchids is growing and that it is necessary for them to keep them in stock daily, the same as roses and carnations.

Various Notes.

J. Morgan Nussbaumer and his bride, of San Angelo, Tex., spent part of their honeymoon here last week.

The Kelley Floral Co. will open a flower store at 1805 Olive street in time for the holiday trade. It was formerly located at Kingshighway and Delmar boulevard.

George Waldbart furnished one of the largest decorations of the season December 2, the Scudder Cupples ball at the St. Louis Women's Club. Several hundred orchids were used. The decorations were grand, there being no limit of cost.

The Ellison Floral Co. furnished the decorations for the D. R. Francis ball at the St. Louis Club, Thursday, December 3. Over 200 of the best American Beauties were used.

Ostertag Bros. had the decorations for the Turner reception at the St. Louis Club, Friday, December 4. This was also a large affair, which called for fancy stock.

C. A. Kuehn has issued his new catalogue of wire designs and supplies. This department has been busy of late with shipping orders.

Harry Young, of C. Young & Sons Co., as usual at this time of the year, took a few days off for a hunting trip. All the Young boys are noted as good shots and never come home empty-handed.

W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. reports an abundance of extra fine California violets, lily of the valley and carnations. The firm has just received a fresh stock of florists' supplies and has been busy with shipping orders.

William Bouche, one of our best landscape gardeners, met with a painful accident last week while superintending the trimming of trees. A limb fell and penetrated the right eye. Timely attention will save his sight.

Daniel Boyle, assistant keeper of O'Fallon park, died suddenly last week, of gastritis.

The Florists' Bowling Club had a great night bowling Monday, November 30. Monday, December 7, was ladies' night and quite a large attendance of the fair sex was present. President Connon says refreshments will be served on all occasions when it is ladies' night. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Colder and more seasonable weather now prevails. This has appreciably reduced the output of flowers, and business is fairly good. Chrysanthemums are practically done, although some Bonnaffon, Murdock, Nonin and Enguehard are still seen. Those still coming are selling well. Roses are rather less abundant and prices average better than a week ago, Killarney, Richmond and Beauty being the best sellers. Bride, Maid and Kaiserin are more sluggish. Carnations are coming of fine quality, but are not selling so well as they might, the supply continuing excessive. For the best quality flowers there is a good market.

Violets remain scarce and sell better than anything else. Growers report that these plants, especially the singles, are producing less flowers than usual. Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites are abundant, but not in much demand. A few Trumpet Majors made their appearance this week. Stevia is plentiful. Lily of the valley sells fairly well. Mignonette is steadily improving in quality. Lilies are in better supply, quite a few of the new season's Harrisii coming in. Of sweet peas, antirrhinums and other seasonable flowers there is a fair supply. Poinsettias are coming in, but these have a limited sale, except at Christmas.

Pot plants are moving better. Among those in evidence at the stores now are ardisias, Azalea Firefly, Otaheite oranges, primulas, cyclamens, Lorraine begonias and Erica melanthera.

Various Notes.

Edward Hatch, the popular treasurer of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, has gone to Cuba to recuperate from his recent serious illness. Peter M. Miller will act as assistant treasurer in his absence.

A. H. Kirkland, superintendent of the state work against the gypsy and brown tail moths, has resigned, ill health being the reason attributed.

Peirce Bros. are handling quantities of nicely grown and flowered cyclamens and Azalea Firefly at their stall in the Park street market.

Philip L. Carbone, the well-known and artistic Boylston street florist, now occupies the store at 272 Boylston street, on the ground floor, in addition to his old store a few doors away. He was married December 1 to Mlle. Y. Vonne Viaud, of Paris, France, who arrived in Boston last week on the Cymric.

Some fine Jeanne Nonin chrysanthemums are coming in from William Nicholson, of Framingham.

E. J. Shaylor has imported all the best of the new European novelties in peonies and expects to make a finer display of these popular flowers than ever next season. He captured, last season, the first prize for the best peony garden, offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, being also given a silver medal for the superior quality of his stock.

Do not forget election night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 15. Interest in the contest for president steadily increases and a heavy ballot will be cast. Some fine floral exhibits will adorn the tables again.

W. A. Hastings has just returned from a successful western trip in behalf of A. H. Hews & Co., of North Cambridge.

Samuel Beck, the popular salesman for James Tulis, at the Park street market, was married December 1 to Miss Rose Coral Breitstem, of Rosebury, at Commonwealth hall, East Boston.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are busily preparing for Christmas, and are receiving big consignments of holly and other evergreens. Cut flower trade with them is good.

Cooler and quite seasonable weather now prevails with us. The continued lack of rain is the most serious feature of our otherwise excellent season, climatically. Wells and springs are, in many cases, dried up; swamps and streams contain little water, and many ponds are quite dry. The extreme dryness of the soil if continued through the winter will probably result in an unusually heavy death roll among trees and shrubs.

One of the best equipped and most artistic flower stores in Boston is that of J. Newman & Sons, on Tremont street. This section was some years ago thickly clustered with florists, but all but Messrs. Newman have now moved nearer the Back Bay section.

At the Music Hall market L. E. Small is handling an unusually fine grade of double violets. Robert Montgomery, as usual, brings in a first-class lot of Richmond, Bridesmaid and other roses.

John McFarland is disposing of 8,000 valley per week, double his sales of a year ago.

A number of prominent cut flower specialists near Boston will assist in the short special floricultural course at Amherst College from January to March, 1909.

J. Edison Smith, formerly of Brentwood, N. H., and for the past year in the employ of the F. W. Fletcher Co., Auburndale, is at the Newton hospital seriously ill with typhoid fever.

OBITUARY.

Charles E. Miles.

Charles E. Miles died at his home, in Oneonta, N. Y., Saturday morning, November 28, after a brief illness from pneumonia. Although he had been in poor health for the last three years and his friends had noticed a more rapid decline of late, it was not until the preceding Thursday night that he was taken seriously ill. Mr. Miles was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Miles, and was born in Oneonta, December 26, 1857. After leaving the high school he engaged in the livery business with his father. Later he embarked in the grocery business. Still later he established a coal business and conducted it for years. In 1902 he removed to Albany and remained for two years, returning to Oneonta in the spring of 1904. About three years ago he purchased the greenhouses of Mrs. Scott, on Grove street, and has since conducted the business.

Mr. Miles was married, September 6, 1882, to Miss Edwina Utter. Besides his wife, he is survived by his aged parents, one sister, Miss Lyra Miles, and one brother, Fred A. Miles, the latter residing in Waterbury, Conn. To them the sincere sympathy of the community is extended.

Mrs. H. A. Kresken.

Mrs. H. A. Kresken, of Cincinnati, O., died December 2, and her body was cremated three days later. She had been engaged in the retail business for years and was well known and much respected in the trade. Her funeral was largely attended and many beautiful floral tributes were presented.

BALDWINSVILLE, MASS.—On Sunday afternoon, November 15, J. G. Lund found that his boiler had sprung a leak, running a stream as large as one's finger, and was fast putting out the fire, but he managed to maintain heat enough to keep his plants from freezing. On the following Tuesday Mr. Lund procured another boiler, and the old one was taken out and the other installed between 7 a. m. and 5 p. m. As the weather was favorable, the plants were saved, but it was a narrow escape.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Successful business men like to do business with successful men. It keeps them in the atmosphere of success.

National flower show guarantors received, December 7, the checks for the return of the sums advanced for the preliminary expenses of the exhibition.

There is $35.39 currency in circulation for each of the 88,090,000 persons comprising the population of the United States. It is a sum never before equaled and it looks as if quite a few would be able to buy a few flowers for Christmas.

The United States and Germany have arranged for a postal rate on letters between the two countries of 2 cents, instead of the existing rate of 5 cents. The new rates will go into effect on January 1. We already have a 2-cent rate to England.

F. H. Kramer, Washington, D. C., has a new salmon pink rose that he agreed to name for the young lady who should poll the most votes during the recent flower show. The successful contestant was Miss Eva Cooke, daughter of George H. Cooke, another Washington florist.

Subscribers who receive expiration notices should renew promptly if they do not want to miss one or more copies of the Review. Nearly every mail brings a request to "Pardon my neglect; renew and send the copies I have missed." But it seldom can be done. Each issue is exhausted, usually within a few days of publication.

John H. Dunlop, Toronto, has issued a neat folder of eight pages and cover, entitled, "Gifts." In it he points out the utility of flowers and plants as Christmas gifts. Prices are quoted on a good line of Christmas cut flowers and plants. Such a folder, neatly printed and distributed among good people, cannot help but increase the use of florists' stock at the holiday season.

In addition to a carnation, a chrysanthemum, and a begonia named for President Wm. H. Taft, it develops that the president's name also has been given to a dahlia, by J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.

The committee of nurserymen who recently appeared before the Ways and Means Committee at Washington, asked that in the new tariff law azaleas, Dutch bulbs, French bulbs, lily bulbs, valley pips and one or two other items be placed on the free list for the reason that "they are not propagated in this country." The present rate on rose plants, 2½ cents each, they asked to be increased to 4 cents, and a number of other increases in the way of additional protection on nursery stock were asked.

DON'T SAVE UP WHITE.

The man who saves up white flowers for Christmas ought to take a tumble to himself—now, before he repeats his folly for yet another year. Don't do it. Restrain yourself. Remember that Santa Claus only will take white so you also will let him have some red.

Of all the poor propositions at this season, the worst is the sleepy white carnation. Don't let 'em accumulate.

Only fresh stock of any color is salable for gifts.

THE GLASS MARKET.

There is prospect of more labor trouble in the glass industry, with a certainty that if the workmen force the issue it will mean a sudden shutdown on the part of many factories. For this reason all quotations for quantities of window glass are only for immediate acceptance and there is a disposition to hold the stocks now on hand in anticipation of the higher prices that will come with labor troubles at the factories.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

In the last week we have had our first taste of winter. For the first few days no appreciable difference was made in the market, but this week the cooler conditions, with a few dark days, have caused something of a reduction in crops. The bright, frosty days have made a great difference in quality throughout the market. There still are too many short, weak roses, and especially pale Bridesmaid, but almost everything has been toned up to midwinter grade. Beauties are excellent in every respect, although not in large supply. There have been a number of social events, and December 7 Beauties were called for to be used at the installation of the new county officers, so that the market has had about a twenty per cent advance in the price of Beauties, with still further advances in early prospect. The best grades of other roses also have firmed up in price, but it is more due to better quality than demand. Richmond now has the call in preference to Killarney, which is a strong second choice.

While the prices on roses and some other flowers have firmed up to where they are seasonable, or more nearly so than in recent weeks, the carnation has not shared in the prosperity. All grades of carnations still are selling much below what they brought at this date last year. It is true growers are cutting more

NOTE

"Special" Stock billed accordingly

Carnations

This is one of our strongest lines. We regularly offer the largest lot of strictly high grade stock to be found in any house in the west. Large crops for Christmas and quality the very best. Especially strong on Enchantress; also large lots of fine pink and white.

Tea Roses

We have a large supply of all varieties—all lengths of stem; fine heads. Maid, Bride, Killarney, Field, etc. We shall be able to take good care of all orders. The special call for red stock will make Richmond scarce; we shall have a large supply.

Violets

We handle the cream of the Hudson River doubles and fancy home-grown singles. We shall have a larger supply than at any previous Christmas.

Poinsettias

Large quantity of fine stock, packed at the greenhouses in cases of 50; no rehandling. Special select $4.00, Fancy $3.00, Smaller $2.00 per doz.

Also large supplies of Valley, Sweet Peas, Harrisii, Callas, Paper Whites, Romans, Stevia, etc. Plenty Green Goods, as always. Use our fine Farleyense for Christmas Boxes, etc.

We urge early correspondence; give us a good big order—you will need more stock than ever before at Christmas. Go ahead and sell; if you find yourself running short, wire or phone us and we will take the very best care of you. Remember: If seasonable flowers are to be had in Chicago, they are to be had at Amling's.

For Christmas Cut Flowers

KILLARNEY

Best color, best flower, best stem. If you need strictly fancy stock, we have it. Also shorter lengths of equally good quality.

RICHMOND

Splendid quality in this leading Christmas rose. Fine large flowers, perfect foliage, on all lengths of stem, including the special long, fancy.

CARNATIONS

Day after day and year after year we handle more carnations than any other house in the West. Call on us Now, for Christmas, and all the time. We've got 'em.

MAIDS AND BRIDES

You won't find better roses anywhere than those we are shipping to our customers. Large heads, good color, fine strong stems, clean foliage. Order of us and you will get fine stock.

STEVIA, MIGNONETTE, SWEET PEAS, FREESIA, VALLEY, PAPER WHITES

No Christmas Box is complete without some of these flowers. Mignonette has improved in quality very fast and is fine. Sweet Peas now have good long stems and nice color. Freesia is a novelty. Fancy Valley in quantity at all times. Plenty of fine Stevia and Paper Whites.

VIOLETS

Violets have for years been one of our leading specialties. We handle largest quantities and from the best growers in the United States. Don't wait to find out that some one else can't snpply you, but place your Christmas order with us.

GREENS

Red Berries are fine this year. Can supply Boxwood, Galax, Leucothoe, best fancy Ferns and all other greens in any quantity without notice. Also all greenhouse greens. You need these in stock at all times, especially at Christmas. Prices the same as always.

We look for a big Christmas all over the country. Better put in a larger order than last year. Do it now. With orders in early we shall know where we are at and can better take care of the late additions by wire.

than they did a year ago, but the difference in price is enough so their checks, in most cases, are smaller than they were at this time last season. It hardly seems necessary to say the supply is abundant, but it is worth while noting that quality is strictly top notch. Seldom, if ever, has there been better average quality in the carnations received throughout the market. Enchantress is being grown even in larger proportion than last year, and, as a result, makes the poorest showing in the comparison of prices. Good Lawson is readily salable.

Chrysanthemums are practically over. Nothing but the fag end of the crop remains, and the quality is, in most cases, not good enough to make the flowers easily salable. That the chrysanthemums, also, are over in other sections accounts for the reappearance of many buyers in this market.

Violets have been selling poorly. Paper Whites are overabundant. Valley, too, is plentiful and slow sale. The price on Easter lilies has gone down a notch. Sweet peas do not increase as rapidly as expected. The good ones sell well, the short-stemmed ones slowly. Freesia is in. A few poinsettias are seen, but they are hard to sell. Mignonette shows much improvement in quality, not in demand. Stevia is in great oversupply.

Green goods are selling a little better; they will go nicely as soon as cut flowers become higher in price. There is increasing call for Farleyense. It is being used wherever nice work is needed.

Christmas Prospects.

The consensus of opinion among growers and wholesalers is that the Christmas supply will be large, but that the demand will be the greatest ever, so the wholesalers urge early orders, so they can get a line on the requirements. Roses, except Richmond, are expected to equal all needs. Beauties are expected to be scarce and predictions are heard that the late buyers will pay more than the standard price of $12 for long. It is said carnations will be less abundant than a year ago, but that, other than red, there will be enough to go around. Red can only be had by buyers who will take good lots of white. The grower who saves up white flowers for Christmas is only embarrassing his wholesaler. Violets are expected to be less plentiful than a year ago, but the general feeling among buyers appears to be that they will not pay over $2 except possibly for some specially fine stock. Poinsettias will be equal to all needs; they have not sold so well of late years. Other stock will not be in special demand unless a general and unexpected shortage develops.

Growers should bear in mind that the Christmas trade calls for only the highest quality of stock; soft roses or sleepy carnations won't sell.

Green and Holly.

The W. W. Barnard Co. says this is the biggest year in its history as leading operator in bouquet green and holly. Moderate prices stimulate the business. Green is abundant, and they are working about seventy girls winding wreathing, working until 9 o'clock every night, and with enough orders ahead to insure the biggest season to date. All the holly is well berried, but there is considerable difference in the foliage. There is lots of holly on South Water street, but a good many people have learned that buying holly on that thoroughfare is a good deal like taking a chance at the fish-pond at a Ladies' Night.

The greatest success in the history of the Chicago Florists' Club was its first ladies' night, held at the Union Hotel, December 2. Ninety-five were present and they gave President Kill and Messrs. Waters and Enders full credit for an affair that left nothing to be desired except another one like it. The only improvement would be to have the ladies know each other better, which can only be accomplished by bringing them together oftener.

A luncheon was announced, but it proved to be an excellent dinner of six courses, after which President Kill introduced P. J. Foley as master of ceremonies. Save for the number by 5-year-old Gordon Phillips, a nephew of Ed Enders, the entertainment was wholly by professional vaudeville performers and was high class in every respect.

Before dinner a short session of the club was held, at which nominations for next year's officers were presented by F. F. Benthey, chairman of the committee charged with that duty. The slate is as follows: President, L. Coatsworth; vice-president, Wm. Kidwell; secretary, Louis Winterson; financial secretary, J. E. Jensen; treasurer, E. F. Winterson. Victor F. Bergman and Frank J. Pasternick, both of Wienhoeber's staff, were proposed for membership.

The collection of $128 dues was reported as the receipts of the evening.

Among the exhibits were two fine vases of roses and a splendid plant of Begonia President Taft, the latter from J. A. Peterson of Cincinnati, whose son was present. Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., sent White Killarney that gave the growers a new idea of this variety, and Peter Reinberg sent a vase of Mrs. Field of remarkably fine color, especially when compared to the pink Killarney used on the tables.

Various Notes.

N. J. Wietor says this has been one of the most successful seasons Wietor Bros. ever have had with Beauties. They have had a steady cut of good quality and the prices have been satisfactory.

Phil Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says he figures it will be the best Christmas ever, with a general shortage of first-class stock because of the strong demand.

Vaughan & Sperry say the horse show this week, even though held at the stock yards, is attracting the people who wear violets.

C. W. McKellar says a fine cattleya is as good a flower, any day, as a long Beauty—worth just as much at Christmas and oftentimes worth more.

December 7 Klehm's Nursery began to cut chrysanthemums! Each year they send Kennicott Bros. Co. a fine late lot of Nonin and White and Yellow Chadwick.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is busy with green and holly. All of the available space in the basement has been given over to the women winding green.

Bassett & Washburn were still cutting fine Jeanne Nonin December 7, but were about at the end of the crop.

W. E. Lynch, who has charge of the cut flower department at E. H. Hunt's, has been suffering with a severe cold and has been at home a day or two this week. The Glencoe violets at Hunt's are selling much better than the eastern stock.

Percy Jones says it is time to sound the customary note of warning against saving up white flowers for the holiday.

The greenhouse material men all say business is on the increase and pospects good for next year.

Jensen & Dekema say the orders for stock of their new white carnation are coming in at a most gratifying rate, while the prospects are for a better season than the last one on the cuttings of standard varieties. And last year was the best they ever had, in spite of the general depression.

A son of J. A. Peterson came up from Cincinnati last week with a lot of plants, but found the Palmer House so crowded he could not get his usual sample room, so he displayed his stock at E. C. Amling's and did a good trade.

M. G. Holding, who is known and liked by all buyers of greenhouse glass, has filed a claim against the city for some $19,000 fees collected while serving as city oil inspector a few years ago.

Arrangements have been made by Heller Bros., of the South Park Floral Co., and E. C. Amling for the latter to handle the entire cut of the New Castle plant. The range of about 250,000 feet of glass is in Beauties, tea roses and a few carnations.

A fine lot of long-stemmed White Killarney was on exhibition last week at the store of the A. L. Randall Co., the local agents for the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., with whom this sport originated.

A completely enclosed office is a newly completed convenience at Peter Reinberg's new city store. It permits the office force to be comfortable while the salesroom is kept cool.

Charles Cassier, of Maywood, is building two houses, 25x100. He is another of several graduates of the Albert Amling establishment who have gone into business for themselves.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. had decorations for four coming-out parties December 5. Saturday seems to be the favorite day for these affairs this year.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. reports that the merit of its hot-water boiler is being recognized in other directions than in the greenhouse trade. Only recently it has placed several of these boilers for heating stores, hotels and office buildings. One of the recent orders was for an office building in Vancouver, B. C., this being the third order from that city for this boiler for heating large buildings.

A. L. Randall says he does not look for so many violets to reach this market as at Christmas last year, the crop being lighter now than a year ago.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago will hold the first of its series of monthly exhibitions at the Art Institute December 12. The premium list appears elsewhere in this issue.

It is reported that the west park authorities propose "promoting" Jens Jensen from the general superintendency to be consulting landscape architect.

John Zech says there are too many pink roses and that the growers who stick to Bridesmaid and do it well will not be the losers.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is in with a splendid crop of Victory.

Scheiden & Schoos have begun the delivery of rooted cuttings of their new red carnation, President Taft.

Canger & Gormley say the debutantes have been making quite a stir of late.

A. C. Spencer's eyes now twinkle behind a pair of glasses.

Gus Balluff has gone to Kansas City to work for the Alpha Floral Co.

Fred Lautenschlager was at Ada, O., last week.

Glen Cove, N. Y.—The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its first annual ball November 12, and it was well attended. A committee, including some of the gardeners' wives, carried out the arrangements and looked after the refreshments in first-class style.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

A premature explosion of dynamite, December 3, on the estate of Philip Dexter, Manchester, Mass., killed two well-known citizens of that town. One of them, John Baker, was treasurer of the North Shore Horticultural Society. Mr. Baker's body was torn in pieces and hurled over 100 feet from the scene of the explosion. The deceased was for sixteen years superintendent for the Essex County Club, only resigning last summer. He was identified with the Odd Fellows, United Workmen and other fraternal organizations, and was greatly esteemed along the North Shore. W. N. C.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Last week showed a falling off in the receipts of cut flowers, especially mums, which have seen their day and soon will be a thing of the past. The shortening of all flowers is noticeable, and there will no doubt be advances in prices of all cut flowers soon. Prices so far this season have been far below those of preceding years, and a stronger demand, which means better prices, will surely be welcomed by the growers. The quality of cut flowers sent in daily is above the average for this time of the year, except in Beauties, which are rather poor and scarce.

Various Notes.

Albrecht & Smith, of Erie street, report a good week, having had a great many large funeral orders.

Milford Parks is having a fine run on his fern pans, made up of green seamoss, having filled some large orders for out-of-town trade.

The demand for Christmas greens, etc., has opened up and has the appearance of being as good as last season.

The movement of violets has taken a bad drop. There was no demand for them last week.

Steinbrenner & Son, of Detroit street, are sending in a good cut of stevia to the Cleveland Cut Flower Co.

George W. Mercer is a heavy buyer of Christmas greens, using large quantities for the wholesale trade.

The Calla Cut Flower Co. is shipping some good carnations to this market.

DENVER, COLO.—Louis A. Kintzele, formerly a member of the firm of Kintzele Bros., in Michigan City, Ind., has started in business in this city, with his store at 5249 West Thirty-eighth avenue. He will make a specialty of carnations and mums, but will also handle a general line of stock.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market has met with a slight reverse since last week's report; nothing serious, just a check on the preholiday advance. Carnations felt it most, and expected to feel it least, because everybody argued carnations would be in demand after the chrysanthemum season. Somehow the chrysanthemum season has hung on longer than expected, and carnations have not felt the lively demand anticipated. Nonin mums still are received in some quantity. These and the soft roses due to warm weather may account for the poor sale of white carnations.

Violets have felt the check. It was partly their own fault, because they were so extremely scarce Thanksgiving week that the price was pushed up to a prohibitive figure for the everyday buyer. The result was a decided falling off in the demand. While the supply is still light, prices are less than half those of a week or ten days ago.

Roses have suffered in the shorter grades, but the finer stock is selling at satisfactory prices. American Beauties are rather in oversupply, the usual early December advance in price being absent. Mrs. Jardine is pushing to the front as a winter rose, some choice blooms of this variety running a close race with medium Beauties in size of flower, stem and foliage.

The demand for the aristocratic section, in which class cattleyas and gardenias may be placed, has fallen off, indicating that most of the debutantes have had their coming-out teas. There is still sufficient demand to keep the limited supply at a high price.

Sweet peas are more plentiful, pink and white being obtainable in most of the wholesale houses, while lavender is scarce. Mignonette, bouvardia and yellow and white daisies are improving, but are not plentiful. A little myosotis has made its appearance, and snapdragon is seen here and there. The first poinsettias are in.

Wild smilax is selling well, but the tame article is not particularly sought after.

There is a decided increase in shipping demands, some excellent out-of-town orders having been filled recently. The first German in Baltimore, December 7, did not create the demand expected, there being but six or eight debutantes, in place of fifty last year. The opening of congress in Washington on the same day has ceased to be a floral event, the ruling off of floral gifts from the members' desks proving the deathblow to this once popular custom.

The Spiraea Situation.

Astilbe or spiræa, as it is generally known, is considered one of the hardiest and cheapest of the Dutch grown roots in general cultivation. They furnish more for the money than almost anything else, and when well grown are extremely profitable to our florists. It is, therefore, a matter for general regret that owing to the dry summer in Holland, Spiræa Gladstone has proved an almost total failure. Orders for this popular variety of spiræa have been filled only partially, and the roots that have reached this country in both grades are far, far below those of last season. The two other varieties of spiræa generally forced, floribunda and multiflora compacta, are fortunately in abundant supply and of excellent quality, so that fairly satisfactory substitutes for Gladstone can be obtained.

An Invitation.

The essayist of the evening had just concluded and Phil was meditating on his remarks about araucarias and red neckties when a gentle voice whispered in his ear, "Won't you come and see me?" It was Godfrey Aschmann, who makes araucarias, or Christmas trees, as they are popularly called, a specialty. And as everybody wants to know the secret of Godfrey Aschmann's success, Phil at once accepted, and faithfully kept his appointment. It was striking noon before he arrived, so he planned how he would say that the grower, who was as busy as a bee, had been obliged, like the bee, to rest a bit, for luncheon. But such was not the case, for Godfrey Aschmann was hard at work during luncheon time writing one of his famous cards for the REVIEW. He took time, however, to show his houses, crammed full of every kind of Christmas plants, and Phil divided his time between admiring the stock and trying to learn the owner's secret of prosperity. There were azaleas galore: Deutsche Perle, white; Simon Mardner, old rose pink; Mme. Petrick, rosy pink; Apollo, fiery red, and Vervæneana, pink and white. There were araucarias of better value than ever before; there were ferns in all the popular sorts and sizes, palms, primroses, solanums, cool grown, sturdy; Begonia Gloire de Lorraine; in short, everything the plant-lover wants at Christmas. The new house was finished and full of azaleas; the new boiler was in, doing its duty, both house and boiler the work of the sturdy sons. But, you say, how about the secret of success? Well, it seemed to me that something of the business methods seen in our prosperous department stores had here crept into the florists' business. Popular varieties, popular prices and generous advertising.

The Market.

After a few days of frost and overcoats last week, the temperature was back Monday morning, December 7, to 60 degrees, and an April rain was falling. Nothing indicated winter but the Christmas trees, which are here in tens of thousands.

In the wholesale cut flower market there is but little change to note. Beauties are abundant, and 30 cents the top; 8 cents is the extreme figure for Maids. The new varieties of roses demand a little higher figure and some of them, especially My Maryland, are growing rapidly in popularity.

A comparison with last year's quotations at this time is interesting, inasmuch as it shows an exactly similar condition of the market. Four cents was then, as now, the extreme top for novelties in carnations, and 50 cents to 75 cents for the specials was the violet quotation. Lilies had advanced to 12 cents and that is top price now, so history repeats itself.

The quality of everything is now superb. There is no more pickling and there will not be until Christmas. It is too soon to prophesy the holiday prices. The retail florists have had prices to suit themselves and are enjoying general prosperity.

The supply of cypripediums is difficult to digest daily, so many are coming in. Many of the best varieties of orchids are now arriving in goodly numbers and James McManus says that the Christmas supply will be large, although the cattleya has come to be in such wide demand it takes a good crop to go around in times of any special call for choice flowers.

Narcissus has dropped with a thud, and stevia, both double and single, is too abundant to command appreciation. Of the left-over violets that reach the street brigade the less said the sooner mended. Chrysanthemums are few, and few of these are cared for. The season has been a long one and there should be no complaining as they join the procession of the past, and are forgotten for the season.

The plant situation is decidedly healthful. Already the stores are being stocked conservatively and handsomely with flowering plants. The medium sizes and prices are everywhere popular. The old days of azaleas at $50 and $100 are now but a memory.

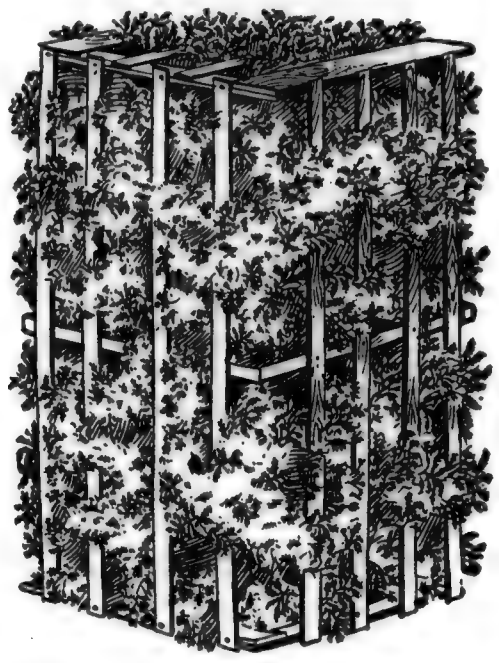
Various Notes.

The Florists' Club meets December 14, the last gathering for the year, and a most important one. Secretary Young will stage and care for all exhibits, as usual. The venerable C. L. Allen, of Floral Park, will address the club on "Plant Development," and the new officers will be elected. The gentlemen running for these official positions are among the cream of the membership. A fair amount of good-natured competition seems assured. The end of it will be harmony and progress. Chairman Rickards says the season demands a turkey collation.

Thursday, December 10, by order of the court, there will be an auction of the assets of the Fleischman Floral Co., at the store at Broadway and Twenty-fifth street.

A big Broadway flower store is said to have been leased to a shoe firm for occupancy immediately after Easter.

The express companies have raised their rates one-fifth. The Public Service Commission bulletins 60 cents per hundred pounds, formerly 50 cents, and specifies the American and National Express Companies.



Mengham & Westwood have the decoration for an elaborate wedding at Sherry's, December 10. These gentlemen were at one time on the Thorley staff.

Thanksgiving session Riley won the prize turkey, with a total of 186, while Paul Dailledouze corralled the big rooster, with 165. This is a bowling club that has existed for over twenty years.

Will Rickards has been discharged from jury duty. Frank Duggan has recovered from a week's severe illness and Al is making his usual fall trips.

The poinsettias are asserting their decorative ability in brilliant window decorations this week, and beautiful they are in plant and flower. In their setting of the new decorative ferns, they produce a charming and enticing effect.

The Cut Flower Exchange has ruled it wise not to open the market in the Coogan building before 7 a. m., until March 1.

December 8 saw the end of a long and successful auction season. William Elliott and Ambrose Cleary deserve the rest their bronchial endurance demands.

A fire in the building at 42 West Twenty-eighth street, Sunday, December 6, did much damage above J. B. Nugent, Jr., and James McManus. Mr. Nugent, who leases the whole building, escaped completely, and a water baptism and the drop in the office ceiling covers Mr. McManus' casualties. Business was not interfered with and Christmas preparations go on apace.

Samuel A. Woodrow has a branch plant store at 110 West Twenty-eighth street for the holidays. Mr. Woodrow has built up a wide trade and his ambition points to further growth in the future.

J. K. Allen will dispense a big stock of poinsettias in pans and cut for Christmas. Mr. Allen celebrates his twenty-first birthday this month as a wholesale cut flower man.

Arthur T. Boddington has just completed a handsome suite of offices and now everything is thoroughly up to date. Mr. Bunyard has been busy for weeks on the new catalogue, but will soon start on his annual visit to his customers.

David Clarke's Sons are celebrating the fifty-ninth year of the firm's existence. The big store is already in holiday attire.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., was in the city December 7.

A. L. Young & Co. are sending out some unique Christmas advertising, as usual.

H. E. Froment says he will have a tremendous supply of roses for the holidays, especially Beauties.

Plant Association.

The annual meeting of the New York & New Jersey Association of Plant Growers was held Tuesday evening, December 1, at the office of the secretary, 277 Broadway. The following officers were elected and installed for the coming year: President, Julius Roehrs, Jr., Rutherford, N. J.; vice-president, A. L. Miller, Brooklyn, N. Y.; treasurer, Herman C. Steinhoff, West Hoboken, N. J.; secretary, William H. Siebrecht, Jr., New York. The directors are: John Scott, Brooklyn, Herman Schoelzel, New Durham, N. J.; Anton Schultheis, College Point, L. I.; Julius Roehrs, Sr., Rutherford, N. J.; Louis Dupuy, Whitestone, L. I.; Alfred Winnefeld, Hackensack, N. J.

Among the other business transacted in the course of the meeting, a committee of three was appointed, with full power to make arrangements for a banquet to be given by the association during the month of January, 1909. The committee consists of A. L. Miller, John Scott and Herman Schoelzel, and, judging from the results of the efforts of these gentlemen, who also acted upon the committee which arranged the association's clam-bake last September, it is expected that this banquet will be a grand affair.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Reports vary concerning last week's business. With some it seems to have been unusually satisfactory. Coming-out parties have started, and will keep things lively for some of the stores for several months.

Carnations commenced to pile up the latter part of the week, but this is only temporary. With the mums just about gone and the holidays near at hand, stock of all kinds will soon be scarce. Let us hope that the growers will not start pickling stock. There is nothing that so hurts the retail business as does pickled stock.

Some large orders have already been placed for holly and ground pine and there is every indication that we will have a regular old-time Christmas.

Club Meeting.

Those members of the club who failed to attend the last regular meeting, on the evening of December 2, missed what was no doubt the most spirited meeting ever held.

In the first place, the secretary, on behalf of the members, presented ex-President Scribner with a watch-chain and charm, not only in remembrance of his good service while in the chair, but ever since the club was started. Mr. Scribner has been one of the most enthusiastic members, failing to attend the meetings only when sickness prevented.

It was left to a committee of three, Messrs. Sullivan, Danzer and Plumb, to look up suitable new quarters and report at the next meeting, when, if such quarters can be obtained at a reasonable price, the moving question will be brought to a vote.

The subject of the evening was a debate between Messrs. Dilger and Sullivan, "Should the Grower Sell to the Department Stores?"

Mr. Dilger argued that the more flowers seen upon the street corners and in the stores, the greater would become the demand for our product. As an illustration, he pointed to the street cars, saying that before we could ride everywhere we never thought about it, but now that there are car lines on nearly all streets, we must have them. Mr. Dilger also averred that the question of disposing of surplus stock is becoming more and more serious. He also stated that there are times when some grower is in immediate need of some cash and the cash offers made by some of the fakers or department stores are very tempting.

Mr. Sullivan's argument was against the general principle of encouraging the street faker and the cheap sales indulged in by the stores mainly to advertise their other wares. He said that flowers should be in the same class as the fine paintings and statuary by our famous artists, and should not be peddled away below the cost of production by fakers who did not even know the names of the wares they were handling.

To make a long story short, the three branches of our profession were represented (grower, commission-man and retailer), each arguing that the other fellow was making all the money.

Various Notes.

The Bemb Floral Co. has recently installed a fine cash register.

W. B. Brown is well pleased with his new heating system. Steam is received from the Central Heating Co., thereby doing away with all ashes, dirt and night firing.

E. A. Fetters is well pleased with business so far. He admits that it will take some time to become established, but he has already had some nice orders.

Mrs. C. H. Maynard and Mrs. Wm. Dilger left for Fort Wayne, Ind., on the morning of December 8, to confer with Mrs. W. J. Vesey, president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists. They expect to be gone for several days.

VEGETABLES FOR CHRISTMAS.

Radishes and Lettuce.

The vegetable growers in the vicinity of Chicago are now making ready for the holiday harvest of radishes and lettuce. A few growers had some cucumber vines which continued to bear in the fall, but the fall cucumber crop has been, as usual, a disappointment. The diseases seem to have been more disastrous this fall than ever, and many of the growers have been so completely discouraged that they have stated that they will never again try to grow cucumbers in the fall and early winter.

The majority of the vegetable growers grow lettuce and radishes in the fall and early part of winter, and cucumbers in late winter and spring, when the sun gets higher and conditions generally are more favorable. They say that while the profit on lettuce is not large, it is as good as cucumbers at that time of year, when it is so difficult to grow a paying crop of the latter.

When to Plant Radish Seed.

It is true that radishes are sometimes ready to sell within a month of the date of planting the seed, but it takes fine weather and good care to bring them to salable size in that length of time. Then, too, they are wanted several days before Christmas, or whatever holiday it may be which is the occasion for the heavy demand and high prices. If sold through wholesale men or commission houses, as most growers market their produce, it requires time to get the vegetables to the consumer.

For instance, the housewife preparing a big dinner for December 25 will buy her supplies December 24, and the grocer who supplies her will want his supply in by December 22 or 23. The commission man, therefore, should have his rush December 21 and 22, with nothing doing after December 23. Therefore we should measure the weeks back from December 21 instead of December 25, and the grower who was wise enough to get his radish seed planted five or more weeks before that date will have better radishes and less worry in hurrying the crop along. Forcing a crop along, in order to hasten it a few days, is often the cause of more trouble from diseases than is any other act of mismanagement. It is always easier to hold a crop back a week or more than to hurry it along that much.

The Favorite Variety.

Radish seed for forcing in greenhouses should be the best obtainable. The Scarlet Globe Short Top Forcing is the general favorite and really the only type suitable for midwinter. It is a great mistake to try to use up a few pounds of old seed of some left-over stock. A few cents saved in this way will cost many dollars when it comes to counting up after the harvest. Buy the best and of the most reliable seedsmen. It is money well spent.

Radishes should always be sown in rows. Plant them about half an inch apart in well-prepared soil and, when sprouted, thin them out to about an inch or an inch and a quarter apart, selecting the weaker plants to pull up. The rows should be about four and one-half to five inches apart.

Except for the watering, no other work is necessary after the thinning out until they are ready to pull and bunch. They should be tied twelve in a bunch, washed, and set upon a bench with tops up, as they grow until ready to pack. The water will drain off and dry the leaves more quickly and they will be less liable to heat in the boxes if left a while before packing.

It requires about eight weeks from seed to make good, salable lettuce. The seed should be started in flats, once transplanted and planted out in the beds not later than Thanksgiving. Head lettuce requires about two weeks more time than the Grand Rapids variety.

The Right Temperature.

A night temperature of 45 degrees suits both radishes and lettuce nicely, with a rise of about 10 to 15 degrees in the daytime, depending on how bright the day is. Some growers run their houses at a lower temperature and some higher. The higher temperature is pardonable in some cases, but the lower the temperature the better the quality of the vegetables. There are many things to take into consideration in regard to the right temperature for different cases, but when in doubt as to which to use, it is always safer to take the lower temperature. Few greenhouse men keep their houses cool enough or properly ventilated.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Last week was a little better for cut flower trade. Funeral work is good, using up lots of short stock. Prices remain about the same as usual. Mums are nearing the end. This has been rather an unsatisfactory year for them in regard to prices.

E. Y. Peirce has a fine batch of Lorraine begonias, which sell well. His carnations and roses are looking well.

Ashley & Heuberger's place is in first-class shape. Their carnations are good.

From all appearances there will be a good supply of carnations for Christmas.

W. L.

NEW ORLEANS.

Outside of a few decorations for balls, and some funeral orders, business is dull. A long spell of dry weather, with a few light frosts, has given a dull appearance to our gardens, and it seems as if it will be only the return of spring that will bring a new life to the trade. Every place is full of stock in anticipation of a good demand when the season opens.

George Sanford, who grows a large number of different varieties of hardy plants, has a fine stock on hand. He grows them in such a quantity of different sizes that as soon as his ground is cleared up he replaces it with new stuff.

The Market.

Trade in this market has been about ordinary for the last week. Chrysanthemums have disappeared, so far as good stock is concerned. There are still a few small ones coming in, but they are not in much demand. Beauties and lilies have been quite plentiful, so that there has been no scarcity of long-stemmed flowers.

Carnations and roses are in good crop and there has been plenty of everything else, so there has been no complaint about shortage of stock.

Among the retail shops there has been more complaint, as they are not having the usual run of decorations; not many weddings and fewer debutante affairs. While the small trade keeps up pretty well, it does not amount to anything like the business they have been accustomed to do in December.

In the markets they have the same general complaint; trade has not the life.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met December 2, with a good attendance. President Burki called on the committee having charge of the gratuity for John Jones, and William Falconer presented Mr. Jones with a handsome traveling bag, containing a case of toilet articles. Mr. Jones accepted the gift in his usual modest way.

The subject for the evening was Christmas plants and novelties and there was a handsome display. Mr. Hutchinson, gardener for Dr. Schaffer, took first prize on Cypripedium insigne. Frank Crooks, gardener for J. H. Parks, received a certificate of merit for Dracæna Sanderiana. David Fraser, gardener for H. C. Frick, was first for poinsettia. James Weissman, gardener for D. M. Clemson, took first prize for Begonia Lorraine. Both Schenley and North Side park had displays of begonias and cyclamens which were exceptionally fine.

H. H. Wegley gave a talk on poinsettias, and told of some things he had seen in his travels.

E. C. Reinemann reported for those who had attended the national flower show.

Another field day was arranged for Thursday, December 10, when the club and its friends will visit the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., at Bakerstown.

Various Notes.

Fritz Ueberle has opened a store at 408 Federal street for the holidays, and it may be continued if it proves a success.

Joseph M. Jones has the sympathy of his many friends in the death of his father. Mr. Jones, Sr., was pretty well known by the trade, and died after only two days' illness. He was buried from the home of his son.

A. W. Smith has been fortunate in securing a vacant store which connects with the rear of his store and opens on Smithfield street. It gives him an entrance from two streets, with plenty of room to take care of his holiday trade.

William Cromack, of Irwin, Pa., has been on the sick list for several weeks, and is only able to be out of bed.

Visitors: Mr. Murchie, Jr., Sharon, Pa.; Arthur Langhans and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dixon, Wheeling, W. Va.; Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia. Hoo-Hoo.

PACIFIC COAST.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Henry Englehart and A. C. Stower of Glendora purchased forty acres of irrigated land in Cherry Valley for $5,650. They will establish a deciduous tree nursery and have ordered 50,000 young trees of different varieties. They will build two houses and expect to invest about $25,000.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is quiet at present. There has been hardly anything doing since Thanksgiving, and, from the indications now, it is the intention of the buying public to hold on to their spare ducats until a few days before Christmas.

The weather has turned colder and this has had the effect of making flowers scarcer than they have been at any time this fall. The outside mums, upon which the retailers place most of their trust at this season, were the first to become scarce. Following these were the roses, and now even carnations are short in crop. The prices, however, do not show much advance; probably twenty per cent in the last two weeks will about cover it. Should there be any revival of business, however, we can look for higher rates on short notice.

Outside stock has practically disappeared, with the exception of mums. A few narcissi, also, are seen in the shops. Violets have advanced slightly in price and continue to sell better than anything else in the florists' line. Red berries are seen everywhere and, with the advent of a few days' frost, the quality of them has increased wonderfully. Considerable Oregon grape is being sent into town from Oregon and bids fair to be more popular than ever as a decorative material.

Over in Oakland and Alameda the retailers have the same complaint to make about the quality and quantity of trade. Everyone, however, appears to be sanguine regarding the business that will be done within the next few weeks.

Various Notes.

J. M. Wiesel, representing the Barteldes Seed Co., of Denver, Colo., is in town, visiting the local seedsmen.

Gerard Meyer has sold his interest in the Holland Nursery Co., of Elmhurst, to the surviving partners, G. A. Van Linge and J. M. Noordink.

The store of H. M. Sanborn, on Fourteenth street, Oakland, was burglarized on the evening of November 29. The place was thoroughly ransacked, but nothing of value was taken.

Charles Stoppenback is receiving some fine orchids from John Martin, of Ross Station.

James Munro, gardener to Emery Win-ship, of San Rafael, has earned quite a reputation as a piper among the gardening fraternity in his neighborhood. G.

CALIFORNIA RED BERRIES.

Whenever the winter frosts first make their appearance on the Pacific coast, the California red berry, Heteromeles arbutifolia, takes on sufficient color to make it an object sought for by the buying public. Up to Thanksgiving the weather with us had been very mild, and what few berries were seen were neither bright nor glossy enough, but since then a few nights' frost in the mountains has colored them well.

It is surprising how many tons of these are sold in San Francisco every day. One firm alone, that handles green goods only, distributes about twenty tons weekly to the various florists. There are many commission houses dealing in them also, and this bids fair to be a banner year in the amount brought into town.

These berries are indigenous to the entire central and northern portions of California. They grow best in localities situated somewhat back from the ocean breezes, and attain the largest size where there is plenty of water to keep them in a growing condition throughout the summer. The berries that grow near the coast are of smaller size and less highly colored, and if there has been much foggy weather they turn a disagreeable shade of red, which renders them unfit for selling. The constant cutting of the best quality has made them scarce in places that are easy of access and the pickers have to keep going farther away each year from the haunts of civilization in quest of salable bunches. The trees are of rather slow growth and, when thoroughly denuded, do not bear again heavily for several years.

The berries are cut with stems about eighteen inches long and packed in crates, care being taken that they are not packed too wet or too tightly. When sold in the San Francisco markets, they net the growers about $50 per ton. The retailers usually pay about twice the price, allowing the middlemen and the transportation companies to have the balance.

The land on which they grow is usually devoted to grazing or to timber culture, and many thousands of dollars are distributed among the country people weekly during the months of December, January and February, by the wholesale dealers in green goods. G.

WELLSVILLE, O.—W. A. Herbert says business has improved greatly in the last month.

Things to Forget

If you see a tall fellow ahead of a crowd,
A leader of men, marching fearless and proud,
And you know of a tale, whose mere telling aloud
Would cause his proud head to in anguish be bowed,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a skeleton hidden away
In a closet, and guarded, and kept from the day
In the dark; and whose showing, whose sudden display,
Would cause grief and sorrow and life-long dismay,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a thing that will darken the joy
Of a man, or a woman, a girl or a boy,
That will wipe out a smile, or the least way annoy
A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

LEONARD SEED CO., Chicago, has opened a branch store at 11033 Michigan avenue, Chicago.

AFTER January 1 we shall have 2-cent postage to Germany, as we now have with England.

ONION seed of the dependable sort is holding itself well up against the cheap article. The buyer uses the cheap price for a club, but his good judgment leads him finally to the higher priced stock.

LATEST reports have it that onion sets are advanced about 25 cents per bushel. The holdings are now for the most part in the hands of the final distributors and it is easier to keep tab on the situation.

MARKET garden trade promises to be large. The market prices of vegetables that are held from spring delivery are reported to be advancing. The gardener who realizes good prices for his stored stock through the winter is usually willing to give a good sized seed order.

THERE seems to be some indecision as to what prices should go into the retail catalogues. The "high class" seedsmen, who are no doubt in the large majority, have to keep in mind the probable prices of the other kind, and until necessity compels, or a stiffening of backbone leads them to go in regardless, they hold off and wonder.

PEAS are still in demand and the high prices do not deter the buyer from placing orders. The deliveries are for the most part made and the hopes of the buyer that somehow or other he would get more than the percentage at first reported to him has ceased to be a factor. He knows his shortage and is trying to cover at as good terms as possible.

THE bean situation has cleared itself, according to reports. Green podded sorts are likely to stand at last year's prices, with few exceptions. Some of the wax podded sorts are reported scarce, but not enough so to make prices higher than last year. Beans are likely to be in good demand when planting time arrives. The feeling that there would be an oversupply is not as marked as it was and the short placing of advance orders will make it necessary to add beans to the usual fill-in orders.

SLUIS SEED STORE, Chicago, is a new firm making a bid for the market garden trade southwest of the city. The location is 644 West Sixty-third street, and the proprietors are N. Sluis, his brother, John Sluis, and their nephew, James Sluis.

THE seed trade is practically unanimous in endorsing the idea of specific rather than ad valorem duties, and there is reasonable prospect of the change being made. It looks as though the Ways and Means committee, now engaged in drafting a new tariff bill, would welcome an opportunity to do something to the present schedules, providing it does not involve radical change in rates.

SECRETARY JAMES WILSON, of the Department of Agriculture, is said to be highly pleased with the results of the work of the Department in securing and testing samples of grass seeds, in accordance with the act of Congress providing for such tests. It is said the publication of unfavorable results has caused adulteration of forage plant seeds practically to cease, except in the case of Kentucky blue grass and orchard grass, many adulterated lots of which still are found.

GRASS SEEDS.

In a quotation dated November 12, Conrad Appel, Darmstadt, Germany, says: "As already stated in my crop report, this year's harvest of nearly all grass seeds was very short, and already stocks of some sorts begin to become scarce. Since the beginning of the season prices have gone up steadily, and further rises can be expected."

As to Poa pratensis, the smooth-stalked meadow grass, he says: "The first shipments from America are now coming in to be dressed and graded. With regard to this sort I beg to mention that also this year it was very difficult, owing to the known inaccuracy of the American contractors, to get true guaranteed pure new seed.

"Concerning the clover seeds, it is not yet possible to give a correct report on

PLACE TO BUY SEEDS.

From a Grower's Point of View.

I have read with interest your quotation from the Rural New-Yorker, with comment, in the REVIEW of November 12, under the caption of ''Place to Buy Seeds.''

The present writer has been for twenty years an extensive grower of vegetables, and for the last five years a grower of seeds, and we think we are in a position to write on this subject with at least a degree of intelligence.

From our viewpoint, the solution which the Rural New-Yorker gives to the vexing problem, ''Place to Buy Seeds,'' namely, ''dealing only with those firms who are most conservative in their statements and have a reputation for fair dealing,'' fails to meet the case in question.

Let it be known here that, by ''firms,'' reference is made to seed houses.

The loss to the planter from bad seed is the exception, not the rule, and it is this occasional loss that the planter has to guard against.

Now, it was our experience as planters that we had this occasional loss while dealing with seed dealers who had a reputation for fair dealing. We were driven to the conclusion, therefore, that the seed dealer had been imposed upon by the seed grower, and our experience as seed growers has confirmed this opinion.

It is natural and, we believe, justifiable for the seed dealer to buy seeds as cheaply as possible, and this fact furnishes the seed grower with the incentive to grow cheap seed, so as to be able to compete with his fellow seed grower in price. Thus the interests of the planter are lost sight of.

A seed grower bought culls—sprouted out onions—of the commission merchants of his city for 10 cents a sack, planted them and had a large crop of seed, which he sold for a large profit. But what

Hardy Roses and Ramblers

FOR FORCING

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well-ripened. Roses potted up in the Fall or late Winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard or force at your leisure. We recommend the American-grown ''Ramblers.'' Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are failures.

HARDY PERPETUAL ROSES

We offer extra strong forcing two-year-old dormant, low budded stock, in the following varieties, true to name:

Price, 75c for 5 (of one variety); $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. (Immediate delivery).

Alfred Colomb. Carmine.
Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.
Ball of Snow. Pure white.
Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson shaded.
Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy. Delicate flesh color.
Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermilion; very fine.
Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
FRAU KARL DRUSCHKI. The finest white in existence.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.
John Hopper. Beautiful rose-pink.
La France. The finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale-flesh center.
Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladiolus are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.

Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

Gladiolus, Colvillei and Nanus (type).

Plant some of these among your carnations; they will come in handy at any time.

Blushing Bride. Flowers are large, pure white, with delicate pink spot. Useful for early forcing. 85c per 100; $7.00 per 1000.

The Bride (Colvillei alba). This lovely white miniature Gladiolus makes a useful cut flower for early Spring use; will stand forcing. 75c per 100; $6.50 per 1000.

Peach Blossom. The most beautiful of all the Colvillei type of Gladiolus; the color is a lovely soft pink, on the order of the Killarney rose. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.

Ackermanii. Salmon-orange, with white blotches, edged scarlet; very pretty. 85c per 100; $7.50 per 1000 variety of onions would this seed produce? Anything, everything. Ohio Yellow Globe? Yes. Southport Yellow Globe? Yes. Globe Danvers? Yes. Flat Danvers? Yes. Strasburg or Flat Dutch? Yes. Anything or everything that was yellow. The seed grower had his profit on this seed; the seed dealer, who bought it for some specific variety, had his profit, but the planter, who had a market for some particular variety, had to stand the loss.

This instance, with many others of like character that have come under our observation, makes us wonder that the planter gets good seed as often as he does, and leads to the conclusion that the planter has a right to know, and should insist on knowing when, where and by whom the seed he orders is grown. And the seed dealer who evades or refuses to answer such inquiry, or to put his answer in writing if asked to do so, is not entitled to the confidence of the planter. R. W. Laughlin.

OPERA BOUFFE GRASS.

Hommo Ten Have is the somewhat unusual name of a seed merchant and contract grower at Westerlee, Holland. Possibly to heighten the opera bouffe effect of his patronymic, he offers the trade a new forage grass under the name Lolium Western Woldicum, or Western Wolths grass. Of this he says:

"This new grass was discovered in the County of Westerwolde, near the German frontier, growing on poor, sandy soil. Its value was first demonstrated by a laborer who took measures to have it grown separately from other sorts. The agricultural world owes this humble man a debt of gratitude for the introduction of this valuable plant, and there is little doubt that if it had come into the possession of a more influential agriculturist it would, ere this, have been more widely known and cultivated.

"In appearance the seed cannot be distinguished from Italian ryegrass, but Western Wolths grass is strictly an annual plant, whereas Italian ryegrass may remain in the soil for two or three years. It far surpasses Italian in the rapidity of its growth and weight of herbage. On good soils when topdressed with nitrate of soda it may be cut five or six times during a single summer.

"It will thrive on almost all soils, but the best results have been had on heavy loam, clay, or land of a somewhat damp character. For one year's hay or pasture this grass, when mixed with red clover, can be highly recommended. Many farmers in Holland are sowing it in proximity to their farm buildings, to

The Crego Aster

"The Best in the Market"

After having demonstrated, by actual competition in the open market, that it has fully earned its title as "The Best in the Market," the CREGO ASTER is again offered to the trade, with the positive assurance that it has "made good."

A SATISFIED GROWER

Near St. Paul, Minn., writes under date of September 15th:

"The germination of the seed purchased from you last spring was the best I ever saw, apparently every seed producing a plant. I gave the best possible cultivation and saw the results about the first of September, when they commenced to bloom. They were perfectly magnificent. At our annual flower show I entered the CREGO ASTER in seven different classes, and took the first prize in every instance. My asters were in a class by themselves, and a local florist, who was one of the judges, said they were the finest he had ever seen, and he offered to buy my crop at from $5.00 to $7.00 per 100."

NEW CROP SEED

Grown in the rich soil, temperate climate and long season of Oregon, will do as well in the hands of any good, careful grower. While very short in quantity, this new seed is decidedly "long" in quality and vitality, and will produce a big crop of dollars for the florist whose business eye-sight is sharp enough to recognize a good thing when it is offered to him. Orders are coming in already, and those who order early will run the least risk of being disappointed.

In colors I offer White, Shell-pink and Rose-pink.

PRICES:—Trade packet, $1.00; Half ounce, $4.50; Ounce, $8.00.

LIFE OF SEEDS.

Experiments are in progress, according to the Gardeners' Magazine, for testing the longevity of seeds. A given number of seeds of certain plants are buried in a jar each year, and at stated intervals these will be uncovered, and some tested for germinating power, and the rest put back for further tests. Speaking broadly, the limit of the germinating power of the commoner garden seeds, in years, is as follows: Asparagus, 6; bean, 3; beet, 6; borecole, 6; broccoli, 6; cabbage, 7; cardoon, 8; carrot, 4 or 6; cauliflower, 6; celery, 7; chervil, 3; chicory, 8; cress, 5; cucumber, 9; endive, 10; gourds, fancy, 6; kohlrabi, 5; leek, 4; lettuce, 5; melon, 7; mustard, black, 4; mustard, white, 4; onion, 2; parsnip, 2; parsley, 3; pea, garden, 3; pumpkin, 6; radish, 5; rhubarb, 3; sage, 3; salsify, 2; seakale, 2; spinach, 5; thyme, 3; tomato, 4; turnip, 5; vegetable marrow, 6.

Ironton, O.—Weber Bros. say that business was not first-class during the first part of this year, as demand was rather slow. When the chrysanthemum season began, however, trade became lively.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—The residence of A. A. Pantet, florist and alderman, was set afire on the evening of November 25, by flying embers from the burning warehouse of the Fort Smith Cotton Oil Co. The report does not state how much Mr. Pantet's home was damaged, but it appears that the fire department succeeded in saving it from destruction, though the warehouse was reduced to ruins. Ten freight cars and some other property were also burned.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE Davenport Nursery Co., Davenport, Ia., has rented a downtown store for December to sell Christmas trees.

A. M. KLEMM is known as the father of the citrus fruit growing industry at Winter Haven, Fla. He started his nursery there sixteen years ago and now has 120 acres in use. He formerly was a florist in New York and Washington.

THE offices of the Wooster Nursery Co., Wooster, O., will be changed, in the near future, to the building on the farm recently purchased by T. E. Ewing, near that city. A Wooster store will be maintained by the company, however. A new greenhouse is being erected at the Ewing farm and will assist greatly in the work of the nursery.

RHODODENDRONS AND AZALEAS

Will you kindly tell me the proper distance apart to plant rhododendrons and Azalea mollis? F. T.

Everything depends on the size of the plants to be set out. If quite large specimens are used they may require as much as five to six feet each way. As a rule, rhododendrons averaging a foot and a half in height are used. It is better to plant these fairly close, say three and one-half feet each way, so that the tops will come rather close together and make a natural shade for the soil. The general plan is to plant in this way and thin out before they become too crowded. Of course, the ground must be well mulched all the time, to keep the roots cool and moist.

Azalea mollis, being a much slower grower than the rhododendrons, should be planted closer. In the case of such stock as is usually imported or sent out from the nurseries, the plants can stand two feet apart each way for a year or two, removing every other one when they begin to crowd. C. W.

LEAD CIVIC IMPROVEMENT.

Nurserymen should lead by beautifying their own premises, by planting various kinds of trees, evergreens and perennial flowering plants, properly put out; and nurserymen should know how to do this, and where certain trees, etc., will suit best. When once done it is permanent, and a big advertisement for the nurseryman.

To illustrate: A new public highway was opened up some 300 yards north of our headquarters, and our back way, so we had to open up a new road in that direction. Now, the new road opening up our back way was not a very interesting outlook, but we had to accept the situation. We planted the border in shade trees of various kinds, and on the banks of a fill we now have growing perennial flowers, such as sweet william,

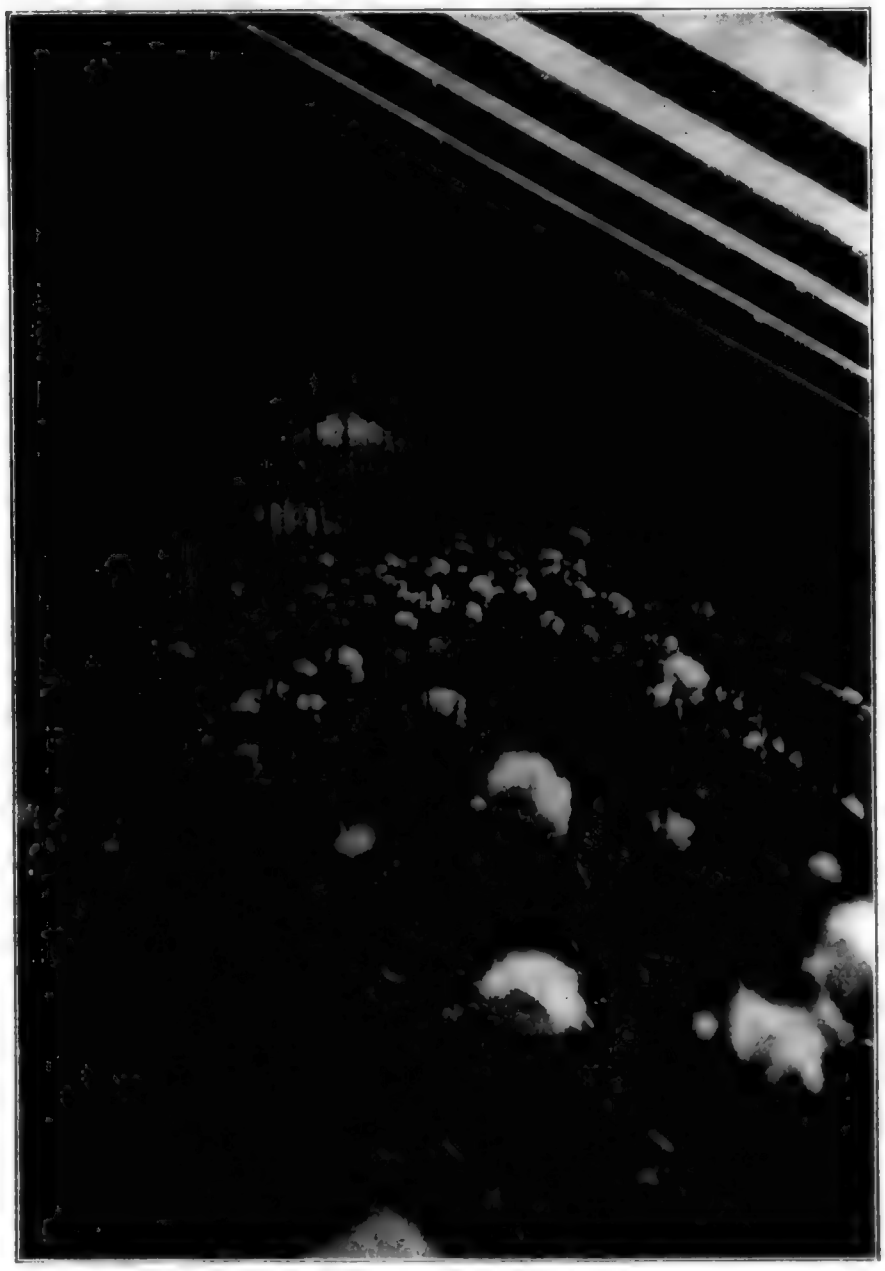
Description of Our New White Carnation

GEORGIA

The color of Georgia is a pure white with large and beautifully fringed flowers measuring as large as four inches, with a very full center, which gives it a good form.



The stem holds the flower up at all times, giving long stems early in the season, as we have a house in bloom where the stems at the present time, September 15, average 24 inches in length.

The growth is ideal, having the dark green cast that all growers like.

The plants are quick to recover after planting from the field and produce as many or more flowers than Enchantress.

It has stood the necessary test as to its shipping and keeping qualities and has been satisfactory in every case, although we have shipped it as far west as Missouri and as far south as Florida. It has been called by all who have seen it the finest white yet put on the market, as it is as wonderful in quantity as it is in quality.

$2.00 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000

golden wave, hollyhock, gaillardia, peonies, etc., and now our back way is more beautiful than our front, and more attention is paid to it by the public than any work we have ever done. The advertising it has done for us has more than paid the cost. The president of the American Civic Association, in his talk before the American Association of Nurserymen at Milwaukee, said that he had lately visited Greensboro, N. C., and that I had taken him out to our place; he stated, of course, by the front way, but he was mistaken in that, for I brought him up the back way, as it showed up better than the front.

Now look around your premises, your nearby highways, and if nature has not done her work to satisfy your eye, and that of the public, then assist nature until you are pleased with the result. While it will cost some money, yet it will be a big ad for you.

Our nearby city, Greensboro, N. C., has a Civic League or improvement society which has been in operation about three years. They see that all parts of the city are cleaned up, and any law that they see is needed for their work, they go before the aldermen and have it passed. They offered a premium of $25 for the best kept cottage yard, $15 for the second best, and $10 for the third best. That stimulated a rivalry, and improvement began on every hand. Every vacant lot is being cleaned up and beautified, instead of being an eyesore to the town, and now the town looks as if it were on dress parade all the time.

So, brother nurserymen, you can and ought to lead in this all-important civic improvement. Increase your ornamentals of all kinds, and use to advantage in thus beautifying your homes, highways and general surroundings. I do not pretend to tell you what to plant, but plant things that thrive well in your immediate locality and which naturally suggest themselves. J. VAN LINDLEY.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE Davenport Nursery Co., Davenport, Ia., has rented a downtown store for December to sell Christmas trees.

A. M. KLEMM is known as the father of the citrus fruit growing industry at Winter Haven, Fla. He started his nursery there sixteen years ago and now has 120 acres in use. He formerly was a florist in New York and Washington.

THE offices of the Wooster Nursery Co., Wooster, O., will be changed, in the near future, to the building on the farm recently purchased by T. E. Ewing, near that city. A Wooster store will be maintained by the company, however. A new greenhouse is being erected at the Ewing farm and will assist greatly in the work of the nursery.

RHODODENDRONS AND AZALEAS

Will you kindly tell me the proper distance apart to plant rhododendrons and Azalea mollis? F. T.

Everything depends on the size of the plants to be set out. If quite large specimens are used they may require as much as five to six feet each way. As a rule, rhododendrons averaging a foot and a half in height are used. It is better to plant these fairly close, say three and one-half feet each way, so that the tops will come rather close together and make a natural shade for the soil. The general plan is to plant in this way and thin out before they become too crowded. Of course, the ground must be well mulched all the time, to keep the roots cool and moist.

Azalea mollis, being a much slower grower than the rhododendrons, should be planted closer. In the case of such stock as is usually imported or sent out from the nurseries, the plants can stand two feet apart each way for a year or two, removing every other one when they begin to crowd. C. W.

LEAD CIVIC IMPROVEMENT.

Nurserymen should lead by beautifying their own premises, by planting various kinds of trees, evergreens and perennial flowering plants, properly put out; and nurserymen should know how to do this, and where certain trees, etc., will suit best. When once done it is permanent, and a big advertisement for the nurseryman.

To illustrate: A new public highway was opened up some 300 yards north of our headquarters, and our back way, so we had to open up a new road in that direction. Now, the new road opening up our back way was not a very interesting outlook, but we had to accept the situation. We planted the border in shade trees of various kinds, and on the banks of a fill we now have growing perennial flowers, such as sweet william,

you get stock of the variety exhibited by us and the Waban Rose Conservatories this fall, which was awarded the silver cup at the National Flower Show at Chicago; silver medal, Horticultural Society, New York, and silver medal, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston. It undoubtedly is the best white rose ever introduced

Our attention was called to this rose last winter and, recognizing its great value as soon as we saw it, we purchased half the stock. We are growing it in large quantities in our Scarborough greenhouses, and will be glad to have anyone interested in it visit us and see it growing. The large growers, instantly recognizing its value, have placed orders for large quantities, so that our advance orders are very large, and the demand promises to be very heavy, judging by the number of orders already booked; but we have enough stock, either potted or rooted, to fill advance orders, so that we can still promise early delivery and first-class stock on all orders received now.

Orders will be filled in rotation as booked, delivery beginning March 1st, 1909. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, own root, $30.00 per 100; 250 for $70.00; 500 for $125.00; 1000 for $250.00. Grafted plants, $5.00 per 100 additional.

The Market.

Trade last week was fair, funeral work being the most called for. As many cut flowers were on the market, the trade used a large quantity. Last Saturday brought out many more and they sold slowly. Roses are abundant. Carnations are arriving in large quantities and the prospects are for an immense cut for Christmas. Chrysanthemums are still dragging on, but the stock looks as though their time had come. Christmas is near at hand and the trade is looking forward to making up larger quantities of dry flowers than last year, as immortelles are so much cheaper.

Maryland Horticultural Show.

The eleventh annual meeting and show of the Maryland Horticultural Society, combined with the Maryland Corn Breeders' Association, were held at the Fifth Regiment armory on Tuesday, December 1 and 2. The show was one of the most successful yet held. The exhibits were far superior to those of any previous shows. There were visitors from far and near. Quite a few out-of-town florists were there. The Horticultural Society had 2,000 exhibitors and the Maryland Corn Breeders' Association had 214 corn exhibitors. The armory has a floor space of 60,000 square feet, which was transformed into a sea of blossoms and fruit.

State Pathologist J. B. S. Norton, State Horticulturist C. P. Close and State Entomologist T. B. Symons told what had been accomplished during the last year in their departments. The following were elected to constitute the executive board of the society for the coming year: President, W. M. Brown, Oakland, Md.; vice-president, Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh; secretary and treasurer, C. P. Close, College Park; county vice-presidents, Isaac H. Moss and E. A. Seidewitz. C. L. Seybold was elected vice-president for the city of Baltimore.

WHITE KILLARNEY AND MY MARYLAND

After careful investigation, having become satisfied that the Waban Strain of White Killarney is superior to anything now in the market, we have withdrawn our Sport and will not propagate it at all. We have made arrangements with the Waban Rose Conservatories to procure an abundant supply of their stock and will propagate only from that. This we offer for delivery after Feb. 15, 1909, at the following prices:

MAY DAY

"We desire to call the attention of the trade to our seedling carnation, May Day. We have been growing this variety at our place for the past five seasons, and only within the last few days have we decided to disseminate it.

"It is a deep satin pink, indescribably bright, and holds its color admirably under all conditions. Stem is good, calyx all one could desire. Its freedom is unexcelled by any variety, it being no unusual thing to be able to count from 20 to 25 flowering shoots on one plant at a time. Its habit of growth is perfect.

"We have grown this variety in quantities for the past three years for its flowers and find the demand for it much greater among our customers than for the well known variety Enchantress. We attribute this to its charming and exquisite shade of color and to its remarkable keeping qualities."

Prices, per 100, $12.00; per 1000, $100.00; 2500, $95.00 per 1000; 5000, $90.00 per 1000. To be disseminated early in 1909.

We endorse Mr. Grave's description; the variety has a splendid habit, a good stem, strong calyx, and we know of nothing freer, while in color it is unapproachable, that soft, brilliant shade universally admired; besides this, it is one of the finest keepers we have ever handled.

Orders booked now, and filled in rotation.

Florists attending the Indianapolis meeting of the American Carnation Society are invited to stop at Richmond and see the variety growing.

TWO GRAND NEW ROSES Every Grower Needs

MY MARYLAND

The greatest pink rose grown today. Many growers think it will displace Killarney. It is free from mildew at all times. Fine shaped bud; firm, full, free. Easiest grown rose in cultivation.

2½-in. pots, $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Delivery, January 1 to March 1, 1909.

WHITE KILLARNEY, Waban Variety

A sport from the Pink Killarney, and identical in form and habit, differing only in its pure white color. It has been carefully grown and only the very best wood selected for propagating; the result is seen in the remarkable vigor of our growers' plants.

READY IN JANUARY

Twenty years ago (1888) we began the cross-fertilization of Chrysanthemums, and the spring of 1890 we sent out our first novelty.

Each subsequent year our new ones have taken a prominent place among the world's product. Our Novelties for 1909 show still greater advancement.

We have everything to supply the commercial grower, including Single, Anemone and Pompons.

The exhibition sections are by no means neglected.

We can supply all the Wells-Pocket set, and, having a large stock, our deliveries will be made in January.

We have the best of the new French sorts.

We have arranged to disseminate Alois Frey's new Anemones and Singles, which attracted universal attention at the National Flower Show.

In fact, there is nothing good in Mums we cannot supply.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

The business of Sawyer & Payne having grown rapidly, it was found expedient to organize a company to place them in a position to extend their operations. With this end in view the Jacksonville Floral Co. was organized, with the intention of rapidly adding to the number of greenhouses now in course of construction, and materially increasing the acreage of its nursery at Evergreen cemetery.

To further meet the demands of its business the company has secured quarters at 20 Laura street, which will be fitted up as a modern store, something that will be equal to anything in the south.

The company has for its president James H. Payne, whose entire time will be devoted to the business. H. L. Sawyer, vice-president, is a practical florist, designer and decorator. A. N. Duncan is secretary and landscape gardener. C. E. Heston is treasurer.

The new crested Scottii Fern Nephrolepis Scholzeli

This crested sport of Scottii will hold the same position to all the crested forms of Nephrolepis that Scottii now holds to the Boston. It is entirely distinct from all others and will become even more popular than its parent, with which it is identical in every way except that the pinnæ are subdivided, giving it a beautiful crested appearance.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal: closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

The Market.

A general improvement all along the line is noticeable on all sides, and the indications are that the holiday season of 1908 will prove more encouraging to many than that of a year ago. Nor will there be a scarcity of flowers—in this section, at least.

The New Van Bochove Range.

G. Van Bochove & Bro. have everything about their new range in the pink of condition. In fact, there never was a time in the history of this progressive and enterprising concern when things looked so well and prosperous as they do at present. With a full crop of Beauties in sight for Christmas, and their general stock of roses and carnations all that could possibly be desired, one need not wonder at the optimism pervading the establishment.

The old range of houses is no more. The land has been cleared and will soon form a part of a rapidly growing residential district. About a mile farther up the road, upon a thirty-acre strip of land that is ideal for the purpose, there stands their new range, built within the last four years, consisting of fifteen modern houses and comprising about 100,000 feet of glass. It is a modern establishment in every sense of the word, and one well worth seeing.

Their new store, at 130 Burdic street, is perhaps the first up-to-date florist's store ever opened at Kalamazoo. In location—at the very heart of the business center—as well as in its general equipment, it will compare most favorably with the best stores of the kind in the country.

S.

SOMERSWORTH, N. H.—G. S. Ramsburg is planning for the reconstruction of his buildings, which were burned a short time ago. He will also erect a large extension to his plant.

YELLOW SPRINGS, O.—Howard Brown has erected a greenhouse on Dayton street and has begun business there. Mr. Brown was employed in a greenhouse in Springfield, O., for many years.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The recent cold snap has shortened up the cuts considerably and good stock is not very plentiful. Beauties have had the call this week. The only mums left are Nonin. This is the best late white grown here. From present orders for stock booked by some of the larger growers, there will be plenty to go around next season. They readily bring $6 per dozen at retail. Violets sell well. Some fine Virginian stock has been coming in this week.

Club Meeting.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, had his new begonia, President Taft, on exhibition at the last club meeting. It was much admired and showed to good advantage, as the plant arrived in perfect condition.

An invitation was received from the Baltimore club to attend the show of the State Horticultural Society. Wm. F. Gude and Geo. Cooke were the judges at this show.

Edward S. Schmidt, son of the supply man, was elected a member of the club.

Israel Rosnosky, of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, was present and spoke of the good prospects of a prosperous season all through the south, having just returned from a southern trip.

Various Notes.

J. H. Small & Sons had the Ferguson-Lock home wedding decoration. The house was done with palms, asparagus and southern smilax. White roses and mums were used lavishly. This firm has the decoration for the Saint-Gaudens exhibit at the Corcoran Art Gallery. It will require about 100 cedar trees.

J. R. Freeman has a special carnation on sale.

The special envoy from the Chinese empire took the Belmont house. Geo. Cooke has kept it decorated with palms and cut flowers. Gude Bros. Co. decorated the legation for the special service to the new emperor.

The coming week will be a busy one. Quite a few large orders have been booked.

Jas. J. Harty, who left home several weeks ago, has not been heard from. Mrs. Harty, who tried to settle up his affairs, closed up shop Saturday and the firm is no more.

F. L. Atkins, of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., was a visitor this week.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the local club took place December 3, and even though special notices had been issued, calling attention to the annual election of officers, the attendance was not as great as it ought to have been.

Due to the enterprising entertainment committee, the treasurer's report showed a surplus for the past year, in spite of their liberal treats after each meeting.

The result of the elections was as follows: President, C. Dallwig; secretary, M. P. Vallier, reëlected; vice-president, G. Rusch; treasurer, J. G. Heitman; trustee for three years, G. Baerman.

In electing Mr. Dallwig for president, the club showed its appreciation of the interest he took in the club's affairs and the faithful way he served three years as secretary and two years as treasurer. Although he belongs to the younger element, he is a man who thinks much and says little, and then, when he expresses his well worded opinions, he commands the attention of his listeners. He is associated with W. E. Dallwig, at 34 Juneau avenue.

G. Rusch, the vice-president, is a very active member and has served the club faithfully in the past.

Various Notes.

A number of enterprising La Crosse, Wis., florists are about to organize a florists' club, and to this end John C. Spalinger, of that city, has asked for a copy of the constitution and by-laws of our local club.

John Nolan, the Boston landscape architect, arrived December 1, to look over the city and to address the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association on the subject of city planning. He also spoke of city approaches, the water front of Milwaukee, streets, play grounds, parks and boulevards, illustrating these with lantern slide views.

A fire visited the establishment of Schneck & Bliese, Waukesha, Wis., on the Saturday night after Thanksgiving and wiped out the whole shed adjoining the north side of their two old greenhouses, putting these houses out of commission for some time and damaging all stock therein. E. O.

The Market.

Business last week was good. Stock in nearly all lines moved well. Mums are about gone. Some few may still be seen in the downtown stores, but a week or two more will finish them up. Quantities of carnations were cut half open last week, to supply the demand. There are plenty of roses at present, and they move fairly well.

Violets sell well, but the quality is not first-class yet. Some stevia and sweet peas are now on the market. Narcissi, callas and Roman hyacinths are used in funeral work. Green goods are plentiful, with the exception of smilax.

Various Notes.

Ed. Crowder is now with J. A. Keller, at the greenhouses on Sixth street.

S. S. Kelley has a house of good carnations and a fine batch of callas. He also has a good lot of stevia. Mr. Kelley is the only florist here who grows stevia and he finds a good demand for it.

The Michler Bros. Co. has a good bench of poinsettias that will be about right for Christmas.

William Bell has a good out-of-town trade and does a good deal of funeral work.

Anderson & White are busy propagating geraniums and other spring stock. This firm does a big business in spring plants, setting out thousands of plants every spring in the cemeteries.

Another greenhouse is being built at the State University, adjoining the Horticultural building. The university now has several greenhouses on the grounds.

J. A. Keller will have some good azaleas and cyclamens for Christmas and the holidays.

August Leclere, the florist and landscape gardener at the asylum on Fourth street, is busy with outside work. Joe Leclere, his son, is now located in Versailles, Ky.

Lucien Leclere has been shipping some nice cut flowers and plants out of town. He also received a good lot of stuff from Tennessee last week. BLUE GRASS.

ORCHIDS

FRESHLY IMPORTED

CATTLEYA GIGAS SANDERIANA in perfect condition. Also C. BOGOTENSIS. A limited number left from previous importation of Cattleya Gigas (Hardyana type). No finer plants can be had anywhere than the above; besides, the types will surpass anything in the market.

ESTABLISHED ORCHIDS. Of these we have large quantities in fine shape. A large number of Cattleya Percivaliana are now in sheath and will bloom throughout December.

Order your plants now for Christmas blooming.

PREPARE FOR CHRISTMAS

Look at this photo! See what Godfrey Aschmann, the Araucaria King, will do to favor his customers. He wants to make you a Christmas present and for the holiday trade he will charge you only half price on his Araucarias, and, as in photo, when the tree is cut its branches will sob and droop, so shall his prices when slaughtered one half.

Can't be Helped, down they go. Why, we have houses full of the choicest and lead the country in Araucarias. Have been in the lead in the past and am in the lead now and shall be in the lead in the future.

He is Boss. Who is Boss? The man that makes a specialty of a certain thing and can give you 100 per cent more in value is boss. Don't you believe this? If not, make the experiment. Try somewhere else and be convinced of facts and see what an immense bargain is offered to you in our specialty, that so well-known and admired decorative novelty Araucaria Excelsa. To make it possible for everybody to buy one of this evergreen Christmas novelty to glitter in their houses for Christmas, we decided to cut the prices in half, so low that it will beat the world's record and people will say Godfrey Aschmann must have lost his reason. He will quote you an Araucaria as big as an elephant, for 50c to 60c; a jumbo for 75c to $1.00 and a holy terror in size for $1.25 to $1.50.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Have the best in Philadelphia and can fill all orders. Remember that we also are headquarters for this much admired Christmas novelty. For the past five years we have made a careful study of this plant and under our Special Treatment we obtained such results that we are now able to offer to our patrons the Begonia Gloire de Lorraine of a highly improved type, with a rich, rosy color, which will stand well in either heated or cold rooms. They are partly in bloom now and will be in their full glory, in bloom, for Christmas and New Year's, and will keep until February and March. Will stand shipping well. The plants are all nicely staked with three green painted stakes and wrapped in tissue paper when packed for shipment. Shipped either in their original pots or in paper pots, as purchaser desires. Please advise. Prices: 5½-in., bushy, 50c; 6 to 6½-in., very large and bushy, 75c to $1.00 each; 7-in., $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Begonia, newest type of improved Erfordii, an immense bloomer for Christmas and all winter through, 4-in. pots, 15c; 5¼-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.

Begonia Rex, 5-in., 25c each. Only one, but best variety.

Primula Chinensis. Everybody looks for a Chinese Primrose at Christmas. We have a middle bench full of them and in better condition than ever before. In bud and bloom, just right for now and the holidays. John F. Rupp's best Improved Strain. Prices for 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, $2.50 to $3.00 per doz. Primula Obconica, in bloom, 4-in., 15c; (without bloom, 10c; will bloom later); 6-in. pots, full of buds and flowers, 25c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown. Remember, only pot-grown. Can successfully be forced for Easter blooming, nicely branched, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c to 50c.

Azalea Indica in Bloom for Christmas.

All our Christmas Azaleas are placed in cold houses as soon as they show color to harden off for shipment, and are in fine condition for Christmas.

Remember we have to select for Christmas forcing the strongest and healthiest plants. Small, weak plants will not force successfully for Christmas. We have Mme. Petrick, which is a new variety and very difficult to obtain in Belgium. Best and earliest of all the pinks and is a free bloomer. Have only large plants, 14, 16, 18 to 20 inches, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each.

Vervaeneana (large variegated double rose); Deutsche Perle (double white), Simon Mardner (large double pink), Apollo (red), 75 cents, $1.00, $1 25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Christmas varieties can also be kept for Easter. Azaleas for Easter Forcing. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Empress of India, Professeur Wolters, Apollo, De Schryveriana, Niobe, Andre alba, Dr. Moore, John Llewelyn, Helene Thelemann, Memoire de L. THE BALSAM-FLOWERED AZALEA.

There are several beautiful and useful azaleas that once received specific rank, but which now are regarded as well marked varieties of Azalea Indica. One of the distinct varieties is A. Indica balsaminæflora. It has also been known as Azalea Rollisoni because a firm of that name brought the plant into prominent notice, and, indeed, introduced it to general cultivation. Another name, and one that is still quite commonly used for this azalea, is A. rosæflora, according to the Gardeners' Magazine.

The two names—balsaminæflora and rosæflora—are both descriptive of the double, compact blooms that the plant so freely produces. The flowers are of medium size, finely doubled, and the margins of the petals recurve a little, so that each bloom has a neat appearance.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Dull trade the first week in December is usually expected in our line. It was rendered unusually dull for several days last week by the sudden cold wave, accompanied by a strong west wind. Roses are a little off crop, while the end of the mums is in sight, so that there has been no surplus of any moment.

Christmas trees and greens are already in the market, so that the city is beginning to put on its holiday appearance. Some orders are being booked and inquiries are being freely made. Another week will see the holiday business in full swing.

Various Notes.

L. L. May & Co. threw open their retail store to a church sale one day last week. Aprons in the show window and needlework on the counters looked strangely out of place with roses, carnations and violets.

Holm & Olson had two large decorations at the leading club last week. Southern smilax and mums constituted the bulk of the material.

President Wirth, of the State Florists' Association, announces that he has the plans ready for the proposed floral building at the State Fair grounds. The plans will be shown at the next meeting of the association, to be held in the new hall on Snelling avenue, near University, on Tuesday, December 15.

Cards received a few days ago announce the marriage of Otto A. Will, of Will Bros., Minneapolis, and Miss Florence Keeling, of Caldwell, Kan., December 2. His many friends in the trade extend hearty congratulations.

William Topel, formerly with R. A. Latham, Minneapolis, is in charge of a flower stand for Will Bros., in a local department store.

A. H. Bunde, one of the pioneers in the business here, has succeeded the Capital Floral Co., on Wabasha street.

Visitors last week were as follows: J. McHutchison, of New York; John Tegelaar and John Guldemond, of Lisse, Holland; T. Mellstrom, of New York, representing Sander & Son, of Bruges, Belgium, and St. Albans, England; P. H. Gerghegun, of Winterson's Seed Store, and Frank Johnson, of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

This is The Florists' Manual

By William Scott

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual." —J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

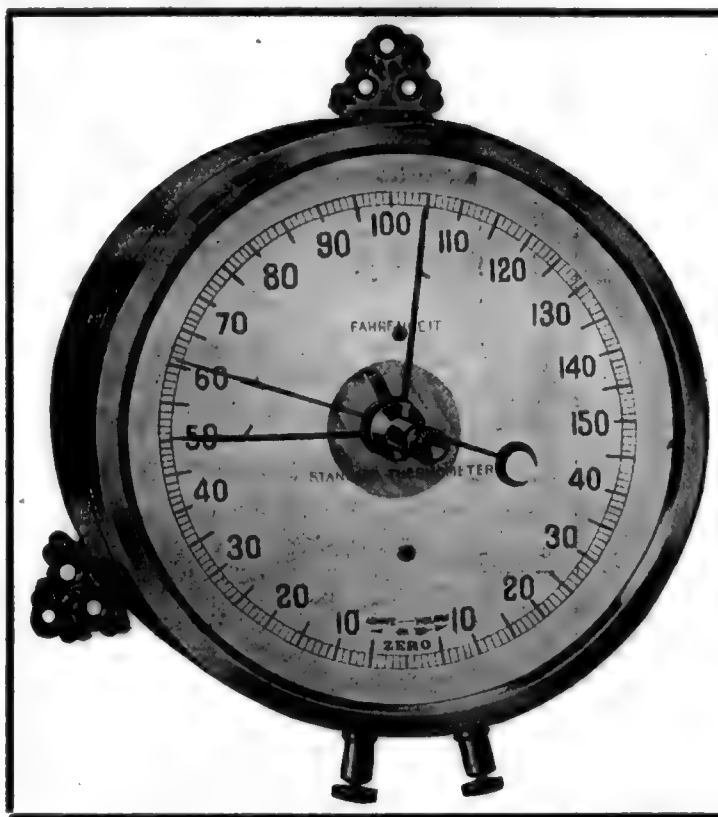
Greenhouse Heating.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have traded for a fire-box boiler, twelve feet long and forty-two inches in diameter. It has forty 3-inch flues, nine feet long, and a steam drum two feet high. The grate is 42x48 inches. Please tell me how many feet of glass this boiler will heat economically, with low pressure steam, here in northern Kentucky. Is a check valve necessary for low pressure steam? G. O. K.

Such a boiler should be able to handle about 18,000 square feet of expansion on a 50-degree basis. The boiler has surface enough to provide steam for about 2,500 square feet of radiation, and this should maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in your climate in about 18,000 square feet of exposure, figuring roof, ends and sides exposed. If the water line of the boiler is four feet or more below the radiating pipes in the greenhouses, check valves will not be necessary. I prefer to install them, however, in most plants, unless a water leg is used to seal the boiler. L. C. C.



WRONG LOCATION OF FLOW.

As we are having some difficulty with our heating plant, I beg to ask you for information as to what you think is wrong with it. Our greenhouses are built on a slope and we have one house running north and south, which is 125 feet long. Our boiler is situated in the south end, which is five feet lower than the north end of the greenhouse. The steam is carried to the top end through a 3½-inch pipe, which supplies the return pipes from the north end of the greenhouses. There are sixteen 1¼-inch heating pipes in this house, 25x125 feet. The steam which condenses in this main pipe, which is 125 feet long, has to run back to the boiler through the main. Now, where our trouble lies is this: When we carry four or five pounds of steam, water seems to disappear from the boiler and it seems to force up in the pipes at the highest point in the greenhouses.

Do you think this 3½-inch main is large enough to feed sixteen 1¼-inch returns, and do you think that, with the high pressure of steam—that is to say, five or six pounds—the water will run back through the main against the steam? I am located in Alberta, Canada.

T. W.

The trouble with your plant is in the location of the main supply pipe. This pipe should, for steam, be located in the highest possible place in the system. If you will remove it from beneath the bench and place it under the ridge of the house you will have no difficulty, provided the returns under the benches are at least three feet above the water level in the boiler. If you change the location of the flow pipe, grade it so that the condensed water will flow through the system with the steam. Put the highest point in the flow pipe at the south end of the house instead of at the north. The 3½-inch flow pipe is larger than necessary for sixteen 1¼-inch returns. A 2½-inch flow will do the work. With the changes suggested, you should be able to use up to fifteen pounds of pressure with safety. The higher temperatures make the plant considerably more effective and can often be used during cold snaps with great satisfaction. L. C. C.

The Market.

Business was nothing to brag about last week. Somehow there was no demand, and even the best grades of stock went begging. Stock was not overplentiful, and if it were not for that fact we would have a good sized glut on. One thing is certain, and that is that the average price of roses this year is not up to that of last year, as far as this market is concerned. Last year at this time stock was selling out at good prices and the market was cleared out every day. Now it is just the reverse, and under these conditions we cannot expect prices to average very high.

There is quite a variety of stock coming in now. Fine roses and carnations are to be had in almost any quantities. There are fine Beauties also. Violets, which have been in strong demand right along, are now coming in such quantities

Our boiler is situated in the south end, which is five feet lower than the north end of the greenhouse. The steam is carried to the top end through a 3½ inch pipe, which supplies the return pipes from the north end of the greenhouses. There are sixteen 1¼-inch heating pipes in this house, 25x125 feet. The steam which condenses in this main pipe, which is 125 feet long, has to run back to the boiler through the main. Now, where our trouble lies is this: When we carry four or five pounds of steam, water seems to disappear from the boiler and it seems to force up in the pipes at the highest point in the greenhouses.

Do you think this 3½ inch main is large enough to feed sixteen 1¼-inch returns, and do you think that, with the high pressure of steam—that is to say, five or six pounds—the water will run back through the main against the steam? I am located in Alberta, Canada.

The trouble with your plant is in the location of the main supply pipe. This pipe should, for steam, be located in the highest possible place in the system. If you will remove it from beneath the bench and place it under the ridge of the house you will have no difficulty, provided the returns under the benches are at least three feet above the water
